Gaillard Thomas

THEODORE GAILLARD THOMAS, M. D.—1852.

Dr. Theodore Gaillard Thomas was born on Edisto Island, near Charleston, South Carolina, November 21, 1831, and died at Thomasville, Georgia, February 28, 1903. His father, Edward Thomas, a widely known clergyman, was the author of "Thomas' Sermons," as they were popularly known throughout the south. The founder of the family in America was the Rev. Samuel Thomas, sent over from England in 1701 to establish branches of his denomination in the new world. As a conservative, he was known through life as of tory proclivities, and in every regard as a consistent Episcopalian. On the maternal side the lineage is traced to Theodore Gaillard, a French Huguenot who came to South Carolina upon the revocation of the Edict of Nantes, and left an impress upon the community in which he passed the remnant of his days.

Amid surroundings thus beneficently complex, in which the aesthetic was a feature and application to study a duty, this son of buoyant temperament soon became an enthusiast with not much of the grace of moderation. He was noted, too, for his earnestness and fervor of research. Helpful and inspiring to others, with spirits almost jocund, he was delightfully companionable. Against him there never was a charge of half-heartedness or insincerity. Of these traits it may be said that there was not at all a mellowing, much less a sombre tint. Always approachable and affable, without the suspicion of diplomacy, he was continually winning new friends, some grateful, but all admirers.

His course completed in 1852, as a first honor man in the Charleston Medical College, Dr. Thomas became an interne of Bellevue Hospital, New York city, then of the Obstetrical Hospital, Dublin, and afterward a Paris student. Equipped with these more ordinary advantages, he finally settled in New York, fortified against public losses, for as he himself intimated on the recent occasion of the seventieth anniversary of his birth, he had not much more in his keeping than usually falls to "the lot of the clergyman's son." Optimistic, and working for work's sake along with Dr. William R. Donaghe as an associate, with almost instant success, he became a lecturer in the New York University Medical College. His direct statements and apt illustrations were captivating, and his deductions final. He was a master of cadenced sentences, somewhat of a colorist whose "art was to conceal art," and yet honest withal, and always converging to a focus. There were full benches and eager listeners. The hour seemed short, but the topics suggested by the blackboard analyses and the weird wonder of nature's mechanics abided long with the dissolving crowd. That the speaker was classical in his method was the faintest of the eulogies that echoed around. Thus his sincerity and loyalty to the essentials of his subject made his old pupils claim him as of the gentle sort taught the ways of living worthy of the opportunity. He came to teach, he said, and must fulfill his mission. There were no other but no stronger words meant what they implied and fell into an easy symmetry, all in the old Saxon, which recalled the cooling draughts at a way-side inn. He could speak diagrams as deftly as Dalton could draw. Besides, as a diagnostician he was most logical and an eliminator of fallacies. He trimmed well, and the tree could not fail of bearing fruit.

As a student of the economies of time Dr. Thomas complained only of doubts regarding the most profiting uses. But these self-accusations had no weight with others; the fact remained that with him indolence was impossible. All of the pupils belonging to this well known "quiz" of Thomas and Donaghe still working in medicine, bear most cheerful testimony that both appreciated their responsibilities.

Beginning as a lecturer on general medicine, which he supplemented with clinical work in the Demilt Dispensary, notably in the dermatological class on alternate days, Dr. Thomas soon became a summer lecturer in the New York University, and from 1855 to 1860 the lecturer on obstetrics in the same institution. In 1863 he was appointed adjunct professor of obstetrics and the diseases of women and children in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, and in 1865 became full professor. This position he held till 1879, when he resigned; he was succeeded by Dr. J. W. McLane. He took the chair of professor of gynecology; this he held until 1881, when he gave up the didactic part of the chair and became professor of clinical gynecology, which he retained until 1890; he then resigned and became emeritus professor of obstetrics and gynecology. Dr. Thomas devoted himself to gynecology, and improved its instruments and in many instances its technique. During this epoch of his career, he also published a treatise on the diseases of women, which as a standard attained the honor of a translation into French, German, Italian, Spanish and Chinese.

Dr. Thomas demonstrated his professional ability in many ways as both hospital physician and surgeon in the Woman's, Bellevue, St. Luke's, and Roosevelt hospitals, besides having held the position of consulting surgeon to the Women's, French, Presbyterian, Cancer, Long Island and other hospitals. He also founded a private sanitarium, equipped with every device for those needing the constant attention of faithful attendants.

Besides a membership in many medical societies in this country, Dr. Thomas received honorary distinctions from London, Edinburg, Berlin and not a few other European cities. As an operator of rare judgment his skill could not be gainsaid, nor his prognoses derided, for he was never without a reason for his faith. He was frequently heard upon the platform on anniversary occasions, when his subject matter became an interesting historical feature, throwing side-lights upon the methods of the immediate past. As a phenomenal worker with almost unfailing resource, he had an unchallenged reputation among his colleagues, but above all he was proud of what he defined as undeserved attachment.

The evening of November 21, 1901, was memorable for its goodly company at Sherry's, where out of the three hundred present many were jealous to honor Dr. Thomas with just a brief tribute, for time could not afford precedence to any. Dr. James Woods McLane, who presided as the most graceful of toastmasters, was witty and genial. Rev. Dr. David H. Greer and Rev. Dr. George R. Van De Water representing the clergy, Judge Henry Howland the law, Dr. S. Weir Mitchell of Philadelphia, now a stroller in the paths of literature, Dr. William H. Welch, once of New York, but later of Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, and Dr. George B. Shattuck of Boston, were the speakers of the occasion and well honored the same. An interesting incident besides the verdict that Dr. Thomas was an orator and could ride a horse well, was a congratulation from Dr. John T. Metcalfe, since deceased, once the sponsor of the chief guest and always his cherished confidant. The message from a winter home in Georgia was to the effect that Dr. Thomas was "zealous as an associate, faithful as a friend * * * and had unfailingly sought to repay a debt that was never due, by the devoted affection of a son."

Dr. Thomas, a lover of nature in all its moods, some thirty-nine years ago, while on a wagon journey through Long Island in company with his wife, became especially pleased with the Southampton region, with its crisp, bracing air, its sand-hills and its dales. As an artist lost in a picture, he admired the long wide roads, the quaint old farmhouses, moss-covered and redolent with tradition of the past. He was captivated by the bronzed, white-haired "captains" of the sleepy hamlet, whose jargon was all of the sea and recalled the beaches of his native islet further south, where were also rollickers in the surf. All this the visitor thought, but without confession. As never before he saw the fleecy clouds shaping as shepherds leading their flocks, the hosts crossing the Red Sea, with wrecked chariots in their rear, and Moses in a golden sunset on Sinai's top all this dissolving into a misty and awesome horizon. These marine charms overcame him and tempted him to a future possession with the most sincere of vows. Then some twenty-five years ago he felt equal to the realization of his hopes, and bought land, upon which, as an outsider, he built the first summer residence during the past half century. Here Dr. Thomas was wont to spend his summer with the added honor of the founder of a realm in Arcadia, where millions were invested in over two-hundred cottages, all in a place where head money was wont to be paid for roaming wolves, and where all the young men earned their livelihood by whaling, taking their ships from Sag Harbor ten miles distant.

In 1862 Dr. Thomas married Mary Theodosia Willard of Troy, New York, the grand-daughter of Mrs. Emma Willard, the founder of the Female Seminary of that city, and the author of a "History of the United States." Mrs. Thomas is a direct descendant of Thomas Hooker, author of the constitution of Connecticut, which Thomas Jefferson followed in the preparation of the constitution of the United States.

ALBERT EVERT GALLANT, M. D.—1890.

Dr. Albert Evert Gallant was born June 27, 1861, in Sudbury, England, and is the son of Walter and Sarah (Horsely) Gallant. The former, who is a surgeon, is now a resident of Paterson, New Jersey, having emigrated to this country in 1871, during the childhood of his son, who received his early education in the grammar schools of Honesdale, Pennsylvania, and Paterson, New Jersey, and under the tutorship of Professor Eugene C. MacChesney. In 1885 Dr. Gallant began the study of medicine under the instruction of Dr. E. S. McClellan, and in 1887 entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he graduated, June 11, 1890, with the degree of Doctor of Medicine.

During the year 1891 he served as interne in St. Joseph's Hospital, Paterson, New Jersey, resigning April 1st to enter the Sloane Maternity Hospital, and during 1892 was in the General Memorial (Cancer) Hospital of New York. In 1894-5 he was assistant surgeon to the Lebanon Hospital, and from 1900 to 1902 held the position of gynecologist in the Metropolitan and the McDonough Memorial Hospitals. In 1900-1 he was assistant attending physician to the Mothers' and Babies' Hospital, and from 1893 to 1903 was connected with the out-patient department of the Roosevelt Hospital. From 1894 to 1896 he was instructor in surgery in the New York Post-Graduate Medical School, and from 1897 to 1899 held a similar position in the New York Polyclinic Medical School. In 1901 he was elected professor of gynecology in the New York School of Clinical Medicine, from 1893 to 1903 was connected with the Northern Dispensary, and from 1900 to 1903 served in the East Side German Dispensary. In 1893-5 he was lecturer to the Society for Instruction in First Aid to the Injured, and since 1896 has held the office of examiner of that organization. In 1898, during the Spanish-American war, he was medical director of the Woman's National War Relief Association, and held the same office in the Soldiers' Comfort Committee of the Board of Trade and Transportation of New York.

Dr. Gallant is vice-president of the New York School of Clinical Medicine, and has been, since 1891, a member of the New York County Medical Society; since 1893, of the New York County Medical Association; since 1894, of the New York Academy of Medicine and the American Medical Association; since 1898, of the Harlem Medical Association; and was, from 1898 to 1902, a member of the Eastern Medical Society. Since 1900 he has been connected with the New York State Medical Association; since 1898, with the Society of the Alumni of the Sloane Maternity Hospital; since 1901, with the Physicians' Mutual Aid Association; and since 1902, with the Society of Medical Jurisprudence and the American Urological Association. Dr. Gallant married, January 3, 1895, at Paterson, New Jersey, Eudora Milroy Elliott Burkett, formerly of Port Townsend, Washington. His address is 60 West Fifty-sixth street, New York.

Dr. Gallant is the author of numerous articles on surgical subjects, notable among which are: "Sprains: A report on 1,231 recent cases treated by Massage," Medical Notes, April 20, 1895; "Massage in the Treatment of

Ernest Gallau

Post-operative Intestinal Obstruction," July, 1896; "Castor-oil and Balsam Peru as a Surgical Dressing; a Report on Over 29,000 Cases," Annals of Surgery, September, 1897; "Van Arsdale's Triangular Splint in Thirty-three Cases of Fracture of the Femur in Children Under Six Years," Journal American Medical Association, 1897; "Etherization; the Means Whereby the Quantity Was Reduced from 1,000 to 100 Grams per Hour; with Especial Reference to the Position of the Head as Affecting Respiration," Medical Record, December 30, 1899; "A Case of Inguinal Hernia of Large Size; Cure Following an Unusual Method of Operation," Medical News, February 26, 1898; "Fracture of the Clavicle in Children; a Study of 200 Cases," Journal American Medical Association, 1898; "The Corset for Movable Kidney," American Journal of Obstetrics, Vol. 44, 1901; "Roser's Dorsal Splint in the Treatment of Two Hundred Twenty-three Cases of Fracture of the Lower End of the Radius," New York Medical Journal, Vol. 74, 1901; "Tripartition in the Study of the Female Pelvis," New York Medical Journal, March, 1902; "The Etiology of Puerperal Toxemia," Medical News, May, 1902; "An Encephalic, Hemisoid Monster," American Journal of Obstetrics, July, 1902; "A New Bivalve Uterine Drain for the Treatment of Uterine Retention and Sterility," Medical Record, November, 1902; "The Rational Treatment of Movable Kidney and Associated Ptoses," Therapeutic Gazette, July, 1902; "My Kidney; the Nephroptosis Lament," International Journal of Surgery, January, 1903; "Measuring, Fitting and Putting on the Corset for Movable Kidney or Glenard's Disease," International Journal of Surgery, February, 1903. Dr. Gallant is also author of a monograph entitled, "Diseases of the Female Bladder and Urethra," published in Wood's Reference Handbook of the Medical Sciences, 1900.

FRANK EDWIN BECKWITH, M. D.—1871.

Frank Edwin Beckwith, M. D., son of Elisha W. and Hannah A. (Murray) Beckwith, was born in Norwich, Connecticut. His ancestors were of English and Scotch extraction, who had settled in New England at an early date, and had become a part of her individual history.

Dr. Beckwith was educated at the Norwich Free Academy and at the New York College of Physicians and Surgeons, where he obtained the degree of M. D. in 1871. His position as interne at a nursery and children's hospital gave him much experience in the diseases incident to childhood. During the first years of his medical life, he gave especial attention to the study of many subjects that interested him, and attained such a degree of proficiency in a special line that in 1881 he was called to New Haven, Connecticut, as professor of obstetrics and diseases of children, in the medical department of Yale University, where he remained for several years. He was also connected with hospital work, serving as first attending physician in the New Haven Hospital, and later as attending gynecologist in the same hospital. On his resignation of this position he was appointed consulting physician, and still acts in this capacity.

He belongs to the New York Academy of Medicine, the County and State Medical Society, the New Haven Medical Association, the International Association of Gynecology and Obstetrics and the British Gynecological Association. He has spent much time in foreign travel, which has broadened his personal outlook, and has also been a source of pleasure and recreation. He is a well known Alpine climber. He was married in 1881 to Rachel B. Hunter, of New York; her death occurred in 1894.

FREDERIC EWALD SONDERN, M. D.—1889.

Dr. Frederic Ewald Sonderm was born March 30, 1867, in Stuttgart, Germany, and is the son of Caspar Friedrich and Auguste Sophie (Bever) Sonderm, both of Barmen, Germany, which was the home of their ancestors. Dr. Sonderm, in infancy, was brought by his parents to New York, and received his early education in the public schools of that city, from which he graduated in 1883. During the next two years he studied abroad under private tutors, and on his return to this country matriculated at the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, graduating in 1889 as a Doctor of Medicine. After serving for two years on the house staff of the German Hospital of New York, he began private practice at 36 West Thirty-third street, in that city. In 1893 he removed to 36 West Thirty-eighth street, and in 1895 to his present address, at 200 West Fifty-sixth street. From 1893 to 1898 he filled the position of clinical assistant in the Vanderbilt Clinic, and is now clinical pathologist to Roosevelt Hospital and director of the clinical laboratory of the Lying-In Hospital. Since beginning private practice, in 1891, he has devoted his time chiefly to clinical laboratory work, and is the author of a number of articles on subjects concerning laboratory investigations, which have been published at different times in the medical journals.

Dr. Sonderm is a member of the New York Academy of Medicine and the Pathological Society. He belongs to the Theta Delta Chi fraternity, the Scawanhaka-Corinthian Yacht Club, and the New York Athletic Club. Dr. Sonderm was married, April 30, 1895, in the Brick Presbyterian church, New York, to Elsa M. Ottmann. They have two children: Gertrude F., born May 20, 1897, and Elsa M., born July 4, 1899.

ERVIN ALDEN TUCKER, B. S., A. M., M. D.—1889.

The late Dr. Ervin Alden Tucker was born February 2, 1862, at Attleboro, Massachusetts. His parents were Almon H. and Lydia Harriet (Sweet) Tucker. His paternal ancestry can be traced back to Robert Tucker, of Weymouth, Massachusetts (1635), who was a direct descendant of William Tucker, of Thornley, Devon county, England, to whom were granted, in 1070, the original Tucker arms. It is interesting, in view of Dr. Tucker's dauntless courage during the years of struggle for an education, to note that the family motto adopted in those early days was "Nil desperandum."

His early education was obtained in the common schools of Attleboro, Massachusetts, and he was prepared for college in Mowry and Goff's Classical School, Providence, Rhode Island. In 1881 he entered Amherst College, where he followed the scientific course in preference to the classical in order to devote more time to the sciences and modern languages, which he knew would be useful later, as he had, long before entering college, resolved to become a physician. His devotion to the languages was such that a prize for scholarship in French, Italian and Spanish was given him at the end of the junior year. He was graduated from Amherst in 1885 with the degree of Bachelor of Science, and in 1888 received the degree of Master of Arts from the same college.

The year 1885-86 was spent in Stamford, Connecticut, in teaching modern languages in Bett's Academy, and reading medicine under the direction of Dr. A. M. Hurlburt. Then he spent three years in medical study in the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York city—two years under the preceptorship of the late Professor H. B. Sands, and one year under that of Professor George S. Huntington. He graduated in 1889 as one of the "ten honor men" in a class of one hundred and sixty-six, and took the second Harsen prize of three hundred dollars for "proficiency in all the branches of medical teaching."

For six months after graduating he was assistant resident physician in the Nursery and Child's Hospital, New York city. In December, 1889, he went to Germany. After "polishing up" his German in Goettingen, he devoted all his time to obstetrics, spending one semester in Berlin under the instruction of Olshausen, Winter and Duehrssen, and another in the Frauenklinik in Munich under the instruction of Winckel. His holidays were spent in visiting the maternity hospitals in Leipsic, Dresden, Prague, Vienna and Paris.

In the spring of 1890 he was notified that he had been appointed instructor in practical obstetrics in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, and resident physician in the Sloane Maternity Hospital, New York city. In December he returned from abroad to enter upon the duties imposed by these positions. From 1890 to 1895 he had the satisfaction of seeing the service increase from about four hundred to over nine hundred confinements a year, thus making the Sloane Maternity the largest obstetric hospital in this country. It is not too much to say that Dr. Tucker contributed in no small measure to this remarkable growth. Under his watchful eye, keen to detect the slightest error or the most trivial omission, the histories of the cases became masterpieces of accuracy and completeness; while the members of the staff received an obstetric training never surpassed in a similar hospital service. He devised and introduced many improvements in technique, notably the "cephalic," rather than the pelvic method of applying the forceps blades, first introducing both blades along the posterior vaginal wall and then rotating whichever blade was needed to secure the accurate application of the instrument. Of this invention he was justly proud, and at the time of his death was planning the publication of a careful description of the method.

In July, 1895, he resigned the position of resident physician at the Sloane Maternity Hospital to enter upon the private practice of obstetrics as a specialty. He was the first man in New York city to devote himself exclusively to this branch of medicine. At this time Dr. Tucker was appointed assistant attending physician to the Sloane Maternity Hospital, and tutor in obstetrics and gynecology in the new four years' course which was then being established in the College of Physicians and Surgeons. Both these positions he held for five years, resigning in 1900, when his increasing private practice demanded all his energies.

His success was assured from the start. The respect which his career in the medical college and at the hospital had commanded among the leaders of the medical profession, the enthusiastic admiration and good will which he had won among the large number of internes, nurses and students receiving instruction at his hands, all proved powerful aids to him in his chosen field; while the skill he had acquired as an operator and his own inherent powers make it certain that he would soon take his place among the foremost physicians of the city. Prominent practitioners soon began to enlist his services in attending to the obstetric needs of their wealthy patients.

He had the swift, sure judgment that comes with long experience and well thought-out methods. His detail was perfect, and whether working in the wards, or bringing an heir to millions into the world, his work was performed in that same thorough, careful and successful way. To see him work was to realize that he was an artist of the highest scientific type, and of all the women under his care for both their pregnancy and confinement he never lost a patient.

Death came upon Dr. Tucker just as he had planted his feet firmly upon the threshold of a great career. He had achieved success through the sheer force of his own magnificent ability, and at last there seemed nothing to prevent the realization of his highest hopes. He was a man whom the medical profession could ill spare.

Dr. Tucker was a member of the New York Academy of Medicine, the New York Obstetrical Society, the Hospital Graduates' Club, the New York County Medical Society, the West End Medical Society, and the Society of the Alumni of the Sloane Maternity Hospital, of which he was a charter member, and the first president. Among the many published articles by Dr. Tucker may be mentioned especially that on the "Birth of the Secundines," which was awarded the Stevens Triennial prize in 1897.

His death occurred March 3, 1902. The following resolutions were adopted and conveyed to his bereaved family as a token of sympathy, appreciation and consolation by the members of the New York Obstetrical Society:

Whereas, An inscrutable Providence has removed from our fellowship an honored member, Ervin Alden Tucker, A. M., M. D., suddenly, in his prime, with only the first sheaf of life's harvest garnered; and

Whereas, The Fellows of the New York Obstetrical Society, from long association, have grown into a knowledge of his rare qualities and exceptional equipment for the high sphere of usefulness he had made for himself in his profession; and

Whereas, As members of his own guild and calling, thereby entering into a juster appraisalment of his skill and capacity, the Fellows of the New York Obstetrical Society especially esteem their departed brother for his unusually long, painfully laborious, and self-contained preparation in the hospital wards; his tireless fidelity as observer and statistician; his methodical evolution of a technique in obstetrics, his soundness and directness as a teacher, carrying his formative influence, through medical graduates of the last decade, to bed-sides far beyond his personal ken; his kindly, active, almost paternal interest in each individual of the large family of medical men he himself selected from the city hospitals and trained as obstetricians; his cohesive power in holding the hospital alumni in fraternal bond; his quiet, self-poised "yea" and "nay," which inspired in patients a merited confidence, marvelously rooted; his clean life; his high conception of the responsibility and dignity of the holy office of ministrant at the threshold of life;

Therefore be it Resolved, That the Fellows of the New York Obstetrical Society spread upon their records their pride in the fame of their honored Fellow, their appreciation not only of his individual work but also of the spiritual power of his completed and crystallized life lesson, which will ever be a stimulus to younger men in the profession.

Dr. Tucker married, April, 1893, Miss George Anna Crispell, of Rondout, New York.

FREEMAN JOSIAH BUMSTEAD, M. D.

Freeman Josiah Bumstead, M. D., LL. D., professor from 1867 to 1871 in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, the medical department of Columbia, was born in Boston, April 21, 1826. He was a graduate of Williams College, class of 1847, and having completed the regular course at the Harvard Medical School in 1851, he concluded his studies in Paris. Entering upon the practice of his profession in New York city in 1852, he soon acquired a high reputation as a specialist, and for some time was a regular surgeon at the Charity Hospital on Blackwell's Island, the New York Eye and Ear Infirmary, and the Strangers' Hospital. During the years 1866 and 1867 he lectured on materia medica at the College of Physicians and Surgeons and was clinical professor of venereal diseases there from the latter year till 1871.

Professor Bumstead died in New York, November 28, 1879. He belonged to various medical societies, was chosen vice-president of the Torrey Botanical Club in 1875, and a few months prior to his death he received the degree of Doctor of Laws from Williams College. His contributions to medical literature include a translation of Ricord's notes to Hunter's Treatise on Venereal Diseases; Cullerier's Atlas of Venereal Diseases; and the Pathology and Treatment of same.

EDGAR MARTINDALE HERMANCÉ, M. D.—1878.

Dr. Edgar Martindale Hermance was born January 19, 1854, in New York city, and is the son of John P. and Sarah F. Hermance. The former is a clergyman of the Methodist Episcopal church, and the family is of ancient Dutch origin. Dr. Hermance received his preparatory education in the public schools of New York city, and in 1874 graduated from the Wesleyan University. He then entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he received, in 1878, the degree of Doctor of Medicine.

After graduation he served for one year as interne in the Nursery and Child's Hospital, and since 1879 has been engaged in the private practice of his profession in Yonkers. He was for six years attending physician to St. John's Riverside Hospital, in 1890 was appointed visiting physician to St. Joseph's Hospital, and is now consulting physician to that institution. He was for five years president of the board of health, and for the same length of time a member of the board of education. He is much interested in educational and literary matters, and is now a member of the public library board. Dr. Hermance is a member of the New York Academy of Medicine and the New York State Medical Society. He finds his favorite means of diversion in the game of golf. He is a member of the Presbyterian church, and resides at 217 Warburton avenue, Yonkers.

EMIL GRUENING, M. D.—1867.

Dr. Emil Gruening was born October 2, 1842, in Inowracław, Prussia. His father was a merchant, and was able to extend to his son more than ordinary educational advantages. His literary studies were pursued in the academy and college of his native place. In 1862 he came to America and after obtaining a knowledge of the English language, in 1864 entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons, and began the study of medicine. In 1865, while pursuing his medical studies, being stirred by patriotic enthusiasm, he enlisted in the Seventh Regiment, New Jersey Volunteer Infantry, and participated in the battle of Hatcher's Run, the siege of Petersburg and pursuit of and surrender of General Lee. He was mustered out in August, 1865, and returned to the College of Physicians and Surgeons, from which he was graduated in 1867. Having decided to pursue his post-graduate studies abroad, he visited London and Paris, but remained in Berlin three years, applying himself diligently under the direction of the celebrated Dr. Von Graefe.

Thus equipped with more than ordinary advantages, in 1870 he returned to New York. Enthusiastically in love with his profession, and with the valuable experience he obtained abroad, his success was assured. He was soon able to demonstrate his professional ability in the Ophthalmic and Aural Institute, to which he was appointed assistant surgeon in 1870. In 1878 he was appointed ophthalmic surgeon to the New York Eye and Ear Infirmary, in 1879 ophthalmic and aural surgeon to Mt. Sinai Hospital, and in 1880 ophthalmic and aural surgeon to the German Hospital. These positions he has filled continually since the dates of his appointments. He is also consulting surgeon to the New York Infirmary for Women and Children. In his specialties of ophthalmology and otology, Dr. Gruening has attained a high reputation among his colleagues as well as in the community, and in the latter branch his practical efforts have modified the method of operation of the mastoid process.

E. Greening

Among his literary contributions, the most noticeable in chronological order are the following: "Congenital Coloboma of the Eyelids" (with a case), Archives of Medicine, 1880; "A Quinine Amaurosis" (with a case), Archives of Ophthalmology, Vol. 1, 1881; "On the Parasitic Nature of Tonsillar and Pharyngeal Concreativis," Archives on Laryngology, Vol. III, No. 2, 1881; "Reflex Ocular Symptoms in Nasal Affections," The Medical Record, January 30, 1886; "Iridectomy in Glaucoma," Transactions Ophthalmological Society, 1889; "On the Use of Platinum Instruments in Ophthalmic Surgery," Archives of Ophthalmology, Vol. 20, No. 2, 1891; "On the Operative Treatment of Divergent Strabismus," New York Medical Journal, March 12, 1892; "Notes on Operations Upon the Mastoid Process," New York Medical Journal, January 2, 1892; "A Case of Sarcoma of the Choroid and a Case of Spindle-celled Sarcoma of the Lid," Proceedings of American Ophthalmological Society, 1893; "A Case of Optic Brain Abscess in a Boy of Five Years; Operation. Recovery," International Contributions to Medical Literature, Festschrift in honor of A. Jacobi to commemorate the seventieth anniversary of his birth.

Dr. Gruening is a member of the New York Academy of Medicine, the County Medical Society, the New York Ophthalmological Society, the New York Otological Society and the German Medical Society. He is also a member of the New York Society for the Relief of Widows and Orphans of Medical Men; of the Physicians' Mutual Aid Association and of the Deutscher Verein. Active in his chosen department of work he yet finds time for attention to the interests of his profession and the responsible public charities.

From 1882 to 1895 Dr. Gruening acted as professor of ophthalmology in the New York Polyclinic. He was married in 1874 to Miss Rose Friedenberg, of New York. She died in 1876, survived by one child, Rose. In 1880 Dr. Gruening was married to Phoebe Friedenberg. They have four children, Clara, Mary, Ernest and Martha. His present address is 36 East Fifty-seventh street, New York.

ALEXANDER DUANE, A. B., M. D.—1881.

Dr. Alexander Duane traces his ancestry back to his great-great-grandfather, Anthony Duane, who was an officer in the English navy, and subsequently took up his residence in New York city. He married Altea Keteltas. His son, James Duane, great-great-grandfather of Dr. Duane, one of the governors of Kings College and later a trustee of Columbia, was born in New York city, February 6, 1733. He acquired a large estate at Duanesburg, New York. He was one of the prominent lawyers of New York city; advocated the rights of New York to the New Hampshire grants, and prepared the papers in support of the claim of New Hampshire to an eastern boundary on the Connecticut river. He was one of the New York grantees of territory in Vermont; a member of the continental congress as long as that body existed; favored the opening of negotiations for the settlement of troubles between Great Britain and the colonies, and in 1776 at first opposed the Declaration of Independence, urging that the action should not be taken before the arrival of the royal commissioners, nor before the people had expressed a desire for a change of government. He would, however, have been one of the signers, had he not been called home to assist in forming a state government for the colony of New York. In 1783 he was elected the first mayor of New York city under the new charter, and served six years; was also a state senator from 1782 to 1785; a member of the convention that ratified the constitution in 1788, and United States district judge from 1789 to 1794. His death occurred February 1, 1797. He was united in marriage to Mary Livingston, and the line of descent is as follows: James C. Duane married Mary Ann Bowers; James Duane married Harriet Constable, and their son, James Chatham Duane, father of Dr. Duane, born in 1824, graduated at West Point in 1848, and entered the army in the corps of engineers. During the Civil war he was chief engineer of the Army of the Potomac, and served with distinction in almost every great engagement near the seaboard; he was chief of engineers of the United States army up to October, 1886, and upon his retirement from the army in June, 1888, and thereafter until his death, which occurred in November, 1897, he was president of the aqueduct commission in New York city. He married Miss Harriet W. Breverton, and the following named children were born to them: James, Harry B. and Alexander Duane.

Dr. Duane was a student at Union College, Schenectady, New York, from which institution he received the degree of Bachelor of Arts in 1878; for one year he pursued a post-graduate course at Union College, and in 1879 matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which he received the medical degree in 1881. From December, 1881, until June, 1883, he served on the medical side of the New York Hospital, acted in the capacity of house physician from December, 1882, to June, 1883, and in December, 1883, was appointed house surgeon of the first surgical division, retiring from this position in June, 1884. From 1883 to 1886 he was an assistant surgeon in the ear department of the New York Eye and Ear Infirmary; from 1890 to 1901 filled a similar position at the Ophthalmic and Aural Institute, in which he is now instructor and surgeon; from December, 1894, to September, 1895, he served as clinical assistant in the eye department of the Vanderbilt Clinic; is the ophthalmologist of the Samaritan Home, one of the attending ophthalmologists of the Randall's Island Hospital, and instructor in ophthalmology and surgeon of the eye department of the dispensary of Cornell Medical College. From the time of his graduation until June, 1887, Dr. Duane practiced in New York city and Staten Island; he then located in Norfolk, Virginia, where he practiced until October, 1889, and since that date he has resided in New York city. Since the beginning of 1887 he has confined his practice to ophthalmology and otology, upon which subjects he has written quite a number of articles.

Among his contributions on scientific subjects are: "The Scientific Life and Work of H. V. Regnault," read before the Albany Institute in 1878; "The Corpuscular Elements of the Blood," New York Medical Journal, 1881 and 1882; "Charbon and the Theory of Preventive Inoculation," New York Medical Journal, January, 1882; "An Ancient Scientist," Popu- lar Science Monthly, 1881; "Some New Tests for Insufficiency of the Ocular Muscles," New York Medical Journal, August 3, 1889; "The Modern Treatment of Strabismus," Transactions of the Medical Society of Virginia, 1890; "On the Proposed Methods of Numbering Prisms," Archives of Ophthalmology, XX, 3, 1891; "Paralysis of the Superior Rectus and Its Bearing on the Theory of Muscular Insufficiency," Archives of Ophthalmology, XXIII, April, 1894; "The Treatment of Heterophoria," Annals of Ophthalmology and Otology, July, 1894; "Permanent Central Scotoma Caused by Looking at the Sun During an Eclipse and Complicated by Unilateral Transient Revolving Hemianopsia," Archives of Ophthalmology, XXIV, 1, 1895; "The Parallax Test for Heterophoria," Archives of Ophthalmology, XXIV, 2, 1895; "Diplopia in the Periphery of the Field of Fixation and Its Bearing on the Diagnosis of Muscular Paralysis," Archives of Ophthalmology, XXIV, 4, 1895; "Significance of the Corneal Reflex in Diagnosing Posterior Polar Opacities," Ophthalmic Record, June, 1897; "Isolated Paralysis of the Ocular Muscles," Archives of Ophthalmology, XXVI, 3, 1897; "Listing's Law—What Does it Mean and What is Its Practical Value in Diagnosis?" Archives of Ophthalmology, XXVI, 4, 1897; "When and Why Shall We Operate in Insufficiencies of the Ocular Muscles?" New York Medical Journal, June 4, 18, 25, 1898; "The Nomenclature of the Ocular Movements," Ophthalmic Record, February, 1899; "Angioneurotic Oedema of the Conjunctiva," Ophthalmic Record, April, 1899; "Divergent Strabismus Cured by Correction of Myopia," Ophthalmic Record, April, 1899; "A Case of Paralysis of Divergence, Its Bearing Upon the Theory of Squint and Heterophoria," Archives of Ophthalmology, XXVIII, 3, 1899; "After-Treatment of Tenotomy," Medical News, April 28, 1900; "Two Cases of Nystagmus," Ophthalmic Record, October, 1900; "Spasmodic Action of the Oblques in Cases of Abducens Paralysis," Archives of Ophthalmology, XXIX, 5, 1900; "The Effect of Converging Prisms Upon Our Notions of Size and Distance—An Experimental Study," Ophthalmic Record, December, 1900; "What Routine Shall We Adopt in Examining the Eye Muscles?" New York Medical Journal, May 25, 1901; "A New Clinometer for Measuring Torsional Deviations of the Eye, Delimiting Paracentral Scotomata and Metamorphopsia, and Detecting Simulation of Blindness," Philadelphia Medical Journal, June 8, 1901; "Simultaneous Rupture of the Choroid and Paretic Mydriasis Without Paresis of Accommodation," Ophthalmic Record, August, 1901; "Anisometropia," Archives of Ophthalmology, XXX, 6, 1901; "The Diagnosis of Ocular Paralysis," Ophthalmic Record, December, 1901; "(1) Simultaneous Paretic Mydriasis, Subluxation of the Lens, and Rupture of the Choroid, with Marked Movement of the Retina; (2) a Peculiar Form of Persistent Pupillary Membrane," Ophthalmic Record, March, 1902; "Some Considerations on the Hygienic and Prophylactic Treatment of Myopia," New York Medical Journal, June 7, 1902; "The Treatment of Corneal Infiltrations by Iodine-Vasogen," Archives of Ophthalmology, XXXI, 5, 1902.

He has also written a number of reviews, abstracts and translations for the New York Medical Journal and the Archives of Ophthalmology, and "Instruction for Use of the Coast Signal Service Medical Outfit," published by the government in 1898. The following is a list of the books written or contributed to by Dr. Duane: Contributions to Murray's "New Dictionary of the French Language," 1879-80; contributions to Foster's "Encyclopedic Dictionary of the Medical Sciences," 1883-90; Authority on Medical Terms for Webster's "International Dictionary," 1900; one of the editors of the "Catalogue of the Sigma Phi," 1891; translator of Fuch's "Text Book of Ophthalmology," first edition 1892, second edition, 1899; author of "Students' Medical Dictionary," 1893, new edition, 1900, revised in 1902; "A New Classification of the Motor Anomalies of the Eye," prize essay of the College of Physicians and Surgeons in 1896, published in book form, 1897; "Rules for Signaling on Land and Sea," 1900, second revised edition in 1901, adopted by the navy department as the text book for use by naval militia of the United States.

Dr. Duane is a member of the New York County Medical Society, the Medical Association of the Greater New York, the Hospital Graduates' Club, the New York Academy of Medicine, the Medical Society of Virginia, the New York Ophthalmological Society, the New York Otological Society, and associate member of the American Ophthalmological Society. He is also connected with the University Club of New York city, the Sigma Phi college society, the Phi Beta Kappa Alumni Association, the Naval and Military Order of the Spanish-American War and the Naval Order of the United States. Dr. Duane was appointed lieutenant (junior grade) and signal officer in the United States navy during the Spanish-American war, serving as commanding officer of the second district of the United States coast signal service, and thus had complete charge of all the coast signal stations from Block Island to the Delaware capes. This service was improvised for use by the navy department during the war and maintained from March 23, 1898, to August, 1898, when the stations were closed; during this whole time he was in entire charge of the district, under the general orders of Captain J. N. Bartlett, United States navy superintendent of the service, headquarters at Washington, D. C. On July 14, 1891, Dr. Duane married Miss Susan W. Galt, of Norfolk, Virginia. Their children are: Alexander Galt, born June 28, 1892; Robert Livingston, born July 3, 1894; and William Richard Galt, born December 21, 1899. Dr. Duane's New York home is at 49 East Thirtieth street.

CYRUS JOHN STRONG, M. D.—1891.

Dr. Cyrus John Strong was born March 3, 1862, in Flushing, Long Island, and is the son of James and Marcia A. (Dustin) Strong. The former was one of the founders of the Drew Theological Seminary in Madison, New Jersey, where he filled, for twenty-five years, the chair of professor of Semitic languages. He was the first layman in America to receive the degree of S. T. D. The Strong family was originally English. On the maternal side Dr. Strong is descended from old New England stock, his mother being a lineal descendant of Mrs. Dustin, who was carried off to Canada by Indians during the French and Indian war.

Cyrus J. Strong

Dr. Strong was fitted for college in the Centenary Collegiate Institute at Hackettstown, New Jersey, and entered the Wesleyan University, at Middletown, Connecticut, graduating from this institution, in 1886, as Bachelor of Arts, and in 1889, as Master of Arts. He matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York in 1886, from which he received, in 1890, the degree of Doctor of Medicine; his degree dates November 4, 1890, although his name is given with the class of '91. After serving for two years as interne in Bellevue Hospital, he entered upon a career of general practice in 1893, and the same year was placed in charge of the heart and lung class in the out-patient department of Bellevue Hospital. He was appointed assistant in general medicine to the out-patient department of the New York Hospital, and was subsequently placed in charge of the department, a position which he held for two years, as well as that of assistant attending surgeon to the Metropolitan Throat and Nose Hospital in East Fifty-ninth street. In 1898 he was placed in charge of the department of physical diagnosis in the New York Polyclinic, and was also appointed assistant visiting physician to Bellevue Hospital. The former position he resigned at the end of a year, while the latter he still holds.

Dr. Strong is a member of the County Medical Society, New York State and American Medical Associations, West End Medical Society, and Society of Alumni of Bellevue Hospital. He is a member of the New York Athletic Club, and the Manuscript Society, a musical organization; his favorite modes of recreation are found in devotion to music, and in participation in outdoor sports. His New York address is 60 West Seventy-fifth street.

SMITH ELY JELLIFFE, M. D.—1889.

Dr. Smith E. Jelliffe, professor of pharmacognosy and technical microscopy in the New York College of Pharmacy, was born in New York city, October 27, 1866, the son of William Munson and Susan Emma (Kitchell) Jelliffe. William Munson Jelliffe was a descendant of Thomas Jelliffe, who came to this country from England in 1734, and settled in Southport, Connecticut. His wife also traced her origin to English ancestors, being a descendant of Robert Kitchell, who settled in Guilford, Connecticut, in 1636, and he with six or seven other gentlemen settled the town of Newark. William Munson Jelliffe was a doctor of pedagogy in the New York University, and for many years was one of the noted and prominent instructors of Brooklyn, New York.

Dr. Smith E. Jelliffe attended the Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute, from which he received the degree of Bachelor of Arts in 1896. From Columbia University he obtained the degree of Master of Arts in 1899, and Doctor of Philosophy in 1900. He matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which institution he was graduated in the class of 1889. For fifteen months he served in the capacity of interne at St. Mary's Hospital, Brooklyn, New York, after which he went to Europe and for the following fourteen months pursued his studies in general medicine and pathology, most of his time being spent in the universities of Vienna and Berlin. In 1892 he began the practice of a general practitioner in Brooklyn, New York, but three years later removed to his present address, 231 West Seventy-first street, New York city. While a resident of Brooklyn, Dr. Jelliffe served as sanitary inspector of the board of health for two and a half years, assistant pathologist in the Methodist Episcopal Hospital, and filled a similar position in the Brooklyn City Dispensary for three years. He is visiting neurologist to the New York City Hospital, clinical assistant in the department of neurology at the Vanderbilt Clinic, Columbia University, and since 1895 has filled the office of professor of pharmacognosy and technical microscopy in the New York College of Pharmacy.

Dr. Jelliffe has contributed many medical and botanical articles which have been published in the leading periodicals and journals of the day. He is a member of the American Medical Association, the American Neurological Association, the American Therapeutic Society, the American Pharmaceutical Association, the New York State Medical Association, the New York State Medical Society, the New York Neurological Society, the Medical Association of Greater New York, the New York County Medical Society and the West End Medical Society. He is also connected with the Delta Upsilon, Barnard Club, Torrey Botanical Club and the West Side Tennis Club. On December 20, 1894, Dr. Jelliffe married Helena Dewey Leeming, of Montreal, Canada, a descendant of a New England ancestry. Their children are: Sylvia Canfield, Winifred, Smith Ely, Jr., William Leeming and Helena Woodruff Jelliffe.

GEORGE AUGUSTUS PECK, M. D.—1891.

Dr. George A. Peck was born at Newtown, Connecticut, June 5, 1866, a descendant of an old New England ancestry who for five generations have resided on the same farm where Dr. Peck was born, and who have also been among the earliest settlers of Milford, New Haven and Danbury. Wooster Peck, grandfather of Dr. George A. Peck, was born in 1784, and followed agricultural pursuits in the South Center district of Newtown, Connecticut. He was identified with the Congregational church, and his political views were in favor of the Whig party. He was united in marriage to Betsey Marshall, and their children were: Elizabeth, Elliott M. and Henrietta M. Peck. Mr. Peck died April 1, 1861, survived by his wife, who passed away March 17, 1873.

Elliott M. Peck, father of Dr. George A. Peck, was born in Newtown, Connecticut, and followed farming in that town all his life. He was a man that possessed sound judgment, and his services were frequently in demand in the settlement of estates. In his early life he voted the Democratic ticket, but on the breaking out of the war of the Rebellion he joined the Republican party and ever after remained a staunch advocate of its principles, being elected to serve as representative of the town in the state legislature of 1854. Mr. Peck married Jane M. Gray, and five sons and one daughter were born to them. His death occurred November 6, 1886, at the age of sixty-six years.

Dr. George A. Peck attended the public schools of Newtown and the Newtown Academy, and subsequently commenced the study of medicine under the preceptorship of Dr. E. M. Smith of Newtown. In June, 1888, he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which institution he was graduated three years later with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. For the year following his graduation he served as interne in the Hartford General Hospital, filled a similar position for three months in the Sloane Maternity Hospital, after which he was engaged for a short period of time as interne in the New York Infant Asylum, at Mt. Vernon, and finally was appointed resident physician of that institution, in which capacity he served for one year. On January 1, 1896, Dr. Peck located in New Rochelle, New York, where he has since been engaged in general practice. He is also attending physician and surgeon to the New Rochelle Hospital.

He is a member of the New York State Medical Society, the Westchester County Medical Society, the New Rochelle Medical Society and the Alumni Society of Sloane Maternity Hospital. In his religious views he is a believer in the tenets of the Protestant Episcopal church, being a member of Trinity church. On October 11, 1899, Dr. Peck married Letitia Walter Anderson of Chester, Pennsylvania.

JOSEPH BIDLEMAN BISSELL, PH. B., M. D.—1883.

Dr. Joseph B. Bissell is the son of Dr. William and Mary (Bidleman) Bissell, the latter a native of New Jersey, the former a native of Connecticut, being a graduate of the medical department of Yale University, and now actively engaged in the practice of his profession in the state of Connecticut. On the paternal side Dr. Joseph B. Bissell is descended from good old Puritan stock and on the maternal side is a descendant of an honored English ancestry who participated in the Revolutionary war.

Dr. Joseph B. Bissell prepared for college in the seminary at Amenia,

New York, after which he pursued a scientific course of study in Yale University, from which institution he was graduated in 1879 with the degree of Bachelor of Philosophy. He then matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which he received his medical degree in 1883. After an internship of eighteen months' duration in the Charity, now City, Hospital, Dr. Bissell devoted one year more to his professional preparation, pursuing a course in Vienna. Upon his return to this country he was appointed instructor in the surgical department of the Post-Graduate and Polyclinic Medical Schools, and he also opened an office in New York city, where he soon built up a practice which has steadily increased in volume and importance with the passing years. He also is visiting surgeon to Bellevue and St. Vincent's Hospitals, New York city, and has devoted some time to the authorship of a number of articles, both medical and secular, among them being: "The Pathological Anatomy of Congenital Club Foot," presented before the Academy of Medicine; "The Relief of Prostatic Enlargement," a reprint from the New York Medical Record of November 10, 1900; and "Tetanus Following Clean Operation Wounds," presented before the New York State Medical Society, January 13, 1901.

Dr. Bissell is a member of the Academy of Medicine, the County Medical Society, the County Medical Association, the Pathological Society, the Hospital Graduates' Club, the Celtic Medical Club, the American Medical Association, the State Medical Society, the Medico-Surgical Society, the Alumni Society of the City Hospital, the State Medical Association, and he was formerly president of the Chi Phi Greek letter college fraternity. Socially he is a member of the University Club and the Manhattan Club. On November 20, 1889, Dr. Bissell married Miss Josephine Hauck, of Newark, New Jersey, and their children are: Karl, Eugenie, Joseph B., Jr., and Katherine Bissell. They reside at 15 West Fifty-eighth street, New York.

LUTHER EMMETT HOLT, M. D.—1880.

Dr. Luther Emmett Holt was born March 4, 1855, in Webster, New York, and is the son of Horace and Sabrah (Curtice) Holt. The former was a farmer in western New York. Dr. Holt is descended from New England ancestors, who were among the settlers of Connecticut and New Hampshire, and removed to western New York after the war of 1812.

The boyhood of Dr. Holt was passed on the paternal farm, his education being received at the Webster Academy and the Marion (New York) Collegiate Institute. In 1875 he received from the University of Rochester the degree of Bachelor of Arts, and in 1878 that of Master of Arts. After teaching for one year at Wellsville, New York, he began the study of medicine at Buffalo. In 1878 he entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, and in 1880 graduated, as one of the honor men, with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. After serving for eighteen months as interne in the surgical division of Bellevue Hospital, he began practice in 1881. His practice was for some years of a general character, but he gradually became more and more interested in pediatrics, to which, since 1893, he has devoted himself exclusively. From 1885 to 1892 he had charge of the county branch of the New York Infant Asylum, and for two years was attending physician to the Infants' Hospital on Randall's Island. Since 1888 he has been visiting physician to the Babies' Hospital, and since 1899 to the Foundling Hospital, while from 1895 to 1899 he held this position in the Nursery and Child's Hospital. He is consulting physician to the Hospital for the Ruptured and Crippled, the New York Orthopedic, and the Lying-in Hospital. Dr. Holt was one of the charter members of the American Pediatric Society, and its president in 1898. Largely in order to promote original research in medical science, he became one of the organizers of the Rockefeller Institution for Medical Research, and is at the present time a member of the board of directors and its secretary. In 1889 he became professor of diseases of children in the New York Polyclinic, a position which he resigned in 1901 in order to accept the chair of clinical professor of diseases of children at the College of Physicians and Surgeons. In the following year, 1902, he was advanced to the position of professor in that department.

Dr. Holt's contributions to medical literature are as follows: "True Aneurism of the Brachial Artery at Its Upper Third Cured by Compression Maintained for Ten Hours by Means of a Conical Pad; with a Resumé of the Literature on the Subject," American Journal of the Medical Sciences, April, 1882; "Glio-Sarcoma of the Cerebellum in a Child Four and a Half Years of Age," Medical Record, March 31, 1883; "Tonic Spasm of the Trapezius Muscle of Malaria Origin," New York Medical Journal, December 8, 1883; "A Successful Case of Tetanus Neonatorum Treated with Bromide of Potassium," Boston Medical and Surgical Journal, October 18, 1883; "The Symptoms and Diagnosis of Malaria in Children," American Journal of Obstetrics and Diseases of Women and Children, Vol. 16, Nos. 1-4, 1883; "Valvular Disease of the Heart: Purpura Hemorrhagica; Malarial Fever; Sub-acute Rheumatism; Complicated by Pericarditis with Effusion and this by Pneumonia, All Occurring Within a Period of Eight Months, with Ultimate Recovery," Archives of Pediatrics, June, 1884; "Two Cases of Traumatic Diaphragmatic Hernia," New York Medical Record, 1884; "Case Illustrating the Development of Scrofulosis After Vaccination in a Child Previously Healthy; Acute Broncho-pneumonia with Low Temperature," Archives of Pediatrics, March, 1884; "Gangrene of the Lung Following Primary Pleuro-pneumonia in a Child of Three," Archives of Pediatrics, February, 1885; "Does Quinine Abort Pneumonia?" New York Medical Journal, February 21, 1885; "Pneumonia in Young Children," The Medical Record, February 14, 1885; "Some Irregular Manifestations of Malaria," New York Medical Record, May 30, 1885; "Three Cases of Fracture of the Spine," Illustrative Medicine and Surgery, 1885; "Two Cases of Cardiac Disease in Children (sisters)," New York Medical Journal, January 8, 1887; "The Antiseptic Treatment of Summer Diarrhoea," New York Medical Journal, January 29, 1887; "The Non-Identity of Croupous Tonsillitis with Diphtheria," New York Medical Journal, May 8, 1886; "Cocaine

Dr. Holt is a member of the Association of American Physicians, the New York Academy of Medicine, the Clinical Society, the New York County Medical Society and the Pathological Society. Since the organization, in 1888, of the American Pediatric Society, he has been one of its members, and in 1896 held the office of president. He finds the game of golf a great source of diversion. He is a member of the Fifth Avenue Baptist church, and is interested in settlement work, being one of the board of directors of the West Side Neighborhood House. Dr. Holt married, April 28, 1886, Linda F. Mairs, of New York. They have five children: Evelyn, Horace, Calvert, Emmett and Kenneth. They reside at 14 West Fifty-fifth street, New York.

JOHN SHRADY, A. M., M. D.—1861.

John Shradý, A. M., M. D., was born March 13, 1830, on a small garden farm included within the southern precincts of the present Central Park, New York. To this quarter of Manhattan Island his grandparents retired from the lower part of the city proper, about 1822, in order to escape from one of the yellow fever epidemics. Dr. Shradý's ancestors were German, and, particularly on his father's side, had been continuous residents since about the first quarter of the eighteenth century.

His paternal grandfather was a revolutionary patriot, and his father a veteran of the war of 1812. His maternal grandfather, Frederick Beinhauer, married Sophia, the elder daughter of Dr. John William Zeiss, a Prussian military surgeon, who up to the time of his death in 1832 was a practitioner among the German residents, although he had a scholarly knowledge of the French, English and Spanish tongues.

After a private school training, where, besides the elementary rudiments, he exhibited somewhat of a taste for ornamental penmanship and map-drawing. To these within-door acquirements he added a preparatory course at the Columbia College grammar school, and in 1845 entered the college itself and was graduated therefrom four years afterwards. Not yet decided as to his future, he became clerk in a pharmacy on the east side of the city conducted by the brothers Clarkson, both alumni of the College of Physicians and Surgeons; then as assistant bookkeeper in a wholesale drug house and a compiler of credit records in one of the earlier mercantile agencies on Broadway; finally he settled upon medicine as the best suited to his inclinations. As a result of this determination he entered the office of Dr. Robert Watts, and under his tuition he remained three years, when, as the recipient of both the Harsen and the James R. Wood prizes, he received his medical degree in 1861. He opened an office in East Broadway, identified himself with a class of children's diseases in the Eastern (subsequently the Good Samaritan) Dispensary, and was virtually contented with his lot until the breaking out of the Civil war.

John Shrady.

The battle of Shiloh, Tennessee, April 6 and 7, 1862, necessitated a call for more troops inasmuch as the struggle was assuming larger proportions. The New York sanitary commission, at the request of the United States government, undertook the management of plans for recruiting physicians for what was supposed to be only an emergency. As an acting assistant surgeon under the monthly contract system, Dr. Shrady reported at Louisville, Kentucky, to the medical director of Major General Don Carlos Buell's division, then a part of the Army of the Ohio. The posts assigned to the appointee were Flat Lick and Barboursville, both in the sparsely populated sections of Kentucky. These were really mere emergent shelters for the sick rather than the wounded of the Union army, and the troops on both sides were days ahead of their rations. At Barboursville, during the raid of the Confederate General, Kirby Smith, he was returned with other captives as infantry under cavalry escort to Cumberland Gap, Tennessee, then in possession of United States forces. While at this mountain stronghold, indicating the sharp dipping boundary line of three states, he accepted the position of Surgeon of the Second East Tennessee Infantry, afterward mounted for raiding, interrupting communications and general police duties. In a country of earnest partisans on the alert for small bodies of troopers in well wooded or mountainous regions, the service was not without its perils. The penalties were often comprehensive, summary and covered up by flight. While the Battle of Stone River, or Murfreesboro, Tennessee, was in anticipation, Surgeon Shrady, among others, was detached from his regiment then on the march by order of Medical Director A. H. Thurston, on the staff of Major General W. S. Rosecrans, and assigned to service at Nashville, Tennessee. Here he converted the Morris and Stratton wholesale grocery warehouse into General Hospital No. 19, and remained its surgeon-in-charge until the first week of March, 1863. At that period of time the regimental surgeons were ordered to the field, and a corps known as Surgeons United States Volunteers was created to replace them. After his return to his command proper he participated during the month mentioned in the battles of Danville (March 24), and Somerset (March 30), both Kentucky towns of strategic importance.

Probably the most exciting experience of this medical officer was the chase after General John H. Morgan through Kentucky, Indiana and Ohio, from July 8 to July 26, 1863. This confederate leader, with five thousand cavalry and four pieces of artillery, crossed the Ohio river into Harrison county, Indiana, where at Corydon, on July 9, he defeated a small body of citizens behind brushwood entrenchments. Cheering crowds with loaded baskets of food helped to the surrender at Buffington Island. The health of a moving body of men under the best sanitary conditions gave but few inmates to the hospitals and no experience of consequence to the surgeons.

In September, 1863, Major General Burnside occupied Knoxville, Tennessee, and on the 10th of that month captured Cumberland Gap from the enemy along with two thousand prisoners and fourteen pieces of artillery. After that event on October 10th, he was present at the Blue Springs, Tennessee, affair, which, initiated by a brisk running fight of a few hours, scored a victory in favor of the Unionists without much loss to either contestants.

On November 7, 1863, just before dawn, Dr. Shrady was captured by General Joseph Wheeler's cavalry at Big Creek Gap, near Rogersville, Tennessee, along with the Seventh Ohio Cavalry, the Second Illinois Battery and his own command. The prisoners were claimed to number nearly eight hundred. He and the other officers became inmates of Libby Prison, but the medical department officers, who were merely hostages, were speedily exchanged and allowed a month's furlough to each individual. The Rogersville affair culminated in the siege of Knoxville, Tennessee, which General Longstreet prolonged from November 17 to December 4, 1863.

The beginning of the year 1864 found Surgeon Shrady in Knoxville, Tennessee, with orders to report for duty to regimental headquarters, but his command was practically non-existent owing to deaths in battle as well as absences in prison and hospital. He therefore did a share of the clerical medical inspecting and supervising work of a busy department, struggling with unclassified reports and hasty memoranda. In addition, an epidemic of smallpox was crippling military operations and driving the multitude to towns. Everywhere was room for medical heroes. At last, with many urgent matters demanding his presence in New York, he was mustered out October 8, 1864, while executive officer of the Holston United States General Hospital No. 4, Knoxville, Tennessee, by reason of expired term of regimental enlistment and during a period of gloom, for General Sherman was then mysteriously providing for his "march to the sea."

After arrival home he did duty as acting assistant surgeon of the Central Park Hospital until it was closed by orders from the medical authorities at Washington. In April, 1866, he took up his permanent residence in Harlem, then a suburban village in the present Manhattan borough of New York, practicing minor surgery in addition to general medicine, while he edited for three years the New York Medical Register under the supervision of the New York Medico-Historical Society. The latter work fostered his bias for medical biography and history. He contributed rather largely to the medical journals in the way of condensed summarization, for which his almost continuous services as secretary in various bodies, so his friends thought, well qualified him. He succeeded Dr. Austin Flint, Jr., as the first editor of the Transactions of the New York County Medical Association, but like him also resigned after a year's experience of the same heavy drafts also upon his own time.

He is a member of the American, New York State and County Medical associations, and of many leading organizations of medical, patriotic and social nature. Among his more important articles may be mentioned: "Two Hundred Years of Medicine," published in the Memorial History of the City of New York; "The Psychical Aspects of Insanity;" "The Shadow Line of Insanity;" "Medical New York in 1800;" "Signs of the Moribund Condition;" "The Genesis of Discovery;" "Temperature as an Element in Prognosis," and "The Growth of Commercialism in Medicine." Besides these short story productions, he has written a great deal anonymously under pen names occasionally, and read war papers before Grand Army posts and once a sketch entitled the "Social Life of Libby Prison" before the New York Historical Society, in which body he takes a lively interest.

Dr. Shrady was married October 24, 1860, in the St. Mark's Protestant Episcopal church, New York city, to Jenny Lockhart, a daughter of Walter and Lucinda (Dexter) Sammis, of Huntington, Long Island; Mrs. Shrady died January 15, 1884, leaving four children: Margaret Frances, wife of Mr. James Lorimer Graham; Dr. John Eliot; Dr. Arthur Melville; and Jenny Lockhart, now the wife of Mr. Walter F. Buxton.

Dr. John Eliot Shrady, who was born September 1, 1866, is related to the Sammis family of Huntington, Long Island. The original orthography in the Welsh tongue was Samways, and the clan is among the oldest settlers of that shore region, some of them having served in the Parliamentary army. His maternal grandmother was also related besides the Dexter family to the Pinckney, Ferdon and remotely to the Perry families.

Dr. J. E. Shrady is an alumnus of Princeton University, class of 1889, having been graduated as Bachelor of Science, and three years thereafter received his medical degree from the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York. After the usual service on the medical staff of the City Hospital and a transcontinental tour he associated himself in general practice with his father, besides giving some attention to diseases of the eye and ear. He is a companion of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion, second class, and also of the American, New York State and New York County associations.

Dr. Arthur Melville Shrady, the second son, was born April 14, 1869, and was graduated from the Princeton University in 1890 and from the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York, in 1893, in which year he also received his degree of A. M. He then served in the Roosevelt Hospital on the medical side, in the Sloane Maternity Hospital and then entered upon general practice in his native city. At the expiration of his interneship at the Roosevelt Hospital, he was appointed attending physician at the Seton Hospital, a position which he still occupies. As an instructor in physical diagnosis in Columbia University he was appointed in 1891.

Dr. A. M. Shrady was married to Aline B. Chaffee June 7, 1898.

GEORGE SWAN MOONEY, M. D.—1895.

Dr. George Swan Mooney was born March 3, 1870, in New York city, and is the son of James and Jane Mooney. The mother of Dr. Mooney died when the latter was but one year old, and his boyhood was passed in Toronto, Canada, where he was educated at the Weston high school and by private tuition. After completing his studies he engaged in the drug business in Toronto, and at the same time attended the Ontario College of Pharmacy, from which he received, in 1889, the degree of Graduate in Pharmacy. He then went to Yonkers, New York, where he took a position in the drug business as manager with George B. Wray.

He passed the regents' examination in order to matriculate in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he graduated in 1895 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. His expenses at the College of Pharmacy, and also at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, were paid with money saved while he was engaged in the drug business. He served for one year as interne in St. Joseph's Hospital at Yonkers, and in 1896 began practice, devoting himself to both medicine and surgery as a general practitioner. In 1899 he was appointed visiting surgeon to St. Joseph's Hospital, a position which he still holds. He is the author of a number of papers which have been read before various medical societies. Dr. Mooney is president of the Jenkins Medical Society, and a member of the Westchester County Medical Society. In religion he is a Roman Catholic. His residence is at 78 Warburton avenue, Yonkers.

CARLOS PHILLIPS TUCKER, M. D.—1849.

Carlos Phillips Tucker, son of Nathan and Polly (Phillips) Tucker, was born in Otsego county, New York, May 10, 1822. His ancestry, both lineal and collateral for several generations, was distinctively American. Dr. Tucker's boyhood days were passed in Cooperstown in his native county, where for many years Nathan Tucker, father of our subject, a thorough machinist, had charge of the Union cotton mills. He attended the Hartwick Seminary, from which he was graduated, and supplemented the education he there obtained by study in the Binghamton Academy at Binghamton, Broome county, New York, whither his father had removed and entered the wholesale grocery business.

Having decided to become a physician, the young man began his studies in the office of Dr. N. S. Davis, at Binghamton, and studied under his direction for three years. During the first winter he taught school. About 1847 Dr. Davis decided to remove to New York, and Dr. Tucker continued to study under his direction and also attended the College of Physicians and Surgeons, which was then located in Crosby street, below Prince. He was graduated from the institution in 1849. In that year the city was visited by an epidemic of the cholera and the young physician found himself, at the threshold of his career, called upon day and night to alleviate the suffering of the plague-stricken city.

Dr. Tucker continued as an assistant to Dr. Davis until the latter removed to Chicago, where he at once took a leading position in his profession. Dr. Tucker succeeded to the little practice that Dr. Davis had had, and leased the offices which he had previously occupied. He remained at that location for many years, a large part of the time as assistant to Dr. Gunn. When the latter was appointed health officer for the port of New York and located on Staten Island, Dr. Tucker succeeded to a large portion of his practice and associated himself with Dr. W. E. Vermilye. During that time he was in association with Dr. G. P. Cammon as physician and surgeon in the Northern Dispensary, and with Dr. George H. Humphreys served several years without compensation as attendant physician and surgeon to the Juvenile Asylum of the House of Reception. Upon the organization of Trinity Hospital Dr. Tucker was appointed physician and surgeon of the institution and from that time until 1900, a period of twenty-two or twenty-three years, his career was interwoven with its history.

In 1872 Dr. Tucker, following the movement of the city northward, purchased the residence at 43 West Twenty-sixth street, and has resided there since that time. During his earlier years, while residing in the ninth ward, he was implicated in local politics and at one election succeeded in causing the defeat of a board of school trustees which would have been dominated by Boss Tweed. Dr. Tucker was married to Georgiana M. Chapin, a native of Litchfield county, New York. Their only child, Georgiana Virginia, died at the age of sixteen.

LEWIS ATTERBURY CONNER, M. D.—1890.

Dr. Lewis Atterbury Conner was born in 1867, in New Albany, Indiana, and is the son of Charles H. and Catherine (Atterbury) Conner. His boyhood and youth were passed in the west, and after a course of preparatory study in Louisville, Kentucky, he entered Yale University, from which he graduated in 1887, with the degree of Bachelor of Philosophy. He then matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, receiving from that institution, in 1890, the degree of Doctor of Medicine. From July 1, 1890, to January 1, 1892, he served as interne in the New York Hospital, and for six months was connected with the Nursery and Child's Hospital. He then went abroad, and for a year and a half pursued his medical studies in Vienna and Heidelberg, giving special attention to general medicine and pathology.

Since 1894 Dr. Conner has been engaged in private practice. Since 1896 he has been attending physician to the Hudson Street Hospital, and for five years, from 1896 to 1901, filled the position of assistant pathologist to the New York Hospital. He is professor of clinical medicine in the medical college of Cornell University. He is the author of a number of articles on the subject of general medicine, which have frequently appeared in the different medical journals. Dr. Conner is a member of the New York Academy of Medicine, Medical Society of the County of New York, Society of Internal Medicine, Pathological Society, Neurological Society, Therapeutic Club and Alumni Association of New York Hospital. He married, in 1900, Emma W. Harris, of New York, and they have one daughter. Their residence is at 53 East Forty-ninth street, New York.

RICHARD GEORGE WIENER, M. D.—1878.

Dr. Richard George Wiener was born June 13, 1854, in New York city, and is the son of Solomon and Thresa (Falkenau) Wiener. In boyhood he attended the public schools of his native city, afterward becoming a student at its university, from which he received in 1875 the degree of Bachelor of Arts, and in 1878 that of Master of Arts. In the autumn of 1875 he entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, graduating in 1878, with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. While still a student he served as assistant in anatomy under Drs. Sands and Sabin, and after graduation spent a year as interne at the Colored (now the Lincoln) Hospital.

Since October 1, 1878, he has been engaged in the work of a general practitioner. He was for ten years clinical assistant to Dr. Detmold in the surgical department of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, and surgeon to the Charity Hospital six or seven years. He also instructed classes in the out-patient departments of the New York and Roosevelt Hospitals, and from 1885 to 1890 was attending surgeon to the City Hospital. He is now visiting physician to the Harlem Hospital, and consulting physician to the Sheltering Arms. He is the author of a number of monographs which have been read before the various medical societies of which he is a member.

Dr. Wiener is a member of the Academy of Medicine, New York County Medical Association, New York County Society, the Obstetrical Society, the Pathological Society, Neurological Society, German Medical Association, Manhattan Medical and Surgical Society.

He belongs to the Liederkrantz Club, is a member of the Society for Ethical Culture presided over by Professor Felix Adler, and one of the board of trustees of the school connected with the society. Dr. Wiener married, in 1884, Fannie Hirsch, of New York. They have four sons: Arthur S., now a student at Harvard University; Herbert J., at Phillips (Exeter) Academy; Ernest H., at the Hackley School; and Frank R., at the school of the Society for Ethical Culture. Dr. Wiener resides at 48 East Sixty-fifth street, New York.

JOHN MILTON MABBOTT, M. D.—1884.

Dr. John Milton Mabbott was born July 14, 1862, in Waterbury, Connecticut, and is the son of John and Catherine Benton (Homer) Mabbott. The former, who has retired from active life, is by birth and descent an Englishman. Dr. Mabbott's maternal great-grandfather was a Benton.

Dr. Mabbott was educated at the Waterbury high school, from which he graduated in 1879, and afterward engaged for two years in special study. He then entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, where he remained three years, graduating, in 1884, with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. He served for eighteen months on the house staff of St. Luke's Hospital, four months as interne in the Chambers Street Hospital, and six months as assistant in the Nursery and Child's Hospital, all of New York. In the last named institution he afterward served for three years as chief resident physician. At the expiration of that time, in 1890, he opened practice in New York, where he has since been actively engaged, chiefly in obstetrics, gynecology, and the treatment of the diseases of children. He is attending obstetrician to the New York Infant Asylum, and principal in gynecology to the out-patient department of the New York Hospital.

The contributions made by Dr. Mabbott to the literature of his profession have consisted mainly of brochures and reprints, some of which bear the following titles: "Theory and Practice of Infant Feeding," April, 1891;

J. Milton Abbott.

"Drugs in the Treatment of Summer Diarrhoea in Children," July, 1892; "The Homeopathist Who Practices Both Ways," April, 1893; "Methodical Examination of Pregnant Women in Private Practice," April, 1893; "Three Warnings of Interest to Obstetricians," April, 1896; "The Prevention of Sore Nipples," September, 1898; "Remarks on Perineorrhaphy, Chiefly in Reference to the Mechanics of Deep Sutures," April, 1900. All these articles were published in the New York Medical Journal. Dr. Mabbott is also the author of a paper entitled "Pneumogalactocoele of the Breast With an Unidentified Organism," published in American Medicine, 1902.

Dr. Mabbott is a member of the County Medical Society, the New York Academy of Medicine, the Hospital Graduates' Club, the Society of Alumni of St. Luke's Hospital, the Physicians' Mutual Aid Association, and the Medical Society of Greater New York. He is a delegate to the State Medical Society, a member of the medical committee of the Society for Instruction in First Aid to the Injured, and secretary of the committee on admissions of the New York Academy of Medicine. For one year, 1896-97, he filled the office of inspector of schools, being appointed by Mayor Strong. Dr. Mabbott married, October 30, 1895, Kate Adele Ollive, of New York. They have one child, Thomas Ollive. Dr. Mabbott's residence is at 19 Fifth avenue, New York city.

EDGAR THEODORE WEED, M. D.—1881.

Dr. Edgar T. Weed, son of Theodore and Helen (Grady) Weed, was born in Brooklyn, New York, January 1, 1858. He can trace his ancestry back on the paternal side to the early part of the seventeenth century, when they settled in Boston colony, having emigrated from England. Isaac Weed, great-grandfather of Dr. Weed, served as a lieutenant under General Israel Putnam, and was in command of a squad of thirteen men who fought off Governor Tryon until the arrival of troops at Put's Hill, near Greenwich, Connecticut, at the time of General Putnam's celebrated ride; he subsequently was lieutenant of the Light Horse Troop of Connecticut. Jacob T. Weed, grandfather of Dr. Weed, was a member of the bodyguard appointed to accompany General Lafayette upon the occasion of his second visit to the United States, in 1824. Dr. Weed's maternal grandmother was a descendant of the Adams family of Massachusetts, they being of the old colonial stock.

Dr. Weed obtained his preliminary education in the public schools of New York city; later he entered the College of the City of New York, from which institution he was graduated in 1877 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. He then matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he secured his medical degree in 1881. Immediately after his graduation he was appointed interne in Roosevelt Hospital, in which capacity he served from June, 1881, to December, 1882, after which he established an office in New York city and ever since has devoted his whole time and attention to the practice of his chosen profession, his present address being 117 West One Hundred and Twenty-first street. In 1884 he was appointed pathologist to Randall's Island Hospital, where he served for two years. During his college course he had for his preceptor Dr. R. F. Weir; he studied pathology under the personal supervision of Dr. Charles Heitzmann; he had for his quiz masters Drs. Charles Kelsey, William T. Bull and Dr. Weld, formerly superintendent of the New York Hospital. His hospital quiz master was Dr. J. E. Winters.

Dr. Weed is a member of the County Medical Society, the Harlem Medical Society, the Medico-Legal Society and the Alumni Association of Roosevelt Hospital. Socially he is a member of the Harlem Club, having filled the positions of secretary, trustee and chairman of the house and entertainment committees; the Delta Kappa Epsilon Club, the Indian Harbor Yacht Club and the Bronx Automobile Club. On October 15, 1884, Dr. Weed was united in marriage to Louise Baudelot Turrell, and one child has been born to them, Helen Elise Weed.

GEORGE A. OSTRANDER, M. D.—1858.

George A. Ostrander, M. D., was born in Brooklyn, New York, November 22, 1834, and is a descendant of two old and prominent families. His grandfather was the Rev. Stephen Ostrander, who was an eminent clergyman of his time, and who married Maria Duryea, a member of an old New York family. Their son, Abram Duryea Ostrander, married Margaret Taylor Wilson. The latter's father, Dr. Peter Wilson, was born in Scotland in 1746 and was educated at the University of Aberdeen. He came to New York city in 1763 and subsequently accepted the position of principal at the Academy in Hackensack, New Jersey. In 1775 he became interested in politics and served six years in the New Jersey legislature, being also selected to revise the constitution of that state. He was professor of Greek and Latin at Columbia College from 1789 to 1820, when he retired with a pension as a testimonial of his long service. He was the author of several Greek and Latin text books, and edited Sallust, Longinus and the Greek Testament. He died in 1825.

Thirty years later, in 1855, his grandson, George A. Ostrander, the son of Abram Duryea and Margaret Taylor (Wilson) Ostrander, after taking the preparatory course at the Columbia grammar school, had received the degree of A. B. from Columbia College. He studied medicine with Dr. Landon, and continued his study at the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York, from which he was graduated in October, 1858. In May previous to his graduation, he accepted the position of house surgeon at the Long Island College Hospital and served one year, after which he began to practice his profession in Brooklyn, New York, where he has since remained. He has made a special study of obstetrics, and this branch of medical science has been a successful feature of his work.

Dr. Ostrander is an interested member of the leading New York and Brooklyn medical organizations, among them being the American Medical Association, the New York State Medical Association, the Physicians' Mutual Aid Society, the Kings County Medical Society, the Kings County Medical Association, and the Alumni of the Physicians and Surgeons in Kings County. His present address is 61 Greene avenue, Brooklyn.

Geo. A. Osmond

SAMUEL PIERSON, M. D.—1881.

Samuel Pierson, M. D., the son of Edward and Anna Maria (Sayre) Pierson, was born at Morristown, New Jersey, March 9, 1858. His ancestors were English and were among the earliest settlers of New Jersey. All his general education was obtained at the public and private schools of Morristown, terminating at the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York, where he received his medical degree in 1881.

Dr. Pierson commenced the practice of his profession at Stamford, Connecticut, where he had received the appointment of visiting physician and surgeon to the Stamford Hospital. He has always been interested in hospital work, and a large part of his medical career has been devoted to such practice. The medical societies of which he is a member are the New York Academy of Medicine, the Connecticut State Medical Society, the Fairfield County Medical Society and the Stamford Medical Society. He was married October 14, 1887, to Carrie B. Norris, and they have three children, Samuel Norris, Norris Edward, and Richard Norris Pierson.

N. DARRELL HARVEY, M. D.—1888

N. Darrell Harvey, M. D., is a native of Nova Scotia, born in Halifax, and his parents were John H. and Frances Mary (Cochran) Harvey. He acquired an excellent English education in Nova Scotia, where he was graduated from the Halifax high school and took a two years' course in Dalhousie University. He began his professional studies in the Halifax Medical College, and after a year matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, where he completed a three years' course, and from which he was graduated in 1888 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. He was almost immediately appointed to the position of resident surgeon of the Chambers Street Hospital, New York city. He had made a special study of ophthalmology and otology, and his proficiency led to his appointment in turn to the positions of resident surgeon to the New York Eye and Ear Infirmary and the New York Orthopedic Hospital and Dispensary, of assistant surgeon to the outdoor department of the New York Eye and Ear Infirmary, and of assistant otologist to the Vanderbilt Clinic, New York city.

In 1892 Dr. Harvey relinquished practice in New York city and removed to Providence, Rhode Island, where he has since been actively engaged. In addition to the exactions of his personal practice, he occupies the position of attending ophthalmic surgeon to the Rhode Island Hospital in Providence, and to the Newport Hospital at Newport, of consulting ophthalmic surgeon to the Providence Lying-in Hospital in Providence, and consulting ophthalmologist to the Butler Hospital, Providence. During the war with Spain he served as assistant surgeon of United States volunteers, with the rank of first lieutenant, and he is at present brigade surgeon, National Guard of Rhode Island, with the rank of lieutenant colonel.

Dr. Harvey is a member of numerous professional bodies; the American Ophthalmological Society, the American Otological Society, the New England Ophthalmological Society, the Rhode Island Medical Society, the Providence Medical Society, the Newport Medical Society, the Association of Military Surgeons of the United States and the Military Service Institution. He has contributed to his profession a valuable device of his own invention in the form of a forceps and scarifier for the surgical treatment of trachoma. He read papers before the Providence Medical Association and the Washington County Medical Association on "Injuries to the Eye Ball." In religion Dr. Harvey is an Episcopalian. He is fond of outdoor pursuits, and belongs to various hunting and fishing clubs. He was married, October 24, 1900, in Washington, D. C., to Miss Mary A. Ogden, of that city. A daughter, Mary Ogden Harvey, was born of this marriage, July 23, 1901.

ROBERT DENNISTON, M. D.—1895.

Dr. Robert Denniston, of Dobbs Ferry, New York, a well known and very successful young physician, traces his descent from that bold and sturdy north of Ireland race which has supplied so important and forceful an element in our population. The founder of the Denniston family in the United States emigrated from county Longford, Ireland, in the year 1656, and settled in Little Britain, Orange county, New York. When we remember that at that time Cromwell was prosecuting his victorious campaign in Ireland, the reason of the departure of the first Denniston is not far to seek.

The grandfather of Dr. Denniston was comptroller of New York state during the Civil war, and his father is a pay director in the navy on the retired list. His mother, Emma (Dusenberry) Denniston, is descended from an old New York family, one of the members of which, Major John Dusenberry, rendered important services to the patriot cause during the Revolutionary war, and among the later generations of which have been found public-spirited citizens and enterprising officials.

Dr. Robert Denniston, son of Henry M. Denniston and Emma (Dusenberry) Denniston, was born March 19, 1870, in Erie, Pennsylvania, and passed his boyhood principally in Newburgh, New York, and in California. He received his primary education in the Hasbrouck Institute of Jersey City, New Jersey, and in the Sackett School, Oakland, California, where he was prepared for college. He entered Princeton University, from which he graduated with the degree of A. B. in 1892, and in 1895 was honored with the degree of A. M. from the same institution. Dr. Denniston appears to have entertained no doubts in regard to his choice of a calling, but to have selected without hesitation the practice of medicine, in consequence of which he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, where he had the advantage of receiving the instructions of Dr. Ellsworth Eliot, and from which he graduated in the class of 1895. He served for a time in St. John's Hospital of Yonkers, and after this enjoyed the further benefit of a year's study in Europe, spending most of the time at Heidelberg, Germany. Upon his return, he went to Dobbs Ferry and engaged in private practice, in which he met with gratifying success from the first.

Dr. Denniston was for two years president of the board of health of

Robert Denniston

Dobbs Ferry, is a member of the Westchester County Medical Society, and also of the staff of Dobbs Ferry Hospital, as well as physician to the MacKenzie School, Dobbs Ferry. The professional recognition which has been accorded to Dr. Denniston is remarkable in view of his youth and necessarily brief career, and is such as to encourage in the minds of all those acquainted with the circumstances the strongest hopes for his future success. Dr. Denniston married in New York city, June 23, 1898, Sarita Styles Wight, daughter of John G. Wight, Lit. D., Ph. D., a prominent educator and principal of the Wadleigh high school, New York city. Dr. and Mrs. Denniston are the parents of two children, Robert and Mary.

L. HOWARD MOSS, M. D.—1900.

Dr. L. Howard Moss, of Richmond Hill, Long Island, who has in a comparatively short period earned for himself a good position in the ranks of the medical profession, was born September 7, 1873, at Sandy Hill, Washington county, New York, and when four years of age was taken by his parents to Vermont, thence to Rochester, New York, and finally to Pittsburg, Pennsylvania. Before his removal to the last named city, he was a student at the Canandaigua Academy, New York, and after he became a resident of Pittsburg he attended the Western University. Deciding that the practice of medicine should be his calling, he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, being a member of the first four-year course class, which graduated in 1900.

After receiving the hospital experience so essential to a young physician as a preparation for his future career, and having also taken a special course in his studies, he went, in September, 1901, to Richmond Hill, and there entered upon the active duties of his calling. Dr. Moss has already succeeded in obtaining a favorable recognition both from patrons and his professional brethren. He is a member of the staff of Jamaica Hospital, Jamaica, Long Island.

PURDY LEANDER HITCHCOCK, M. D.—1881.

Dr. Purdy Leander Hitchcock, a well known physician and surgeon of Croton Falls, New York, was born in Westchester county, New York, September 23, 1850, a son of David Hitchcock, a native of Putnam county, New York, and a descendant from English ancestors who were among the early settlers of this country. David Hitchcock acquired his education in the common schools of his native town, and after completing his studies learned the trade of carpenter, and was engaged for a number of years in the building trade.

Purdy L. Hitchcock received an excellent rudimentary education in the schools of his native county and from private tutors. It was his desire to enter the medical profession, and he commenced his preparatory studies under the competent preceptorship of Dr. Charles Lee, of Purdy, New York, to whom he owes much of the success of his subsequent career. He then matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which he was graduated with the degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1881. Shortly after his graduation he took up hospital practice for a short time, and subsequently pursued a post-graduate course in the same college from which he received his diploma. In 1882 he located in Croton Falls, where he has now an extensive and select patronage; he has demonstrated fully his ability to successfully cope with the intricate problems that continually confront the medical practitioner.

Dr. Hitchcock is a member of the Westchester County Medical Society, the Alumni Association of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, and the New York State Medical Association. He has served in the capacity of health officer of the town of Somers for nine years, surgeon to the Croton Magnetic Iron Mines for four years, and surgeon to the Clover Hill Iron Mines as long as the company was in existence; he is chief examiner for the Equitable Life Insurance Company, the Mutual Life Insurance Company, and examiner for the Prudential Life Insurance Company. He was appointed delegate from the Westchester County Medical Society to the Dutchess County Medical Society. Fraternally Dr. Hitchcock is identified with the Royal Arcanum and the Foresters of America. He takes an active and commendable interest in all the affairs of the town, and was chosen by his fellow citizens to serve as a member of the board of education and to fill other positions of honor and trust. He takes a deep interest in the honorable and successful record made by three of his pupils. On November 29, 1884, Dr. Hitchcock married Miss A. Butcher, a lady of refinement and culture, and a daughter of the late John Butcher, of New York city. One child has been born to them, Grace A. Hitchcock.

RICHARD B. COUTANT, M. D.—1872.

Dr. Richard B. Coutant, of Tarrytown, New York, is a native of the town in which he resides, having been born there June 10, 1847. He received his preliminary education at the Irving Institute of that place, and was preparing for college when, like many other youths of that period, he was seized with a desire to enter the Union army. Abandoning the life of a student for that of a soldier, he enlisted in the Twenty-fifth New York Cavalry before he was seventeen and after two years' service in the army of the Shenandoah under General Sheridan, he was mustered out at the close of the war as first hospital steward of his regiment. The duties of his position were the means of turning his attention to the science of medicine, and he decided to make it the occupation of his life. On his retirement from the army Dr. Coutant resumed his classical and literary studies, and two years later he matriculated at the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York, from which institution he graduated in 1872. After obtaining his degree Dr. Coutant again took up his residence in Tarrytown, in which place and its vicinity he has since devoted himself to the practice of his profession.

Dr. Coutant is identified with a number of organizations, being a member of the Westchester County Medical Society, the Westchester County

A. R. Mouton

Medical Association, the New York State Medical Association, the American Medical Association, and the New York Physicians' Mutual Aid Association. He is a member of the consulting staff of the New York State Hospital, and is president and chief of staff of the Tarrytown Hospital. He is also the attending physician at Saint Faith's Home, Woody Crest and the Robin's Nest, charitable institutions located at Tarrytown. He was physician and surgeon to the Westchester County Almshouse Hospital from 1880 to 1891, and later consultant to the same. He also aided in organizing and was secretary of the United States pension examining board at Tarrytown from 1886 to 1891.

In addition to his professional interests Dr. Coutant is associated with various organizations, being president of the Tarrytown Historical Society, first vice president of the Westchester County Savings Bank, a member of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, of the Quill Club of New York, of the Bibliophile Society of Boston, of the Huguenot Society of America, and of the Ardsley Club.

HENRY RUTHERFURD OVERTON, M. D.—1889.

Dr. Henry R. Overton, of Sheepshead Bay, Brooklyn, New York, who, although not yet in the prime of life, has earned for himself the reputation of a skillful and experienced practitioner, was born October 19, 1868, in Rutherford, New Jersey, a town which derives its name from one of the oldest and most respected families of the state. At the age of eleven years Dr. Overton was brought to Brooklyn, New York, where he received his education in the public schools and in the Williston Seminary in Easthampton, Massachusetts, being classed with the graduates of 1887, but he left there at the end of 1886, having taken an "irregular" course, including most of the senior studies.

Dr. Overton's choice of a profession was made when but a child in dresses; he never could imagine himself in any other work, or even fitted for anything else but a physician, this being as much a part of himself as his head or mind. He began his preparatory studies under the competent preceptorship of Dr. John A. Ray and later matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which institution he was graduated in the class of 1889. He was unable to practice from June, the month when he graduated, until the following October 19, as he was not of age until that date. He then entered upon the active duties of his calling in Brooklyn, removed to Sheepshead Bay in 1900, but four years later changed his place of residence on account of throat trouble. In 1898 he returned to Sheepshead Bay, where he has since remained, and where the reputation he had acquired during his former sojourn in the city has been strengthened and extended.

In Dr. Overton's large and lucrative practice he has been especially successful in treating diseases of the skin and in obstetrics, never having a single death to mother or child; all babies of seven months or over being born alive and living at least forty-eight hours, even in cases where fatal deformities were present. Dr. Overton has never had a woman contract puerperal fever, and in every instance, both in labor and miscarriage, the patient has recovered without the least sign of infection and fever from sepsis. He has also had much experience in dispensary work, having been connected with the department of skin diseases of the Vanderbilt Clinic, the Brooklyn Central Dispensary, and for a number of years acted in the capacity of surgeon in the Demilt Dispensary of New York city. Dr. Overton received the appointment of health officer from the town board of Gravesend, and served as such until the town was annexed to Brooklyn.

MAURICE ENRIGHT, M. D.—1885.

Dr. Maurice Enright, a skillful and experienced physician of Brooklyn, New York, belongs to a family which has been for two generations numbered among the useful and respected citizens of the United States. James Enright, father of Dr. Maurice Enright, was born in Listowel, county Kerry, Ireland, and about 1849 emigrated to the United States, settling on a farm in Ridgefield, Connecticut. Like so many of our citizens of foreign birth, he was loyal in his adherence to the government at the time of the Civil war, and testified to his loyalty by enlisting in the Twenty-third Regiment, Connecticut Volunteers, with which he saw service in the field. Before coming to America he married Jane Murphy, a native of the same town as himself, and he was the father of eleven children, three of whom died in infancy. Those living are: Mary J., who married Charles A. Barton, of Chicago, Illinois; James, who is a general merchant at Oceanic, New Jersey; John, who is a manufacturer and lives in Brooklyn; Margaret, who became the wife of Patrick F. Breslin, of Brooklyn; Annie J., who lives at Ridgefield; Maurice; Ellen, who is a graduate of the Long Island Hospital Medical College School for Nurses, and conducts a nurses' registry in New York; and Elizabeth, who lives at Ridgefield, Connecticut. Mr. Enright died in January, 1892, at the age of seventy-two, and Mrs. Enright died in Ridgefield February 9, 1902, aged eighty years.

Maurice Enright, son of James and Jane (Murphy) Enright, was born November 18, 1862, at Ridgefield, Fairfield county, Connecticut, and received his primary education in the public schools of his native town, supplemented by a classical course under the preceptorship of the Rev. Thaddeus P. Walsh, pastor of his home parish. Having decided to devote himself to the practice of medicine, he pursued his preparatory studies under the guidance of Dr. Peter H. Lynch, of Danbury, Connecticut, subsequently matriculating in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he graduated in the class of 1885. After an internship of eighteen months in St. Catharine's Hospital in Brooklyn, serving both as house physician and house surgeon, he engaged in general practice in that city.

For a number of years Dr. Enright has devoted his attention chiefly to the treatment of tuberculosis and diseases of the heart and lungs. Since 1892 he has been visiting physician to St. Catharine's Hospital and attending physician to the Home for the Aged under the care of the Little Sisters of the Poor. From 1888 until 1896 he held the position of assistant sanitary inspector of the Brooklyn board of health. Dr. Enright has been a contributor to the literature of his profession, having published, among other things, an article entitled "Extra Uterine Pregnancy," in the Journal of Obstetrics.

Dr. Enright is a member of the Kings County Medical Society, the Associated Physicians of Greater New York, and the Alumni Association of St. Catharine's Hospital, of which he is president. He and his family are members of St. John the Baptist Catholic church. He married, October 15, 1890, Miss Catharine Ackerman Walsh. Their home is on Greene avenue, Brooklyn. Devoted to his profession and taking an active interest in everything relating to the welfare of the community in which he resides, Dr. Enright is known both as an able, conscientious physician and an earnest, public-spirited citizen.

WILLIAM HENRY ZABRISKIE, M. D.—1885.

Dr. William Henry Zabriskie, an able and experienced physician of Glen Cove, Long Island, is a descendant of an ancient family which had its origin in Poland, but later settled in Holland, whence, after remaining for a few generations, certain representatives came to America during colonial times, and settled in Bergen county, New Jersey. Afterward, however, some members of the family moved to Morris county, in the same state, and it is to this branch of the race that Dr. Zabriskie belongs.

William Henry Zabriskie, son of Abram and Celia (Dixon) Zabriskie, was born January 15, 1862, in Boonton, Morris county, New Jersey. His elementary education was received in the public schools of his native place, and having decided to devote himself for life to the practice of medicine, he entered upon a course of preparation with Dr. John G. Ryerson as preceptor, after which he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he was graduated with honors in the class of 1885. During his student life, on account of his high standing in all studies, he was allowed the special privilege of practicing in the hospital, subsequently acquiring additional experience in the Presbyterian Hospital. He entered upon the active practice of his calling in Glen Cove, where he ranks among the first physicians of the county.

Although devoted to his professional duties, Dr. Zabriskie is not unmindful of his obligations as a citizen, and takes an active part in public affairs. Like his father, he is a Democrat in politics, having cast his first presidential vote for Cleveland in 1884. For two terms he served as health officer of the town of Oyster Bay. He gives his best efforts not only to his private practice, but to public service along professional lines, holding the position of visiting surgeon to the Nassau Hospital, and surgeon to the Long Island Railroad.

Dr. Zabriskie is a member of the New York State Medical Association, the American Medical Association, and the Queens-Nassau Medical Society, of which he is ex-president and also ex-vice president, which office he held for several years. He is a member of the Associated Physicians of Long Island, in the meetings of which, as in those of all the other medical societies to which he belongs, he takes an active part. He is also a member of Pembroke Lodge, L. O. O. F., and Glen Cove Lodge, F. & A. M. Dr. Zabriskie married, February 14, 1888, Elizabeth W. Bowne, daughter of Richard M. and Mary (Titus) Bowne, of Glen Cove, Long Island. Mr. and Mrs. Bowne are prominent residents of Queens county, the former being a descendant of one of its oldest families. Dr. and Mrs. Zabriskie are the parents of two children, William Howard and Mary Margaret.

HENRY A. FAIRBAIRN, M. A., M. D.—1878.

Dr. Henry A. Fairbairn, for many years successfully engaged in the practice of medicine and surgery in Brooklyn, New York, was born in Catskill, New York, May 5, 1855, a descendant of William Fairbairn, who was born in Cross Flats, St. Boswell parish, Scotland, and in his early manhood emigrated to this country and settled in Philadelphia in the year 1796. The Rev. Robert B. Fairbairn, D. D., LL.D., father of Dr. Henry A. Fairbairn, was one of the most distinguished divines of the Protestant Episcopal church, and for a number of years served in the capacity of warden of St. Stephen's College. He had clear and logical ideas of what the work of a church in a community should be, and these ideas he carefully put into practice; through the forcefulness and clearness of his preaching he exerted a powerful influence over his parishioners. He was also a deep thinker, a writer of great force, and a man of liberal views and broad sentiments. He was united in marriage to Miss Juliet Arnold, who was a native of Troy, New York; her death occurred in 1893, at the age of sixty-nine years.

Dr. Henry A. Fairbairn acquired his education in the parish school of Annandale, New York, and later pursued a course at St. Stephen's College, where he won several prizes in ethics, Hellenistic Greek and other branches; in 1875 he was graduated from that institution with the degree of Bachelor of Arts, and in due course of time was awarded the title of Master of Arts. The following two years he was a student in the medical department of the University of Virginia, from which he graduated with distinction in 1877, after which he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, and received his degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1878.

Shortly after his graduation he opened an office in Kingston, New York, where he was successfully engaged in the practice of his profession until the following autumn, when he removed to Brooklyn, New York. From the very beginning his career was a success, as he is quick to adopt new and improved methods, and has a sound judgment which enables him to discern with accuracy what will really prove of benefit among the theories that are continually advanced in relation to the treatment and care of disease. In addition to his extensive private practice, Dr. Fairbairn has served as attending physician at St. John's Episcopal Hospital since 1880, and as the president of the staff for three years; for a number of years he was the attending and consulting physician at the Hebrew Orphan Asylum, and during the Spanish-American war he cared for nearly three hundred soldiers who were patients in St. John's Hospital. He is also attending physician to the Bushwick and Brooklyn hospitals, a member of the council of Long Island College Hospital, and consulting physician to the Long Island State Hospital.

H. A. Fairbairn

Dr. Fairbairn is the author of the volume entitled, "The Warden," which is a character study of his father, and he is also the author of numerous monograph pamphlets and papers of a professional nature, among them being: "Acute Rheumatism and Results of Treatment," printed in the Proceedings of the Medical Society of the County of Kings, December, 1853; "Treatment of Dysentery," published in the Brooklyn Medical Journal, October, 1890; "The Use of Opium in Pneumonia," published in the Brooklyn Medical Journal, November, 1897, and in the Medical and Surgical Reporter, December, 1897; "Clinical History of Nephritis," published in the Brooklyn Medical Journal, December, 1897; "Comparison Between Typhoid Fever in Infants and Children and That of Adults," published in the Journal of the American Medical Association, December, 1897; "Cardiac Degeneration as Exemplified in the Soldiers of the Late War," published in the Albany Medical Annals, April, 1899; "The Indefiniteness of Our Nomenclature," published in the New York Lancet Journal in 1900; "Osteopathy," published in the New York Lancet in 1900; "The Management of Hospitals," published in the National Hospital Record, October, 1901; "Unfounded Criticism," published in the Brooklyn Medical Journal, December, 1901; "Prognosis in Chronic Nephritis," published in the Transactions of the Associated Physicians of Long Island in 1900; "Asthma," published in the Brooklyn Medical Journal, in 1901; "The Scientific Spirit," published in the Journal of Incorporated Society of Science, Letters and Arts, in London, England, in 1902; "Effect of Modern Educational Methods on Health of Pupil," published in the Brooklyn Medical Journal in 1902; "Inaugural Address," published in the Brooklyn Medical Journal in 1902; and "The Warden," one volume, published by Whittaker, New York, in 1899.

Dr. Fairbairn has also delivered addresses before St. John's Hospital, in 1899, the Long Island State Hospital, in 1901, the Municipal Club of Brooklyn, in 1902, the Pratt Institute, in 1902, the Associated Hospital Superintendents of the United States and Canada, in 1901, and others. In 1900 and 1901 Dr. Fairbairn was elected vice president of the Medical Society of the County of Kings, and in 1902 was unanimously elected president of the same organization, and in 1903 trustee for five years; he is also a member of the American Academy of Medicine, the New York State Medical Society, being alternate state medical examiner for 1902; he had previously occupied the position of delegate to the New York State Society and censor and senior censor in the Medical Society of the County of Kings; the New York Academy of Medicine, the Brooklyn Pathological Society, the Physicians' Mutual Aid Association of New York, the Medical Club of Brooklyn, is a life fellow of the Society of Science, Letters and Arts of London, England, an associate member of the Victoria Institute of London, and a member of the University Club of Brooklyn. During his presidency of the Medical Society of the County of Kings he raised the seven thousand dollars required to complete the stock room of the library, and in addition brought to the society many distinguished members of the profession. He also addressed many outside organizations as to the society's work. The Society of Science, Letters and Art of London conferred on him a silver medal in 1902 in recognition of his position and contributions to general and medical literature.

On February 7, 1888, Dr. Fairbairn married Miss Alice Le Fevre, a daughter of Captain Peter E. Le Fevre, and their children are: Robert Le Fevre, Ruth, Russell Arnold and Agnes Lathers Fairbairn. Dr. Fairbairn and his family are consistent members of the Church of the Good Shepherd, and he is a member of the committee of the Church Charity Foundation and of the Church Club of the diocese of Long Island, also a trustee of St. Stephen's College and a member of the Association for promotion of Church Schools, Colleges and Seminaries, and of the American Academy of Political and Social Science.

ROBERT HALL, M. D.—1856.

Dr. Robert Hall was born in 1830 in West Greenwich, Rhode Island, and is the son of Robert and Zilphia (Weaver) Hall. He is descended on both sides from English ancestors, who emigrated at an early period to the New England colonies, being still represented by their descendants in that part of the country where they originally settled. The father and paternal grandfather of Dr. Hall were both agriculturists, and his boyhood was passed in the occupations and amusements of the farm.

His early education was received in the district school, supplemented by attendance at the East Greenwich Academy and the Academy at Worcester, Massachusetts. He began the study of medicine under the guidance of Dr. George D. Wilcox, of Coventry, and late of Providence, who was his preceptor for three years. He entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York in 1854, and in 1856 graduated from that institution with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. After a post-graduate course in Bellevue Hospital Medical College, he practiced for a few years in Warwick, Rhode Island, and then went abroad, attending a course of instruction in the medical department of the University of Vienna. On his return to this country he settled in Providence, where, since 1871, he has been engaged in the practice of his profession, which he has conducted to a certain extent according to the principles of homeopathy. A large amount of his practice consists of gynecology and diseases of the heart and lungs. He was for sixteen years a member of the staff of the medical department of the Homeopathic Hospital in Providence, and is now president of the Rhode Island Homeopathic Hospital Corporation. He is the author of a number of papers which have been read before the various medical societies of which he is a member.

Dr. Hall belongs to the Rhode Island Homeopathic Society, the Massachusetts Surgical and Gynecological Society, and the American Institute of Homeopathy, being a member of the Senate of Seniors connected with that organization. He belongs to the Masonic fraternity, holding the rank of a master. He is a member of the Mathewson Street Methodist Episcopal church, where he is active in benevolent work, and holds the offices of president of the board of trustees and member of the official board. Dr. Hall married, in 1861, Susan W. Randall, of Warwick, Rhode Island. They have no children.

Robert Hall

SHELDON VOORHEES, M. D.—1881.

Dr. Sheldon Voorhees, who has been for nearly a quarter of a century identified with the medical profession of Cayuga county, New York, and is a native of the state, was born February 8, 1852, in Montgomery county, son of Isaac N. and Maria (Enders) Voorhees. His primary education was received in the schools of the neighborhood and at the Fort Edward Institute of Washington county, New York. He then entered upon a course of preparatory medical study under the direction of Dr. W. H. Robb, of Amsterdam, and on its completion entered the Albany Medical College, from which he was graduated in the class of 1879. After one year's experience in the Albany City Hospital, he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which institution he graduated in the class of 1881, after which he entered upon the active practice of his profession in Auburn. While devoting his attention to general practice, Dr. Voorhees has a natural aptitude for surgery, of which, to a certain extent, he has made a specialty. He is a member of the staff of the Auburn City Hospital and of the Cayuga County Medical Society.

Dr. Voorhees married, in 1882, Miss Eliza Van Alstyne, of Richmondville, Schoharie county, New York. To them have been born two sons and two daughters: Mabel, James, John Henry and Dorothy. Mrs. Voorhees comes of a family of physicians, her grandfather, an uncle and a brother having all been medical practitioners. From 1818 until 1894, a period of more than three-quarters of a century, the town of Richmondville was not without a Dr. Van Alstyne, a fact no less remarkable in the history of the town than in that of the family.

FRANK ELMER PAGETT, M. D.—1896.

Dr. Frank Elmer Pagett, general practitioner of Spring Valley, New York, was born in Rockland county, New York, May 27, 1873. He passed his childhood and early youth in his birthplace, and obtained his elementary education in the common schools. Having selected the practice of medicine as the vocation that would best suit his disposition and inclinations, he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York city, from which he was graduated in 1896 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. After spending an internship of one year in dispensary work, Dr. Pagett located in Spring Valley, New York, and although he is one of the younger representatives of the profession in the city, he has made a reputation for skill in his practice. His practice covers all departments of general medicine, in which he has proved eminently successful among a large and influential patronage. During the last two years he has taken up the specialties of eye, ear, throat and nose in connection with his general practice.

He has also been continually active in professional lines aside from his personal practice, as for the past three years he has acted in the capacity of clinical assistant in Dr. McKernon's Clinic, department of otology, in the New York Eye and Ear Infirmary, local surgeon of the Erie Railroad, health officer and house physician of the county almshouse; he was health officer for the town of Ramapo in 1901, and is now health officer of the village of Spring Valley. Dr. Pagett is prominently connected with the Erie Railroad Association, the Rockland County Medical Society, and the New York State Medical Society.

EDWARD CARLIN BENNETT, M. D.—1886.

Dr. Edward Carlin Bennett, a well known and highly esteemed physician of Brooklyn, New York, is descended from a long line of ancestry, in which, by a strange coincidence, there was from a remote period in each generation one son who adopted the medical profession. The family was of Irish origin, but has been represented in the United States for half a century.

Dr. Edward Bennett, father of Dr. Edward Carlin Bennett, was born May 11, 1838, in the county of Armagh, in Ireland, where his father, Dr. Nicholas Bennett, was a well known surgeon. In 1852 Edward Bennett came to the United States, where for nine years he was engaged in the drug business in Brooklyn, New York, during which time he studied medicine. In 1862 he graduated from the medical department of the University of New York, and engaged in the active practice of his profession in Brooklyn, for three years holding the appointment of physician to the Orphan Asylum, in which were some five hundred children, and serving at the same time as one of the physicians of the Brooklyn City Dispensary. Subsequently he was appointed acting assistant surgeon in the United States army, holding that position until 1871, when he removed to San Antonio, Texas, where he holds the office of chief examiner for the Equitable Travelers' Insurance Company of Hartford, Connecticut. He is a member of the Texas State Medical Association, the West Texas Medical Association and the Medical Society of Kings County. Dr. Bennett is at the present time engaged in the active practice of his profession in San Antonio, where he is honored as a skillful and experienced practitioner and a leading and influential citizen.

Edward Carlin Bennett, son of Dr. Edward Bennett, was born November 20, 1863, in Brooklyn, New York, and received his primary education in the schools of his native city. When he was thirteen years of age his parents removed to San Antonio, Texas, where he continued his studies, subsequently graduating from St. Mary's College in the class of 1880. Adopting the practice of medicine as a life calling, he pursued his preparatory studies under the guidance of his father, and later under that of Dr. Joseph B. Bissell, of New York city. His literary education having been completed at St. Mary's College, where he received the degree of Bachelor of Arts, he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he graduated in the class of 1886, and the following year entered upon a career of active practice in St. Louis. Dr. Bennett's reason for choosing this city as a place of residence was that he desired to act as trustee of his grandfather's estate, some of the property of which was situated in St. Louis, and the laws of Missouri required a trustee to be a resident of the state. In 1892 Dr. Bennett, after completing the trusteeship, came to Brooklyn, where he has since remained, and where he has built up a large and lucrative practice. He is not only a skillful practitioner, but a close student of his profession, combining executive ability with scientific knowledge.

Dr. Bennett is a member of the Associated Physicians of Long Island, and assistant surgeon to the out-patient department of St. Vincent's Hospital in New York city. He is a member of the Kings County Medical Society, and one of the physicians of the board of education of the city of New York for the examination of teachers for licenses. Dr. Bennett married Miss E. A. Boyce, and has one son, Edward C., aged eleven years, who, in accordance with the traditions of his family, has already decided to devote himself to the practice of medicine.

HERSEY GOODWIN LOCKE, M. D.—1887.

Dr. Hersey G. Locke, general practitioner and also a specialist in neurology, was born in Oldham county, Kentucky, August 19, 1863, son of Joseph H. and Fannie B. (Churchill) Locke. In 1868, when he was five years of age, his parents removed to Boston, Massachusetts, where he was reared to manhood and received his education in the Boston Latin School, and this was supplemented by a course of study at the Hopkinson School, where he was prepared to enter Harvard University in the class of 1886. After his graduation from the latter named institution, he began the study of medicine under the masterly preceptorship of Dr. John C. Dalton, and subsequently matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which he received his degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1887.

After a competitive examination, Dr. Locke received the appointment of interne in the New York Hospital, where he served the full term of eighteen months. He then went to Roosevelt Hospital, where he was instrumental in organizing the gynecological service in that institution, and to which he devoted one year of his time. He was then appointed chief of clinic in the department of gynecology in the Vanderbilt Clinic, and he also acted as assistant gynecologist to the General Memorial Hospital. The practice of gynecology not being congenial to his taste, and having a preference for the science of neurology, he accepted a position at Glen Springs Sanitarium, which is pleasantly situated at Watkins, New York; he did this in order to perfect himself in this particular branch of the science of medicine. He remained in this institution for two and a half years, and then engaged in private practice in Syracuse, where he has attained a position of prominence. He is also the attending physician to the Women's and Children's Hospital of Syracuse and the Syracuse Home Association, and neurologist to the Syracuse Free Dispensary. He is a member of the Onondaga County Medical Society, the Syracuse Academy of Medicine, and was a fellow of the New York Academy of Medicine. Dr. Locke was united in marriage to Julia D. Williams, a daughter of David Williams, of Ocala, Florida, and widow of Dennis McCarthy Emory, of Syracuse, New York.

JOHN HAMMELL BROWER BROWNING, M. D.—1882.

Dr. J. H. Brower Browning was born in Brooklyn, New York, October 27, 1857, and is a descendant of some of the early settlers of New England, among whom were William and Elizabeth (Morey) Browning, his great-grandparents, and Thomas and Amy (Prentice) Browning, grandparents, all of whom were natives of the state of Connecticut. Mason Backus Browning, father of Dr. Browning, was born in North Stonington, Connecticut, and during the greater part of his business career engaged in mercantile pursuits. On June 7, 1855, at Spring Hill, Flushing, New York, Mr. Browning was united in marriage to Anne Brower, who was born in New York city, March 18, 1835, a daughter of John Hammell and Anne Sophia (Duryee) Brower. Mr. Brower was the son of Adolphus and Elizabeth (Baker) Brower, and a native of New York city; his wife was the daughter of George and Mary (Sharpe) Duryee, the latter a daughter of Jacob Hendrix Sharpe, the first judge of Kings county, New York, to which position he was elected in 1796; he died in 1817, and his portrait, painted by Paradise, is still in possession of his descendants.

Dr. Browning acquired his early education in the public schools of New York city and Flushing Institute, Flushing, Long Island, where he was prepared for entrance to the School of Mines of Columbia College in the class of 1880, and he there pursued a chemical course. Later he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which institution he obtained his degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1882. Directly after his graduation he served as ambulance surgeon to the New York Hospital for six months, after which he received the appointment of associate resident physician to the New York Insane Asylum on Ward's Island, where he remained for one year. He then entered a competitive examination for a position in St. Francis' Hospital, New York city, which he secured, and from 1883 to 1885 was house physician and surgeon to the institution, from which he obtained a diploma. Dr. Browning then went abroad, spending two years in travel, during which time he visited Norway, Sweden, Persia, Greece, Syria, Arabia, Egypt, Africa, India, Ceylon, Siam, Burmah, the Malay peninsula, China, Japan and the western part of his native country. Upon his return to his native land in 1887, Dr. Browning became assistant to the chair of surgery in the New York Polyclinic, and in 1892 formed a business association with Dr. W. W. Van Valzah, of New York city, which was continued until 1895.

J. H. Brown Browning M.D.

At that time Dr. Browning was attacked with a severe illness and later came to Smithtown, Long Island, to recuperate; being pleased with the town and the people he decided to locate here, and although he does not engage actively in the practice of his profession, his time is occupied with public duties in connection with the administration of local affairs. In the spring of 1896 he was elected justice of the peace of Smithtown, and the following year was nominated by the Democratic party for the office of coroner, but owing to the greater strength of the opposing party, was defeated. He received the Democratic nomination at the assembly convention held in October, 1899, as a candidate to represent the second assembly district in the state legislature and although he failed of election he succeeded in greatly reducing the usual Republican majority of from one thousand six hundred to two thousand two hundred, lacking only seven hundred votes of election. In the spring of 1901 he was renominated and elected for a second term as justice of the peace, in which capacity he is serving at the present time. He is also a member of the town board, the board of health, and is president of the board of education of district No. 1, of the town of Smithtown. Dr. Browning has been a member of the Democratic county committee of Suffolk from 1896, and has served as a member of its executive committee.

Dr. Browning is a member of the New York County Medical Society, the Physicians' Mutual Aid Association of New York city, the Alumni Society of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, an associate member of the Society of the Alumni of the School of Mines of Columbia College, New York, and the Phi Gamma Delta college fraternity. He is also connected with the Modern Woodmen of America and is a fellow of the American Geographical Society. While a resident of New York city, he attended the Presbyterian church, of which Dr. Robert Russell Booth, D. D., was pastor, but the last ten years of his residence in the metropolis he was an attendant of the Brick Presbyterian church, of which his brother-in-law, Dr. Henry Van Dyke, was pastor.

On April 30, 1888, in the First Presbyterian church of Baltimore, Maryland, Dr. Browning was married by the Rev. Dr. Leftwich, D. D., to Fanny Lewis Reid, a daughter of Andrew and Fanny (Gwathmay) Reid, of Baltimore, Maryland. Mrs. Reid was a native of Richmond, Virginia, and was a direct descendant of the Washington family. In 1892 Mrs. Browning died of typhoid pneumonia at their residence on Thirty-fourth street, near Park avenue, New York city.

HALLOCK RATHBONE MAINE, M. D.—1888.

Dr. Hallock Rathbone Maine, who was for a number of years recognized as a skillful, progressive and conscientious physician of Brooklyn, New York, was born April 23, 1865, in New York city, but in his childhood was brought to Brooklyn, where he received his primary education in the public schools, afterward studying at the Polytechnic Institute. He began his preparatory medical studies under the direction of Dr. Leigh Hunt, afterward matriculating in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he graduated in the class of 1888.

After serving for a time as interne in Kings County Hospital, Dr. Maine entered upon the active duties of his profession, acquiring an enviable reputation both as a physician and a citizen. His patients regarded him with respect and confidence, becoming sincerely attached to him for the skillful and kindly manner in which he discharged his duties, and among his professional brethren he had many warm friends and admirers. Dr. Maine filled at one time the position of assistant and later of visiting physician at the Kings County Hospital, was also attending physician at the General Medical Brooklyn Central Dispensary, and for a time assistant visiting physician at the penitentiary.

Dr. Maine was a member of the Kings County Medical Society, the Greater New York Medical Association, the New York State Medical Association, the Pathological Society, and the Physicians' Mutual Aid Association. The death of Dr. Maine, which took place June 13, 1902, was justly regarded as a great loss alike to his family and friends and to the medical profession, which was thus deprived of the services of one who, at an early age, had made for himself an honorable record, and for whom the future seemed to hold still further distinction.

JOSEPH EUGENE VIDAL, A. B., M. D.—1882.

Dr. Vidal is a native of the fair city of San Juan, Porto Rico, where he was born on the 13th of November, 1860, and where he received his early educational discipline, having pursued his studies in a university of that locality to the degree of A. B. In 1877 he came to the United States and in the city of New York devoted one year to private study as preparatory to taking up the technical course of medicine and surgery. In 1879 he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, and was graduated in September, 1882, as a member of the class of 1883. He soon afterward proceeded to Europe, where he passed a year in further study and investigation in France and Spain. Having duly profited by the excellent advantages which were afforded him for professional study in the old world, he returned to Porto Rico in 1884, where, after passing his examination by the medical board, he successfully engaged in the active practice of his profession for three years, paying special attention to the investigation of the diseases most prevalent in that locality, such as yellow fever and smallpox, and all contagious and infectious diseases, and to determining the most effective methods of treatment and prevention. He was appointed by the government as health officer, serving as such in different localities of Porto Rico, in which capacity he rendered valuable service.

In 1887 Dr. Vidal returned to New York city, where he was engaged in practice for a period of two years, at the expiration of which he established himself in practice at Stapleton, borough of Richmond, New York city, where he has gained precedence as one of the progressive and thoroughly skilled members of his profession. He is visiting physician to the S. R. Smith Infirmary, is a member of the Richmond County Medical Society, of the Natural Science Association of Staten Island, and is examining physician for the Ancient Order of United Workmen, the Knights of the Macca-bees, the Templars of Liberty, the Knights of Pythias, and order of Elks, in each of which he holds membership, while he is also prominently identified with the time-honored Masonic order, holding membership in Tompkins Lodge No. 471, F. & A. M.; Tyrian Chapter No. 219, R. A. M.; Empire Commanclery No. 66, K. T., of which he is surgeon; and Mecca Temple of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine.

On the 31st of January, 1884, Dr. Vidal, before he returned to Porto Rico, was united in marriage with Miss Emma R. McDowell, daughter of the late Noah McDowell, of Stapleton, New York. They are the parents of four sons: Joseph E., Jr., now studying medicine in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city; Horacio A., deceased; Louis A.; and Arthur E. The family home is the center of refined hospitality, and Dr. and Mrs. Vidal take a prominent part in the best social and charitable activities of the community.

HENRY DE LA PIERRE WHITE, M. D.—1887.

Dr. Henry De la Pierre White, a skillful and respected practitioner of Hopewell Junction, Dutchess county, New York, comes, on the paternal side, of Connecticut ancestry, being descended from a family which from early colonial days has been prominent in the history of that state, and has sent beyond its borders many who, in whatever community they have resided, have added to the number of honorable and public-spirited citizens. Through his mother he is a representative of the French element which in some parts of the country blends with our Anglo-Saxon stock, imparting to it those qualities of mental brilliancy and indomitable gaiety which have ever been characteristic of the Gallic race.

Henry De la Pierre White was born February 8, 1866, in Brooklyn, New York, and is the son of Stephen and Caroline E. (De la Pierre) White, the former a native of Connecticut, the latter of New York city. Dr. White received his primary education in some of the excellent private schools for which Brooklyn has from an early period in its history been noted. Later he became a student at the Polytechnic Institute, a school which has probably numbered among its pupils a larger proportion of lads who have become prominent in various callings, than any other institution of the kind in the city. Dr. White's choice of the medical profession as a life calling partook of the nature of a foregone conclusion, a number of his ancestors on both sides having belonged to the fraternity. His paternal great-grandfather and grandfather and two of his uncles, as well as some of his maternal uncles, had been, in the different generations, enrolled among the practitioners of the healing art. Dr. White's preparatory studies were pursued under the guidance of the late Dr. B. F. Fessenden, and on their conclusion he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, graduating in the class of 1887.

After a year of hospital experience in St. John's Hospital, Brooklyn, Dr. White entered upon a career of private practice, first in Brooklyn, and then for a few years in Nutley, New Jersey, removing in 1896 to Hopewell Junction, where he has since remained. In all the places in which he has resided Dr. White has established the reputation of a skillful and conscientious medical practitioner, well informed and progressive in all matters pertaining to his profession. Dr. White is a member of the Dutchess County Medical Society, the New York State Medical Association, and the American Medical Association. He married, in 1900, Aletta C. Baldwin, a native of Dutchess county, New York.

RICHARD FRANKLIN BEATTIE SEAMAN, M. D.—1881.

Dr. Richard Franklin Beattie Seaman, a long established physician of Locust Valley, Long Island, may be said to have inherited his predilection for the practice of medicine, his father having been long distinguished in the annals of the profession. Dr. Richard S. Seaman, father of Dr. Richard Franklin Beattie Seaman, was born in 1825 in New York city. Having embraced the profession of medicine, he practiced for ten years in his native city, after which he removed to Glen Cove, and was for thirty-three years identified with the medical profession of Queens and Nassau counties, where he ranked as a leading practitioner, and was respected for his sterling character. Dr. Seaman died in Brooklyn in 1901, at the age of seventy-five.

Richard Franklin Beattie Seaman, son of Dr. Richard S. Seaman, was born December 15, 1854, in New York city, and at the age of six years was taken by his parents to Glen Cove, where he received his primary education in the schools of the village. He pursued his preliminary studies in medicine under the direction of his father and then matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which he graduated in the class of 1881. He entered upon the active practice of his profession in Glen Cove, where he remained one year, and then settled at Locust Valley, where his success, both from a professional and pecuniary standpoint, has been very marked. He is equally respected by both patrons and professional brethren as an able and experienced practitioner, and as a citizen of unquestioned integrity of character. Dr. Seaman is a member of the Queens-Nassau Medical Society, and has acted as a delegate to the Suffolk County Medical Society.

HENRY LEOPOLD ELSNER, M. D.—1877.

Among the prominent representatives of the medical profession in Syracuse, New York, is Dr. Henry L. Elsner, who has the largest and most lucrative practice in central New York. He was born in Onondaga county, New York, August 15, 1855, the son of Dr. Leopold and Hanchen (Sulsbacher) Elsner. His preparatory education was obtained in the Syracuse grammar and high schools; the practice of medicine came to him as a family inheritance, as both his father and brother were medical practitioners, and he began his study under their efficient preceptorship. Subsequently he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which he was graduated in the class of 1877. Shortly after securing his degree Dr. Elsner went abroad and continued his studies in Berlin and Vienna in order to better equip himself for his professional career.

After his return to his native country in 1878, he established an office in Syracuse, and at once entered upon the active duties of his profession. He now enjoys a very extensive patronage, the greater part of which is that of being called in consultation with other physicians in the treatment of difficult cases, and this is the most unmistakable evidence of his high professional standing; he also makes a specialty of internal diseases, to the study and treatment of which he has given much time and attention, and his services are frequently in demand as an expert medical witness. Since 1881 Dr. Elsner has been connected with the medical department of the Syracuse University, and holds the chair of the principles and practice of medicine. He is also the consulting physician to the Women's and Children's Hospital of Syracuse, of the New York State Hospital for Crippled Children at Tarrytown, and visiting physician to St. Joseph's Hospital of Syracuse.

Dr. Elsner is a member and ex-president of the Medical Society of the State of New York, member and ex-president of the Central New York Medical Society, member and ex-president of the Onondaga County Medical Society, and a member of the American Climatology Society. He is also the author of a number of valuable scientific papers which have been read before the various medical societies and published in the medical journals, among them being: "Typhoid Fever as We See it in Central New York," the New York Medical Journal, November 28, 1885; "What Are the Principal Surroundings, Climate, Occupations, Habits and Diseases Which Impair Cellular Resistance and so Favor Infection and Development of Consumption?" New York State Medical Association Transactions, 1886; "Early Diagnosis of Tubercular Meningitis in Children," Buffalo Medical and Surgical Journal, 1888; "On the Early Diagnosis and Treatment of Septic Peritonitis," New York Medical Journal, June 18, 1892; "Perforation of Typhoid Ulcer, with Adhesive and Protective Peritonitis," New York Medical Journal, April 9, 1892; "Fistula in Ano and Tuberculosis of the Ischio Rectal Fossa," Gaillard's Medical Journal, May, 1892; "On the Practical Value of the Newer Methods of Examination in the Diseases of the Stomach," New York Medical Journal for May 6 and 20, 1893; "On the Clinical and Bacteriological Aspect of Mixed or Concurrent Infection in Pulmonary Tuberculosis," president's address before the Central New York Medical Association, Buffalo Medical and Surgical Journal, November, 1894; "On the Clinical Value of the Centrifuge," New York Medical Journal, October 27, 1894; "Clinical Report Showing the Tolerance of the Peritoneum and Nature's Kindness to the Surgeon," American Gynecological and Obstetrical Journal, March, 1895; "Ueber Diat Bei Dyspeptikern," Neue Yorker Medicinischen Monatsschrift, November 20, 1897; "On the Advances in Medicine During the Past Twenty Years," an address delivered to the graduating nurses of St. Luke's Hospital, Utica, New York, October 18, 1897; "Erythromelalgia Associated with Renaud's Disease," The Medical News, June 19, 1897; "The Pathological Factors of Neurasthenia," New York Medical Journal, April 10, 1897; an address in memory of Dr. Charles Marquis Magee, before the Onondaga Medical Society, May 11, 1897; "Report of the Special Committee on Remedial Legislation in Regard to Expert Testimony," Buffalo Medical Journal, February, 1898; "The Vagaries and Wanderings of Gallstones, with Clinical Reports," from the Transactions of the Medical Society of the State of New York, Medical News, 1898; "Some of the Vagaries of Croupous Pneumonia," Transactions of the American Climatological Association, 1898, and Medical News, January 8, 1898; "The Benefits of the Modern Hospital," in the St. Elizabeth's Bazaar Journal, April 28, 1899; "Abscess of the Lung, with Clinical Data," Transactions of the Medical Society of the State of New York, Medical News, March 25, 1899; "Acute Diabetes," Philadelphia Medical Journal, August 19, 1899; "Treatment of Cardiac Asthenia of Pneumonia," Transactions of the Climatological Association, 1899, Therapeutic Gazette; "On the Diagnosis of Malignant Endocarditis," International Contributions to Medical Literature; Festschrift in honor of A. Jacobi to commemorate the seventieth anniversary of his birth; "Splenic-Myelogenous Leukaemia, with Pulmonary Tuberculosis," American Journal of the Medical Sciences, March, 1901; "Recent Experiences with Erythromelalgia," Transactions of the Medical Society of the State of New York, Medical News, March 16, 1901; "On the Value to the Physician of Modern Methods of Diagnosis," president's address delivered before the Medical Society of the State of New York, American Medicine, February 1, 1902; and "The President's Inaugural Address," delivered before the Medical Society of the State of New York, New York Medical Journal, March 15, 1902. In 1881 Dr. Elsner married Miss Pauline Rosenberg, of Rochester, New York, and they have one son, Henry L. Elsner, Jr.

JOHN J. PRENDERGAST, M. D.—1868.

John J. Prendergast, M. D., was born in Boston, Massachusetts, in 1847. His parents were John and Mary (Keeley) Prendergast, who gave him the thorough education afforded by the Boston public schools, and on the completion of his studies there, sent him to Seton Hall, New Jersey, where he took his degree of A. B. in 1864, and subsequently received the honorary degree of A. M.

He made the next advancement in his education by pursuing the study of medicine under the instruction of Professor T. Gaillard Thomas, M. D., and he continued his medical study at the New York College of Physicians and Surgeons, graduating in 1868. After devoting some time to hospital work, he went to Jersey City, New Jersey, where he assumed the charge of St. Francis' Hospital. He showed great ability as a surgeon, and among the many operations performed by him was the sub-periosteal removal of the collar bone from a girl seventeen years old. She made a good recovery and in about three weeks the new bone could be felt. This operation had been performed once before by the great surgeon, Ollier, of Paris, but Dr. Prendergast was the first to perform it in America.

Dr. Prendergast was president of the Hudson County District Medical Society, and county physician of Hudson county, and it was a part of his duties to inspect the almshouse and penal institutions, while all post-mortem examinations were performed under his personal observation. He was a delegate from the New Jersey State Medical Society to the American Medical Association, the Massachusetts State Medical Society, and the New York State Medical Society. He was often called as an expert witness in cases where a knowledge of medical jurisprudence was indispensable, so he took the regular course of study in the Columbia Law School, and was graduated in 1879 with the degree of LL. B.

In 1884 he began his medical practice in Brooklyn, New York, and he still devotes all his time and attention to this work. In 1888 he became associated with Professor Thomas R. Pooley, well known as a consulting surgeon in various hospitals of New York, in organizing the New Amsterdam Eye and Ear Hospital, where he gave active service for two years, when he retired in order to devote his time to private practice.

FRANK HALLECK STEPHENSON, M. D.—1878.

Dr. Frank Halleck Stephenson, a skillful and experienced physician of Syracuse, New York, was born March 27, 1856, in Westmoreland, Oneida county, New York, and is the son of Benjamin and Celia A. (Halleck) Stephenson. He was reared in his native county, receiving his preliminary education at the Clinton Liberal Institute in Clinton, New York. When it became necessary for Dr. Stephenson to make choice of a life calling, he selected the profession of medicine, and matriculated in the medical department of Syracuse University, where he spent one year, at the end of that time entering the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he graduated in the class of 1878. He then went abroad and continued his studies in the National Hospital of London and at the Post-Graduate School, where he perfected his equipment for his specialty, namely, nervous and mental diseases.

After his return he engaged in practice in Syracuse, where for many years he has occupied a leading position in the ranks of the profession. As a neurologist and alienist he stands high, commanding the respect of both patrons and professional brethren by his scientific attainments, practical skill, and conscientious devotion to the duties of his calling. His interest in his specialty amounts to enthusiasm. In the Syracuse Women's and Children's Hospital he holds the position of neurologist, and that of neurologist and alienist in the Syracuse Free Dispensary. He is also connected with the St. Vincent de Paul Orphan Asylum and the Onondaga County Orphan Asylum.

Dr. Stephenson has been a liberal contributor to current medical literature, the papers published by him having received the hearty commendation of the profession. Among the articles which he has contributed from time to time to medical publications may be mentioned the following: "Observation of General Paresis," published in January, 1896; "Report of Jacksonian Epilepsy," which appeared in April, 1898; and those enumerated below, the dates attached being those of their publication: "Cases Friedreich's Ataxia," March 1897; "Senility and Senile Dementia in a Medico-Legal Aspect," 1901; "Neurites," New York Medical Journal, 1895; "Report of a Case of Cerebral Tumor," July, 1902; and "Moral Insanity," 1903.

Dr. Stephenson is connected with a large number of medical societies. He is ex-president of the Syracuse Medical Association and Onondaga County Medical Society, and is a member of the Medical Society of the State of New York, and the Central New York Medical Society, of which he is ex-vice president. He is a member and ex-trustee of the Syracuse Academy of Medicine, is ex-secretary of the Third District New York Medical Association, and ex-physician to the Syracuse board of health. The fact that Dr. Stephenson held this last named position may be cited as proof of the interest which he takes in the welfare of the community, especially along professional lines, of the readiness with which he responds to any appeal made in behalf of the public, and of his willingness to discharge the active duties of a citizen.

THOMAS FRANCIS MYLOD, M. D.—1894.

Dr. Thomas Francis Mylod, an enterprising and successful medical practitioner of Brooklyn, New York, was born October 29, 1870, in Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, New York, and received his early education in his native city, supplemented by a preparatory course at Cornell University, from which he graduated in the class of 1891. He matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which institution he was graduated in the class of 1894.

After his graduation Dr. Mylod served for eighteen months as interne on the house staff of St. Mary's Hospital of Brooklyn and in 1896 engaged in private practice in that city. He holds the position of associate surgeon in St. Mary's General Hospital. Notwithstanding his devotion to his profession, Dr. Mylod takes an active interest in public affairs, and is ever ready to fulfill the obligations of a citizen. He holds the position of medical inspector in the health department of Brooklyn, bringing to the labors of that office the same conscientious and progressive spirit which marks his conduct in the sphere of his chosen calling. Dr. Mylod is a member of the Kings County Medical Society, the Long Island Medical Society, and St. Mary's Hospital Alumni Association. He is active in professional and social circles, and is known alike as a well informed physician and a public-spirited citizen.

WALTER AIKMAN SHERWOOD, M. D.—1896.

Dr. Walter A. Sherwood, a practicing physician and surgeon of Brooklyn, New York, was born in Jersey City, New Jersey, December 25, 1875. His early literary education was acquired in Hasbrouck Institute, and later he was a student at Rutgers College, where he pursued a special course of study. Wishing to enter professional life, he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which institution he was graduated in the class of 1896 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. Immediately after his graduation Dr. Sherwood pursued a post-graduate course in the same institution for one year, after which he served an internship of two years in the Methodist Episcopal Hospital of Brooklyn, New York. He then spent several months in travel and study in England and on the continent, and upon his return home he engaged in private practice in Brooklyn. Having a natural preference for surgery, he devotes a considerable portion of his time to the study and practice of that branch of the profession. His connection with the Methodist Episcopal Hospital has been continuous, he is clinical assistant in surgery at Seney Hospital and a member of the surgical staff of the dispensary of the same institution.

Dr. Sherwood has written a number of scientific papers which have been presented before medical societies and published in the various medical journals. He is a member of the Medical Society of the County of Kings; the Brooklyn Pathological Society, the Brooklyn Surgical Society, of which he is secretary; the Society of ex-Internes of Seney Hospital; the Alumni Association of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, and the Delta Phi fraternity. Socially he is a member of the Montauk Club of Brooklyn, New York.

MAYNARD GOODING BURGESS, M. D.—1898.

Dr. Maynard Gooding Burgess, of Herkimer, New York, who, in the comparatively short period of his professional career, has already earned for himself an honorable reputation as a medical practitioner, is the son of Dr. Daniel Maynard and Ida A. (Gooding) Burgess. The former was a prominent physician, and was for years connected with the United States Marine Hospital service at Havana, Cuba; he was a recognized authority on yellow fever, and his contributions to medical literature have received high encomiums from the profession.

Dr. Maynard Gooding Burgess was born April 12, 1876, in Havana, Cuba, where he spent his youth, his primary education being conducted by private tutors. Later he came to the United States, where he studied at the high school in Herkimer, New York, and at the Holbrook Military Academy. After deciding to devote himself to the practice of medicine, he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he graduated in the class of 1898. While pursuing his studies he filled the position of anesthetist in gynecology at Roosevelt Hospital from 1895 to 1897, and also served on the house staff of the Charity Hospital of New York city. At the beginning of the Spanish-American war he was the first of his class to receive a diploma, and obtained the appointment of assistant surgeon in the United States regular army, subsequently being made brigade surgeon of the First Brigade, Second Division, Fourth Corps, and served upon the staff of General Wheeler, commanding Fifth Corps in Cuba. After leaving the service he was for a time in private practice in the Adirondacks, and in 1900 went to Herkimer, where he has already built up a lucrative practice, and is recognized as a skillful and progressive member of the medical profession.

Dr. Burgess possesses remarkable mechanical ingenuity, joined to an inventive talent, and is known as the inventor of a surgical table, and also of several instruments, which have been found, by those who used them, to be singularly well adapted for the purposes for which they are intended. Dr. Burgess himself constructs his own special instruments.

Dr. Burgess is a member of the Herkimer County Medical Society, in which he holds the office of librarian, and is one of the executive committee of the Herkimer County Medical Association. He belongs to the New York State Medical Association, the American Medical Association, in which he serves as a member of the committee on new membership, and is also enrolled among the Alumni of the New York City (Charity) Hospital. Dr. Burgess married, in 1900, Miss Harriet C. Rosbach, of Ilion, New York.

FREDERICK HALLETT SPENCER, M. D.—1899.

Dr. Frederick Hallett Spencer, of Auburn, New York, who, although not yet a practitioner of very long standing, has a well recognized position as a skillful and enterprising physician, was born June 4, 1876, in Waverly, Tioga county, New York, and is the son of Charles Frederick and Josephine (Hallett) Spencer, both natives of New York. His preparatory education was received at the Waverly high school, and at Phillips Academy, Exeter, New Hampshire. Early in life Dr. Spencer manifested a decided predilection for the practice of medicine, and, therefore, when the time came for him to choose a life work, he experienced no doubt or hesitation in regard to a selection. He matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which institution he graduated in the class of 1899. Dr. Spencer then accepted an appointment to the Robert Packer Hospital, in Sayre, Pennsylvania, where he held the position of house physician for one year. At the end of that time he entered upon the active practice of his profession in Auburn, where he possesses the confidence of a large and increasing circle of patrons, and also of his professional brethren.

Dr. Spencer holds the position of medical examiner to the Protected Home Circle, and is also a member of the staff of the City Hospital. During the years 1901 and 1902 he served as attending physician to the Cayuga Asylum for Destitute Children, and in 1903 he was appointed an attending physician at the Home for the Friendless at Auburn. Dr. Spencer is a member of the Cayuga County Medical Society.

EDWIN A. GOODRIDGE, A. M., M. D.—1871.

The family of which Dr. Goodridge is a representative is of English origin, the American progenitor having been William Goodridge, who emigrated from Bury St. Edmunds, Suffolk county, England, in 1636, settling at Watertown, Massachusetts. His brother John, who came to America in the same year, located at Hartford, Connecticut. These brothers were lineal descendants from Reverend John Goodridge, D. D., who was graduated from famous old Oxford in 1509. The great-grandfather of Edwin A., Benjamin Goodridge, was one of three brothers who, with their father, Benjamin, Sr., were active participants in the battle of Bunker Hill and other engagements of the war of the Revolution. Dr. Goodridge is of the eighth generation in descent from William Goodridge, the colonist, and is a grandson of Ira Goodridge, who was born in Keene, New Hampshire, whence as a lad he accompanied his father on his removal to Westminster, Vermont. Thence he later removed to Sutton, that state, and finally to St. Lawrence county, New York, where he passed the remainder of his life. Of Ira Goodridge a previous publication speaks as follows: "During his residence in Vermont he was prominent in the politics of the state, serving in various civil capacities, and several times was elected to the legislature. He was distinguished for his patriotism, intelligence and religious devotion, as well as for the high value he always placed on education. These qualities, with other strong New England characteristics, made him conspicuous in the early history of St. Lawrence county."

From the same compilation we further quote as to the genealogy of Dr. Goodridge: "The Doctor's father, Horace Goodridge, was born in Vermont, and at the age of fourteen years removed with his father to their home in northern New York. At this early age he manifested a lively interest in educational matters, and he was finally graduated in Fort Covington Academy, then the only available educational institution in that part of the state. After his graduation he was identified with educational interests, having been for many years a teacher in the schools of northern New York. He married Levonia Colby, a native of Lebanon, New Hampshire, who through her mother, Sallie Page, was connected with the numerous family of that name conspicuous in the early colonial affairs of New England as well as in later history. Levonia Colby's father, Jeremiah Colby, was a native of Maine but was descended directly from Isaac Colby, who settled in Massachusetts about 1630. Ancestors of Dr. Goodridge's mother, both in the Page and Colby line, rendered conspicuous service in the cause of the colonists during the Revolutionary period, having been represented in most of the important military organizations of New England during that time."

Edwin A. Goodridge was born in St. Lawrence county New York, on the 26th of December, 1840, and was reared there, receiving his early education in the public schools and engaging in teaching at intervals while preparing himself for a collegiate course. He was thus situated at the time when the Civil war opened, and as a loyal descendant of patriot ancestors, he responded to the call for volunteers, enlisting as a private in Company K, One Hundred and Sixth New York Volunteer Infantry, with which he participated in a number of the important engagements of the great internecine conflict, notably the battles of Gettysburg and Harper's Ferry. In the fall of 1863 he was wounded at the battle of Mine Run and was transferred to the Wolfe Street Hospital, Alexandria, Virginia; while there he began his medical studies under the direction of the surgeon in charge, thus occupying his period of convalescence. He received his honorable discharge in the spring of 1864, returning to his home and thereafter devoting his attention to teaching once more in the intervals when not pursuing his studies in Princeton, from which he received the honorary degree of Master of Arts in 1870. In the meanwhile he had continued his medical studies under the direction of Dr. Maus R. Vedder and later with Dr. Thomas M. Markoe, finally being matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, where he was graduated as valedictorian of his class in 1871.

He located in Flushing, Long Island, which has ever since continued to be his field of professional endeavor, and here he is known as one of the most able and devoted physicians of the metropolitan district. He has been at different times visiting physician to the New York Infant Asylum, consulting physician to the same institution, counselor of the Alumni Association of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, was for several years consulting physician of the Queens County Medical Society, is an associate physician and surgeon of the Medical Association of Greater New York, a fellow of the New York Academy of Medicine, and a member of the Queens-Nassau County Medical Society, and is visiting surgeon to the Flushing Hospital.

Dr. Goodridge has maintained a lively interest in educational affairs, having been for ten years a member of the board of education of Flushing and serving as president of the body for five years of that time, and he is also a member of the Princeton Club of New York. In politics he is a Republican, his religious faith is that of the Congregational church, and fraternally he is identified with the Society of the Sons of the Revolution and the Grand Army of the Republic, in which latter he affiliates with George Hunstman Post No. 50, of which he has served as surgeon. In 1866 Dr. Goodridge was married to Miss Anna M. Field, who was born in England. They have two children, Lena, the wife of Allen W. Harrington; and Malcolm, who is a graduate of Princeton, class of 1894, and of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, and now in active practice in New York city.

H. BEECKMAN DELATOUR, M. D.—1887.

Henry Beeckman Delatour was born in New York city, March 27, 1866. His parents moved from the city in the following year and became residents of Douglaston, Long Island, where the family lived until 1876, when the father died. They then moved back to New York city, where he continued to live until 1889, when he moved to Brooklyn to begin his medical practice.

He was the fourth son of Albert Jousseau Delatour. His father was one of the first and largest manufacturers of soda and carbonic waters, for years having his business at 25½ Wall street, which at this time was one of the landmarks of the brokerage district. Mr. Delatour was for many years a member of the volunteer fire department of New York, running with Pearl Hose No. 28. For several years he was president of the department. Dr. Beeckman's mother was Josephine Labatut, daughter of John M. J. Labatut, one of the best known importers of Mahogany and hard woods during the early part of this last century. There are two sisters, Josephine and Marie, and three brothers, John Albert, Albert Jousseau and George

H. Beckman Delator.

Labatut. With the exception of Henry Beeckman, all of the boys followed the calling of the maternal grandfather and are successful lumber merchants of New York.

Dr. Delatour received his preliminary education in the Flushing Institute, the public schools of New York and in the College of the City of New York. He studied medicine in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, being a member of the last class, that of 1887, to graduate from the old building on Twenty-third street. The following summer and fall he spent as substitute at the New York, Roosevelt and Chambers Street hospitals and in January, 1888, entered upon his duties as house surgeon at the Methodist Episcopal (Seney) Hospital, Brooklyn. In October of the same year he was made assistant attending surgeon in the same institution, a position he held until July 1, 1896. At this time he became attending surgeon at the Long Island College and St. John's hospitals. In 1891 he was made attending surgeon to the Norwegian Hospital and it is largely owing to his successful work that this institution has attained its reputation and renown.

Dr. Delatour now limits his practice to general surgery, including gynecology. He is a rapid and skillful operator, exercising excellent judgment, and while radical in his views, never allows his better judgment to be overthrown by a desire to operate. His operations, as reported from time to time, cover the entire field of surgery, some of the more remarkable being the removal of the entire stomach for carcinoma; this was the third case recorded; the patient lived for over two years and in the meantime gave birth to a healthy child. His cases of removal of the clavicle, four in number, are remarkable for the demonstration of the complete usefulness of the arm after the loss of this bone. He was the first to suggest and to practice the use of the X-ray to guide the forceps in the removal of foreign bodies from the oesophagus.

As a scientific writer, Dr. Delatour is original and concise, his papers containing many valuable and new suggestions. Among his writings may be mentioned: "Heat as a Means of Sterilization," "The Diagnosis and Technique of Operation in Appendicitis," "The Importance of Rectal Examination in Doubtful Cases of Appendicitis," "A Contribution to the Surgery of the Stomach," "Empyema of the Gall Bladder," "A Successful Case of Removal of the Stomach for Carcinoma," "Removal of a Foreign Body from the Oesophagus by the Aid of the X-ray," "Report of Four Cases of Excision of the Clavicle," "A New Procedure for the Radical Cure of Umbilical Hernia," "Perforating Ulcer of the Stomach and Ulcer of the Duodenum Simulating Acute Appendicitis."

Dr. Delatour is a member of the Medical Society of the County of Kings, of which he was a censor for five years, and a member of its building committee during the erection of its new library building; the Associated Physicians of Long Island, the Brooklyn Surgical Society, of which he was president in 1898; the Brooklyn Pathological Society, the Medical Club, of which he is president; the New York Academy of Medicine, the Hospital Graduates' Club, the Society of Ex-Internes of the Methodist Episcopal Hospital, and a permanent member of the Medical Society of the State of New York. On October 16, 1895, he was married to Miss Jeannie Marie Peck, of Brooklyn. He and his wife are members of St. Luke's Episcopal church. He is a member of the Crescent Athletic and Montante clubs, and the Church Club of Long Island, besides being a member of several County clubs. His favorite recreations are sailing and driving, as well as golf, bowling and fishing, and it is by the relaxation afforded by these amusements that he is enabled to endure the arduous and nervous strain imposed by a large consulting and operative practice.

CHARLES OSCAR THOMPSON, M. D.—1889.

Dr. Charles Oscar Thompson was born August 30, 1862, in Monson, Massachusetts, and is the son of George Henry and Lucy Paine (Fales) Thompson. His maternal ancestry is Scotch-Irish, the founder of the American branch of the family having emigrated in 1718. The Fales family is of English origin and has been represented in America since the early part of the seventeenth century. Both the Thompsons and Fales have continued since their emigration to reside in Massachusetts.

The early education of Dr. Thompson was received in the public schools of Monson, Massachusetts, and at the Monson Academy. In 1887 he graduated from the Massachusetts College of Pharmacy with the degree of Graduate in Pharmacy, and in 1889 received from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University the degree of Doctor of Medicine. The following year he began practice at his present address in Boston, 57 Cambridge street, where he has since remained, and where he established, in 1899, a private surgical hospital.

Dr. Thompson is a member of the Massachusetts Medical Society, the American Medical Association, the Boston Medical Library Association, is medical examiner to the Mutual Reserve Fund Life Association of New York, assistant general medical examiner to the American Order of Fraternal Helpers, and medical examiner to the Massachusetts civil service commission. He is a member of the New England Historical and Genealogical Society. His favorite recreations are found in the study of botany, in genealogical researches, and in fishing and travel. His religious views are Unitarian. Dr. Thompson married, October 15, 1890, in Monson, Massachusetts, Carrie E. King, a descendant of Elder Thomas King, who settled in Scituate, Massachusetts, in 1640. They have two children: Howard King, born May 1, 1893; and Helen Lucy, born June 22, 1900.

EUGENE WALKER BELKNAP, M. D.—1892.

Dr. Eugene Walker Belknap, of Syracuse, New York, although not yet in the prime of life, has already earned for himself a well recognized and honorable position in the ranks of the profession. He was born August 13, 1867, in Newburgh, Orange county, New York, and is the son of Moses Cook and Marietta (McCamly) Belknap. His early education was received in the public schools of his native city, and also under the instruction of private tutors. Later he attended Sigler's preparatory school, where he was prepared to enter Princeton University, from which he graduated in the class of 1889 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts, and in 1892 received the degree of Master of Arts.

Having decided to devote himself to the work of a medical practitioner, he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he graduated in the class of 1892. Immediately thereafter he received the appointment to the J. Hood Wright Memorial Hospital, serving the full term, after which he was appointed to the Sloane Maternity Hospital. Being thus thoroughly equipped for the duties of his profession, Dr. Belknap removed, in January, 1894, to Syracuse, where he entered upon a career of private practice, in which he has met with the most gratifying success. While in New York Dr. Belknap served as house surgeon to the Manhattan Hospital, and he now holds the position of lecturer on obstetrics in the medical department of Syracuse University. He is also obstetrician to the Hospital of the Good Shepherd, and the Syracuse Free Dispensary.

Dr. Belknap is a member of the Syracuse Academy of Medicine and of the Onondaga County Medical Society. He is first vice president of the Sloane Alumni Association, and a member of the J. Hood Wright Alumni Association. Dr. Belknap married, in 1897, Miss Isabella Hall Mann, of Syracuse, New York. They are the parents of one son, Eugene McCamly Belknap.

CHARLES RUDOLPH WEED, M. D.—1879.

In the medical fraternity of Utica, New York, Dr. Charles R. Weed has acquired an enviable reputation as an earnest and proficient practitioner and a careful observer of the laws and ethics of his profession. He was born in New York city, April 6, 1848, the son of James Madison and Rachel (Snyder) Weed.

At the Walnut Hills School, Geneva, New York, a preparatory school for Hobart College, and at the Collegiate School conducted by George Payn Quackenbos, Dr. Weed obtained an excellent literary education. After his graduation from the latter named institution he entered the civil department of the government service, where he remained for two years, and after resigning from this position had a mercantile experience of seven years in New York city. He met with a large degree of success in this undertaking, and was an example of what determination and force, combined with the highest degree of business integrity can accomplish for a man of natural ability and strength of character. Dr. Weed then took up the study of law in the office of Hon. J. Thomas Spriggs, of Utica, but this not proving congenial to his taste, he decided to make the practice of medicine his vocation in life, and commenced his preparatory studies under the careful instruction of Dr. Francis Delafield; later he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, and completed the regular course there in 1879, the degree of Doctor of Medicine being conferred upon him. The following two years he acted in the capacity of house surgeon of St. Elizabeth Hospital, and was also connected with the department of the eye, ear, nose and throat of the Eastern District Dispensary of New York for five years. He also conducted a general practice in New York city until 1889, when he removed to Utica, New York, and has since engaged in special work on the nose, ear and throat. His patronage has steadily increased in volume and importance, and as a skilled laryngologist he has a very enviable reputation among the members of the medical profession in the city; he is also the consulting specialist of the nose, ear and throat to St. Elizabeth Hospital, Utica, and for six years served as one of the United States pension examiners at Utica, New York, where he was appointed secretary of the board.

Dr. Weed is a member of the Oneida County Medical Society, the Utica Medical Library Association, the Medico-Legal Society of New York, and the Physicians' Mutual Aid Association. He is also affiliated with the Sons of the American Revolution. In 1889 Dr. Weed was united in marriage to Miss Christine Whann, daughter of Hon. William Whann, the president of the First National Bank of New Orleans, Louisiana. They have one daughter, Ruth Barneveld Weed.

CHARLES JAMES HOWARD, M. D.—1897.

Dr. Charles James Howard was born February 26, 1873, in Holyoke, Massachusetts, and is the son of Charles Henry and Susan Elizabeth (Wilson) Howard. His early education was received in the Statsir School, Somerville, New Jersey, and in England, and at the Waterloo Academy, Waterloo, New York.

He took a medical preparatory course at Hobart College, Geneva, New York, and in 1897 received from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University the degree of Doctor of Medicine. Preceding his graduation he served as interne in the Kingston Avenue Hospital, Brooklyn, New York, and in 1898 was resident physician at Ardenale Hospital in that city. Subsequently he began practice in Boston, where he has since remained. In 1898 he received an appointment as visiting surgeon to the Boston Emergency Hospital. Dr. Howard is a member of the Kappa Alpha Society, the Old Dorchester Club, and the Victorian Club.

CALVIN B. WEST, M. D.—1893.

Dr. Calvin B. West, a well established and highly esteemed physician of East Onondaga, New York, was born March 29, 1867, in Rome, Oneida county, New York, and is the son of Dr. M. Calvin and Felicia H. (Williams) West. His primary education was received in the public schools and in the high school of his native city, from which he went to the Phillips Academy, Andover, Massachusetts, from which he graduated in the class of 1886, having been prepared to enter Amherst College, where he spent three years.

When the time arrived for Dr. West to make choice of a life calling, he decided to adopt the profession of his father, under whose careful guidance he pursued his preparatory studies. Subsequently he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he graduated in the class of 1893. He then accepted an appointment at the Paterson General Hospital in Paterson, New Jersey, where he remained one year. On the expiration of his term of service, Dr. West engaged in the active practice of his profession in his native city, and in 1896 went to East Onondaga, where he has since remained, and where he is in the enjoyment of a large and steadily increasing practice. Dr. West is active in discharging the duties of a citizen, in proof of which may be cited the fact that he served for three years as health officer of the town of Onondaga, and that he has also acted as physician to the Onondaga county penitentiary.

Dr. West is a member of the American Medical Association, the Onondaga County Medical Society, and the Syracuse Academy of Medicine. He finds time to maintain the associations of his college days, being enrolled as a member of the Chi Psi fraternity. Dr. West married, in 1894, Miss Adelaide Mayhurst Sherwood, daughter of Bradford Sherwood, of Jamesville. Their family consists of two sons.

EDMUND WEST EEDE, M. D.—1886.

Dr. Edmund West Eede was born in Kingsville, Ontario, and is the son of George and Elizabeth (Arner) Eede. The former is a native of London, England, and the latter a descendant of one of the Dutch families which settled in Pennsylvania during the colonial period. Dr. Eede studied at Woodstock College, Woodstock, Ontario, and afterward went to Ann Arbor and entered the University of Michigan, from which he graduated in 1883 with the degree of Bachelor of Science. He then matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he received in 1886 the degree of Doctor of Medicine.

After serving for a year in the Presbyterian Hospital and in the New York Polyclinic, he returned to Detroit, where he has since been actively engaged in practice, making a specialty of the diseases of women. Dr. Eede is a member of the Wayne Club, affiliates with the Detroit Commandery, K. T., in Masonry; he is a member of the Wayne County Medical Society, as well as of the Michigan State Medical Society. While bound to no political party, he advocates, as a rule, the principles advanced and supported by the Republicans. He is chief examiner for a number of life insurance companies.

WARREN S. SIMMONS, M. D.—1892.

Warren S. Simmons, M. D., was born in Providence, Rhode Island, February 27, 1867. His grandfather, James F. Simmons, was a native of Providence and a member of the United States Senate from Rhode Island in the time of President Lincoln, with whom he had a personal acquaintance. He had four sons, one of whom, Warren S., married Mary Jane Wright.

Warren S. Simmons, M. D., was the son of Warren S. and Mary Jane (Wright) Simmons. He was well grounded in elementary studies at the Providence private schools, where he fitted for Brown University, completing the regular college course and graduating in 1889. Under the instruction of Dr. Charles H. Lewis he was soon prepared to enter the College of Physicians and Surgeons, from which he was graduated in 1892. He supplemented the knowledge acquired there by one year's service as interne at St. John's Hospital, Brooklyn, an institution well known to those interested in the Church Charity Foundation, of which it is an adjunct. He was afterwards connected with this hospital in the capacity of assistant surgeon, and in 1902 he was appointed attending surgeon. He was assistant physician at the Kings County Hospital for four years and is consulting surgeon of the Jewish Dispensary.

Dr. Simmons was appointed demonstrator of anatomy in the Long Island Hospital Medical College, and is now adjunct professor of anatomy. He has attained quite as noticeable results in his private practice, and he is already characterized as one of the successful young physicians of Brooklyn, and as one who will do honor to the profession. He is perhaps as well known in his relationship to the various medical clubs as in his public and private practice. He is a member of the American Academy of Medicine, the Medical Society of Greater New York, the Kings County Medical Society, the Brooklyn Medical Society, the Brooklyn Surgical Society, and the Brooklyn Pathological Society. He was married October 19, 1899, to Angela H. Field, who was born in Jersey City, New Jersey, and died February 11, 1903. Dr. Simmons' address is 338 Lafayette avenue.

FRANCIS EDWARD DOUGHTY, M. D.—1869.

Dr. Francis E. Doughty, of 512 Madison avenue, New York city, was born in Troy, New York, August 14, 1847, a son of Samuel Gale and Jane Rebecca (Hart) Doughty. On the paternal side Dr. Doughty is a descendant of the Rev. Francis Doughty, who came to this country from England in 1633 and settled in Taunton, Massachusetts, he being one of the Pilgrim pastors; on the maternal side he is descended from Francis Cooke (in three lines) and from Richard Warren, both of whom were signers of the compact and passengers on the Mayflower when it brought its band of heroic pilgrims to the shore of the new world.

The early educational advantages enjoyed by Dr. Doughty were acquired in Sedgwick's School at Great Barrington, Massachusetts, after which he pursued a course in the Starr Commercial and Collegiate Institute in Yonkers, New York, and in the Russell's Commercial and Collegiate Institute of New Haven, Connecticut. He began the study of medicine in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which institution he was graduated in 1869. Immediately after receiving his diploma he was appointed attending surgeon in the New York Homeopathic Dispensary, also professor of surgery in the New York Medical College and Hospital for Women; these positions he retained for three years. In 1872 he was appointed lecturer and subsequently professor of genito-urinary diseases in the New York Homeopathic Medical College, which position he held for twenty-two years, and in 1876 he received the appointment of professor of anatomy in the same institution. In 1889 Dr. Doughty resigned from this chair in order to accept the professorship of gynecology, which chair, as professor of clinical gynecology, he now holds. About 1870 he was appointed attending surgeon to the Hahnemann Hospital and continued as such for about twenty years, after which he was appointed consulting surgeon, which position he now holds. When the commissioners placed the Ward's Island Hospital under the homeopathic school, Dr. Doughty was appointed one of its attending surgeons and served as such for ten years; he also acted in the same capacity to the Five Point House of Industry for ten years, has been the consulting surgeon to Flower Hospital since its foundation, it being now a part of the New York Homeopathic Medical College and Hospital, where he holds weekly clinics in surgical gynecology; and has also been the consulting surgeon to Laura Franklin Hospital since its foundation. In addition to these numerous duties he also attends to a large consulting practice and has written a number of articles for the medical journals.

Dr. Doughty is a senior member of the American Institute of Homeopathy, of the New York State and County Medical Societies, the New York Medical Club, the Unanimous Club, the Jahr Club, the Academy of Pathological Science, and the Materia Medica Society. Socially he is a member of the St. Nicholas Society, the Fencers' Club, the New York Yacht Club, Colonial Wars, Mayflower Society and Sons of the Revolution. On October 12, 1868, Dr. Doughty was united in marriage to Miss Hannah M. Starr, and three children have been born to them: Augustus W., Nathaniel Winthrop and Frances Edna Doughty, the first two named being now deceased.

HENRY C. JOHNSTON, M. D.—1890.

As early as the year 1820 the paternal grandfather of Dr. Johnston was graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons; in 1852 there went forth as a graduate of the same institution Dr. Francis Upton Johnston, the father of Henry C. Johnston; and as a member of the class of 1890. Henry Cortlandt Johnston received his degree of Doctor of Medicine in the same college. Thus three generations are represented in the alumni in this one family, and such has been the high reputation maintained by each member in the line of his profession that a consideration of the salient points in the life of each is certainly apropos in this compilation.

Henry Cortlandt Johnston was born in New York city on the 21st of May, 1866, the son of Dr. Francis Upton and Margaret (Babcock) Johnston. He received his preliminary educational discipline in the excellent parish school maintained by historic old Trinity church. After three years spent as clerk in a commission office, he matriculated in the alma mater of his father and grandfather, the College of Physicians and Surgeons, where he prosecuted his professional studies and investigation with marked diligence, and was graduated as a member of the class of 1890. After his graduation, with a view to gaining practical and wider experience in clinical work, Dr. Johnston for a time did substitute duty in one or more of the metropolitan hospitals, and he then entered upon the active practice of his profession on Staten Island, becoming the assistant and coadjutor of his honored father, who had here located in 1878. After the death of his father he succeeded to the large and representative practice which had been established, and he has maintained the high professional prestige of his father and grandfather. He maintains his headquarters at 17 Central avenue, New Brighton.

Dr. Johnston is a member of the Richmond County Medical Society, the New York State Medical Association and the Medical Society of Greater New York, while he is also a visiting physician to the Smith Infirmary. On July 3, 1895, he was married to Edith Scott, of Cooperstown, New York, daughter of the late Henry A. Scott. They have two children, Edith Scott, Margaret Sennot. Their son, Francis Upton, died in 1901.

EDWARD CARY RUSHMORE, M. D.—1886.

Dr. Edward Cary Rushmore, an eminent and successful physician and surgeon of Tuxedo Park, New York, was born in Albany county, New York, March 21, 1862. He was indebted to the district schools of Albany for his preliminary education, and later was placed under the instruction of private tutors, who prepared him to enter Swarthmore College of Pennsylvania, from which he was graduated with the degree of Bachelor of Science in the class of 1881. Choosing the medical profession for his vocation in life, he pursued a course of reading under the efficient preceptorship of Dr. Walter Mendelson, and subsequently matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which he received his degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1886.

After spending an interneship in the Jersey City Hospital and the State Hospital for the Insane at Morris Plains, New Jersey, he located at Tuxedo Park, New York, in 1887. In 1893-4 he spent some time in the General Hospital at Vienna, Austria. He was soon recognized as a physician of sound judgment, of ability, of earnest purpose and of marked devotion to his duties, and throughout the passing years he has enjoyed an extensive and lucrative patronage among the most select and wealthy families of the town. He is particularly well informed and his investigations have been carried on along original lines, and he has added many valuable truths of great aid to the science which he represents. Dr. Rushmore is a prominent member of the New York Academy of Medicine, the International Railroad Association, the Railway Surgeons' Association of New York, and the Erie Railroad Surgeons' Association.

ARTHUR CONKLIN BRUSH, M. D.—1884.

Dr. Arthur Conklin Brush, of 29 South Portland avenue, Brooklyn, New York, who for many years has made a specialty of neurology, is a direct descendant of Philip Brush, who, accompanied by his two brothers, John and James Brush, came to New Amsterdam about the year 1645. Conklin Brush, grandfather of Dr. Arthur C. Brush, was born March 8, 1794, and came to Brooklyn in 1827. During the twenty-three years of his business life he was at the head of nine different firms, all of which enjoyed a large degree of prosperity. In 1830 he was made a member of the board of trustees of the old village of Brooklyn; he was also president of the first board of aldermen, and was appointed to fill the responsible position of mayor of Brooklyn, January 1, 1851. He was one of the committee of citizens appointed to select a site for the city hall, and it was largely through his instrumentality that so many improvements were made in the city. In 1834 he obtained the original charter of Brooklyn. In co-operation with Mr. Daniel Richards, Mr. Brush conceived the idea of erecting the great Erie basin, and secured the papers of incorporation in 1840. From the first he was active in the movement to secure a proper water supply for the city, and he was subsequently appointed a member of the board of construction of the water commission. He was one of the organizers of the Dime Savings Bank of Brooklyn, and the Mechanics' Bank, and at the close of his term of office as mayor he became the president of the latter named institution. His death occurred July 4, 1870.

J. Theodore Brush, father of Dr. Arthur C. Brush, was a native of Brooklyn, and secured an excellent literary education in the schools and colleges of that city. Subsequently he became a member of the well-known firm of A. B. Bayliss & Company, and was also a member of the New York Stock Exchange. Mr. Brush was prominently identified with the Masonic fraternity, having attained high honors in that organization. He was united in marriage to Miss Mary Elizabeth Pettit, and two children were born to them, Dr. Brush being the only surviving child.

Arthur C. Brush acquired his education at the Polytechnic Institute of Brooklyn, from which he graduated, and subsequently matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city; he studied under the efficient preceptorship of Dr. Francis Delafield and received his degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1884. Immediately after his graduation he went abroad, and studied at the Ecole Medicine in the city of Paris, after which he pursued a short course of study in St. Bartholomew's College, London, with the view of making neurology a specialty. In 1889 he returned to his native country, opened an office in Brooklyn and for ten years was engaged in the general practice of his profession. Since then he has made a specialty of neurology, and is recognized as an authority on that subject; he has been called upon to give expert evidence in courts of law in important cases affecting personal liberty and property rights. In addition to his extensive private practice, he acts as visiting neurologist for the Kings County Hospital, the Brooklyn Eye and Ear Hospital, and the Williamsburg Hospital; he is also the consulting neurologist in the Bushwick and East Brooklyn Dispensary, the Brooklyn Central Hospital, the Bedford Hospital and Dispensary, the St. Giles Home for Cripples, and many others.

Dr. Brush is the author of many valuable scientific papers and monographs, among them being: "Therapeutic Results in Nervous Syphilis," published in the Brooklyn Medical Journal, October, 1898; "The Micro-Organisms Found in the Blood in the Malarial Fevers," published in the Brooklyn Medical Journal, January, 1893; "Mental Influence in Pathological Conditions," published in the Brooklyn Medical Journal, January, 1896; "Cerebral Neurasthenia," published in the Medical Legal Journal, September, 1897; "Puerperal Myelitis," published in the Medical News, March 26, 1898; "The Nature of Paranyellonus Multipen," published in the American Journal of the Medical Sciences, December, 1899; and the "Treatment of Chronic Nervous Diseases in Patients of the Rheumatic Diathesis," published in the Medical Review, September 10, 1892.

Dr. Brush is a member of the York Neurological Society, the Brooklyn Society for Neurology, the American Medical Association, the Medical Society of the State of New York, the New York State Medical Association, the Kings County Medical Society, the Kings County Medical Association, the Long Island Medical Society, the Brooklyn Medical Society, the Associated Physicians of Long Island, the Association of Physicians of the Greater City of New York, the Brooklyn Pathological Society, and the Hospital Graduates' Club. Dr. Brush takes an active interest in athletics, being a member of the crew of the Crescent Athletic Club; he is also interested in scientific photography and is an ardent microscopist. On October 27, 1897, Dr. Brush married Miss May Larned Engs, of Brooklyn, New York. Both Dr. Brush and his wife are active and consistent members of Holy Trinity Episcopal church.

MONTROSE REUBEN RICHARD, M. D.—1877.

Dr. Montrose R. Richard, who resides at 77 East One Hundred and Sixteenth street, New York city, was born in Benton, Alabama, June 21, 1856, the son of Samuel and Elisa (Siegel) Richard, the former being born in Birkenfeld, Oldenberg, Germany, of an old Spanish and French ancestry, and the latter named was a native of Rhenish Bavaria.

The early educational advantages enjoyed by Dr. Richard were acquired in the high school of Mobile, Alabama, after which he attended Barton Academy of the same city. He commenced the study of medicine in the Alabama Medical College at Mobile, Alabama, where he attended two courses, and subsequently matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, and after attending two full courses was graduated in March, 1877, with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. Dr. Richard then went abroad and continued his medical studies in the various schools of France, Germany and Austria for three years. After his return he received the appointment of resident physician of the Touro Infirmary of New Orleans, Louisiana, where he remained for one year, and he also enjoyed a large consulting practice in the same city for three years. In 1883 Dr. Richard took up his residence in New York city, where he has since been actively engaged in a general practice of medicine and surgery. He has also been class neurologist of the German Hospital and Dispensary and medical interne of Mt. Sinai Hospital, New York.

Dr. Richard is a member of the American Medical Association, the New York State and County Medical Society, the Academy of Medicine, the German Medical Society, the New York Neurological Society, the Metropolitan Medical Society, the Harlem Medical Association, of which he is ex-president, the Eastern Medical Society, the Physicians' Mutual Aid Association, and the Alumni Association of the College of Physicians and Surgeons. He is also a member of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and in 1876, while a resident of Mobile, Alabama, he was elected president of the Nott Medical Society, and held positions of trust in a number of secret organizations. On June 18, 1890, Dr. Richard married Miss Miriam Blath, and one child has blessed the marriage, Lloyd M., born November 17, 1891. Mrs. Richard died January 3, 1898.

MARTIN LAURENCE BODKIN, M. D.—1894.

Dr. Martin Laurence Bodkin was born February 14, 1869, in Hoboken, New Jersey, and is the son of Martin R. and Pamela E. Bodkin. When Dr. Bodkin was nine years of age his parents removed to Brooklyn, where he received his education in the city schools, and under the instruction of private tutors. Completing his education, he had a brief business experience, during which time he pursued his medical studies under the guidance of his uncle, Dr. D. G. Bodkin. In 1894 he graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. After graduation he entered upon the practice of his profession in Brooklyn, where he has since remained, his present address being 290 Clinton avenue. He is connected with the Bushwick Central Hospital, and is medical examiner of applicants for teachers' licenses, examiner for Phoenix Mutual Life Insurance Company and Catholic Benevolent Legion. He is a member of the Medical Society of the County of Kings, the Medical Society of the State of New York, and the Brooklyn Medical Society. Dr. Bodkin married, in October, 1897, Aimee C. Griffin, a native of Brooklyn and daughter of Dr. John Griffin.

HENRY ARNOLD ALDERTON, M. D.—1885.

Dr. Henry Arnold Alderton, special medical and surgical practitioner of Brooklyn, New York, was born in New York city, December 28, 1863, a son of Henry and Amelia (Gibbins) Alderton, who came from Sussex county, England, about 1850, and located in New York. Dr. Alderton received his general education in the Polytechnic Institute of Brooklyn, and was graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York in 1885 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. After one year of post-graduate work in Bellevue and Roosevelt hospitals he became house surgeon in St. Joseph's Hospital, of Paterson, New Jersey.

In 1887 he located in Brooklyn and engaged in private practice. During the winter of 1890-91 he studied in the University of Berlin, and upon his return to Brooklyn took up special practice on diseases of the eye and ear, in which he has been highly successful. He is aural surgeon to the Brooklyn Eye and Ear Hospital, the Bushwick Hospital, the Kings County Hospital and the Nassau County Hospital; visiting otologist to the Home for Friendless Women and Children; chief of the aural department of the Polhemus Clinic, and assistant to the chair of otology in the Long Island College Hospital.

He is a member of the American Otological Society and of the New York Otological Society, a member of the Medical Society of the County of Kings, and of the section of Laryngology, Rhinology and Otology; the Kings County Medical Association, the Associated Physicians of Long Island, the Brooklyn Medical Society, and was one of the founders of the Brooklyn Medical Club.

Dr. Alderton was for some time editor of the Annals of Otology and Rhinology, from which he resigned when the paper removed to St. Louis. He wrote the section of "Purulent Diseases of the Middle Ear" for Posey and Wright's "Text Book of Diseases of the Eye and Ear, Nose and Throat," and is the author of a large number of scientific papers which were read before medical societies and subsequently published in pamphlet form and in the medical journals. Among these were: "Investigation with Tuning-fork of Middle Register in Over Six Hundred Cases," "The Operation of Mastoid Antrotomy for the Cure of Obstinate O. M. P. C. with Description and Presentation of the Author's Antrotome," "Trephining of the Stapedial Foot-plate for Otitis Sclerosa," "Tuning-fork Reaction in Affections of the Sound Conducting Apparatus," "The Treatment of Uncomplicated Suppurations of Middle Ear," etc.

Dr. Alderton married, March 10, 1885, Miss Marion Starr Decker, of Brooklyn, and they are the parents of three children, Dorothy M., Barbara and Henry Arnold Alderton, Jr.

GEORGE FLETCHER CHANDLER, M. D.—1895.

Dr. George Fletcher Chandler, physician and surgeon of Kingston, Ulster county, New York, was born in Clyde, Wayne county, New York, December 13, 1873, the son of the Rev. George W. Chandler, a prominent clergyman of the Methodist denomination. He spent the early years of his life in the various cities in which his father was installed as pastor, so that his education was acquired in several schools, principally in New York city and in the grammar school at Portland, Maine, which was under the competent supervision of Bishop Scott; he also attended the Ithaca high school and for two years was enrolled as a student in the Syracuse University. Desiring to become a member of the medical profession, he commenced his preparatory studies under the guidance of Dr. Ellsworth Eliot, Jr., as preceptor; after pursuing the regular course of reading he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which he was graduated with the degree of Doctor of Medicine in the year 1895. After passing a competitive examination, Dr. Chandler was appointed to the position of interne at St. Vincent's Hospital, New York, where he remained for eighteen months and gained a wide and varied experience. He then established an office at 33 West Twelfth street, New York city, where he conducted a large and lucrative general practice until January, 1901, when he removed to Kingston, where his ability as a skilled physician was soon recognized. He devotes himself to a general practice, but having a natural aptitude and liking for the science of surgery, he is particularly interested in that branch of the profession and the success he has attained has been phenomenal.

Geo. F. Chandler

In addition to his private practice Dr. Chandler is the surgeon to the West Shore and the Walkill Valley Railroad, and to the Ontario and Western Railroad, visiting surgeon to the Kingston City Hospital, formerly assisting visiting surgeon to St. Vincent's Hospital and gynecologist to the out-patient department of the same institution, physician for John Wanamaker's store in New York city, and surgeon in chief of Our Lady of Victory Sanitarium. He is a prominent member of the Ulster County Medical Society, the Medical Association of Ulster county, St. Vincent's Alumni Society, and the Elliott Medical Quiz Society. On January 1, 1900, Dr. Chandler married Miss Martha Schultze, of Boston, Massachusetts.

WILLIAM C. WOOLSEY, M. D.—1898.

Dr. William C. Woolsey, associate secretary of the Medical Society of the County of Kings, was born in Jersey City, New Jersey, where he acquired his early education, which was supplemented later by a thorough course of study at Stevens College, Hoboken, New Jersey. Deciding to lead a professional life, he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which institution he was graduated in the class of 1898. The same year he was appointed resident physician at the Kings County Hospital, which position he occupied until 1900, and since that time has served in the capacity of instructor of clinical diagnosis in the Long Island College, adjunct gynecologist of the Polhemus Medical Clinic at the Long Island College Hospital, and associate dermatologic attending physician at the Kings County Hospital. He is a member and associate secretary of the Kings County Medical Society, and secretary of the Long Island Alumni Association of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city. His address is 29 Lafayette avenue, Brooklyn.

REED BRINSMADE BONTECOU, M. D.—1889.

Dr. Reed Brinsmade Bontecou, of Troy, New York, highly esteemed as a physician and of especial repute as a surgeon, belongs to a family in which the medical profession may be said to be an inheritance. Dr. R. B. Bontecou, father of Dr. Reed Brinsmade Bontecou, was born in Troy, New York, where he received excellent educational advantages, and having selected the science of medicine as a profession, entered upon a thorough course of study and training. After graduation he began at once the active practice of his profession. At the outbreak of the Civil war he enlisted and was commissioned brigade surgeon, in which capacity he served through the entire four years from 1861 to 1865, when he was mustered out, having been honored with the most responsible medical positions in the service. After the war he resumed his private practice and has attained to a high standing in the ranks of the profession. He has been a liberal contributor to current medical literature and one of the largest contributors to the surgical history of the war.

Dr. Reed Brinsmade Bontecou was born in Washington, D. C., and passed his boyhood in Troy, New York, receiving his primary education in St. Paul's school, the Troy Academy, and the celebrated "Gunnery," in Washington, Connecticut, where he was prepared to enter Williams College. There he remained eighteen months, and afterward entered Harvard University, where he remained one year. Having in early life formed a preference for the practice of medicine, he decided to make it a life calling, and began a course of preliminary study under the guidance of his father, having also as preceptor Dr. H. B. Sands, of New York. At the close of his period of preparation he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he graduated in the class of 1889. He entered upon the active practice of his profession in Troy, where he has built up for himself a reputation as a physician which is second to none in the community. While giving his attention to general practice, Dr. Bontecou has a decided preference for surgery, in which he has attained to no small distinction. In 1893, when the advent of the cholera was looked for, Dr. Bontecou served as one of the medical sanitary superintendents, and during the smallpox epidemic, in 1898, he vaccinated over three thousand women and children. He was surgeon to the Watervliet Arsenal for two years, and has also served as adjutant of the state Sons of Veterans, and as member of Company D, Second Regiment, New York National Guard.

Dr. Bontecou is a member of the Rensselaer County Medical Society, of which he was at one time president. He has also acted as secretary to this society. He belongs to the Medical Association of Troy and Vicinity, and is a permanent member of the New York State Medical Society. Dr. Bontecou was for nine years connected with the Marshall Infirmary, and for the same length of time served as a member of the pension board. Dr. Bontecou married, in 1890, Miss Lulu May Vail, of East Marion, Long Island. Their family consists of four children, Susan May, Louise Cluett, Grace Marion and Eleanor.

ADAM SCHAUF, M. D.—1887.

Dr. Adam Schauf, practicing physician and surgeon of Brooklyn, New York, was born in that city, September 9, 1865, and was an attendant for many years of the public schools, a graduate of the Boys' high school, where he acquired an excellent literary education, after which he pursued a course of instruction in languages from private tutors. Wishing to enter upon a professional career he began the study of medicine under the personal direction of Dr. John Kraeuter. Being an earnest and studious scholar he was soon qualified to matriculate in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which he was graduated in the class of 1887.

Shortly after securing his degree of Doctor of Medicine, Dr. Schauf went abroad in order to further qualify himself for his medical career, and for two years studied under the competent preceptorship of Professors Billroth, Kapozi, Politzer, Schroeter and Carl Braun in the city of Vienna, and Professor A. Martin in Berlin, these studies being chiefly confined to gynecology, for which branch Dr. Schauf showed a special preference. In 1889 Dr. Schauf returned to this country and established an office in Brooklyn, New York, where he has since been engaged in the active practice of his profession, being now regarded as one of the most successful representatives of the medical fraternity in the city. His time is largely devoted to gynecology; he also acts in the capacity of gynecologist at the Bushwick Hospital, was gynecologist to the East Brooklyn Dispensary, and examiner for the Equitable Life Insurance Company. Dr. Schauf is treasurer and a director of American Gynecology, a monthly journal devoted to gynecology and abdominal surgery. He is a prominent member of the Kings County Medical Association, the Associated Physicians of Long Island, Brooklyn Medical Society, and the Medical Society of the State of New York. On September 2, 1891, Dr. Schauf was united in marriage to Miss Emma Armann, of New York city, and their children are Willis Adam and Mildred Jeanetta Schauf.

JOHN CLARENDON TODD, M. D.—1882.

Dr. John Clarendon Todd, of Tarrytown, New York, who has been for nearly twenty years identified with the medical profession of Westchester county as one of the able physicians in that section of the country, was born August 12, 1857, in the place where he now resides. Dr. Todd passed his boyhood in Tarrytown, receiving his elementary education in the village schools of that place, and later becoming a student at Rutgers College, New Brunswick, New Jersey, where he graduated in the class of 1879.

Deciding to devote himself to the practice of medicine, Dr. Todd pursued his preparatory studies with the instruction of Dr. T. M. Markoe, after which he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York, and graduated in the class of 1882. After serving one year in the Colored Hospital of New York, Dr. Todd returned to Tarrytown and entered upon the active practice of his profession. His success has been very marked, and for many years he has held an assured position as a skillful medical practitioner. In his professional opinions Dr. Todd may be described as a man of liberal and advanced ideas, and is fully in sympathy with progress in all matters pertaining to his profession. Dr. Todd is a member of the Westchester County Medical Association, and is also on the staff of the Tarrytown Hospital.

DANIEL BAILEY HARDENBERGH, M. D.—1891.

Dr. Daniel B. Hardenbergh, one of the prominent general practitioners of Middletown, New York, was born in Port Jervis, New York, March 13, 1866. He acquired his literary education at the Port Jervis Academy and later was under instruction from private tutors in order to prepare him to enter Yale University, from which he was graduated in 1888. When the time came for him to choose his vocation in life, his thoughts naturally turned to the medical profession, as his grandfather and father were both prominent physicians and graduates of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York.

Daniel Hardenbergh began his preparatory studies under the careful guidance of his father, and later matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York city, from which he was graduated with the degree of Doctor of Medicine in the class of 1891. After passing his examination he was appointed interne on the fourth medical division of Bellevue Hospital, which position he filled for the period of two years, and subsequently was actively connected with the out-patient department of the New York Hospital. He also gained considerable valuable experience by performing some work in the Post-Graduate School and Hospital; also at the Polyclinic, having in the meantime an office in New York for the practice of his profession. In October, 1894, he removed to Middletown, New York, and entered upon the work for which he was so well adapted both by disposition and training, and in which he has achieved such well deserved distinction. In 1898 Dr. Hardenbergh visited Europe, and again in 1901, for the purpose of prosecuting his medical study and research. He has been appointed a member of the board of education and serves in the capacity of medical director for the Young Men's Christian Association.

Dr. Hardenbergh has been a liberal contributor to medical literature, among his writings being "Salophen in Acute Rheumatism," "Hypertrophies in the Tonsillar Ring," and "Post-Graduate Vacation Courses in Berlin." While a resident of New York city he was appointed assistant editor of the Epitome of Medicine, having charge of the department of gynecology, and later he filled the office of assistant editor of the American Medico-Surgical Bulletin. In 1893 he was selected by the editor of the Medical Record to report the section of abdominal surgery and gynecology of the Pan-American Congress of Physicians in Washington, D. C. Dr. Hardenbergh is a prominent member of the Orange County Medical Society, for which he acts as president, and he serves as president of the staff of Thrall Hospital.

FRANK HENRY KNIGHT, M. D.—1899.

Dr. Frank H. Knight, general practitioner of Brooklyn, New York, with residence at 59 Seventh avenue, was born in that city, June 24, 1876, where he was reared to manhood and acquired an excellent literary education in the public schools of the city and in the Polytechnic Institute. Deciding to make a profession of the science of medicine he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, and after pursuing the regular course of instruction in that institution was graduated in the class of 1899, with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. Shortly after his graduation he accepted a position as interne in St. John's Hospital, where he remained eighteen months, and for the following three months he acted in the same capacity at the Sloane Maternity Hospital, and from his connection with these two institutions gained a wide and varied experience which proved of considerable value to him in his professional career.

Dr. Knight then located in Brooklyn, and his success has been gratifying and is certainly well merited, and in addition to his large private practice he acts in the capacity of physician to the Orphan House and Home of the Aged, Church Charity Foundation, and to The Home of Friendless Women and Children. He is also a member on the surgical staff of St. John's Hospital, a member on the surgical staff of the Polhemius Memorial Clinic, and a member of the medical staff, out-patient department, of the Methodist Episcopal Hospital. Dr. Knight is a member of the Medical Society of the County of Kings, the Brooklyn Pathological Society, the Brooklyn Surgical Society, the Society of the Alumni of the Sloane Maternity Hospital, the Society of the Alumni of St. John's Hospital, Brooklyn, and the Sigma Alpha Upsilon college fraternity; through his connection with these organizations and the perusal of the leading medical journals of the country he keeps thoroughly in touch with the progress that is being made by the medical profession. On February 6, 1902, Dr. Knight married Miss Lisette Sneden Lambert, of Brooklyn.

EDWARD SEBASTIAN ETTINGER, M. D.—1883.

Dr. Edward Sebastian Ettinger was born in Germany June 6, 1855, and is the son of Uriah Ettinger. He received his primary education in his native country, and in 1870 came to the United States, where he applied himself to learning the drug business, at the same time pursuing his studies at the New York College of Pharmacy, from which he graduated in 1875. He began his medical studies under the preceptorship of Dr. Samuel Schaie, and later entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University, from which institution he received the degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1883. After graduation he practiced his profession for some years in Jersey City, New Jersey, subsequently removing to Brooklyn, where he has since remained, his present address being 872 Jefferson avenue, Brooklyn, New York.

HICKSON F. HART, M. D.—1886.

Dr. Hickson F. Hart, general practitioner of Peekskill, New York, was born in Westchester county, New York, October 22, 1862, a descendant of a family whose interests have long been identified with Westchester county. Hickson Field Hart, grandfather of Dr. Hickson F. Hart, was one of the pioneer settlers of the county, and devoted a large part of his time and energy to its progress and advancement. He married Miss Mary Ann Knowlton, a native of the county, and their son, Stephen L., was the father of Dr. Hickson F. Hart. Stephen L. Hart received his education in the common schools of his native town, and in later years followed the occupation of farming. He was one of the prominent men of the county and always manifested a deep interest in its welfare; he affiliated with the Democratic party, and served for several terms as sheriff of the county. He was united in marriage to Miss Jane Drake Morgan and their children are: Hickson F., Alonzo K., of Peekskill, New York; Stephen B., engaged in mercantile trade in Brooklyn, New York; Joseph Waldo, and Georgianna Hart.

Dr. Hart entered the Peekskill Military Academy when a boy and graduated from that institution with the class of 1882. He prepared for college under the tuition of Dr. A. O. Snowdon, of Peekskill, New York, and subsequently matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which institution he graduated in 1886 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. He commenced the practice of his profession in Yorktown, where he remained for six years in the enjoyment of a steadily increasing patronage. He then located in Peekskill, where he has won an enviable position in the ranks of the medical fraternity.

Dr. Hart is a member of the Westchester County Medical Society, of which he has served as vice-president, the New York State Medical Society of Albany, and he is also a prominent member on the staff of the Peekskill Hospital. Fraternally he is affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and politically he is an adherent of the principles of the Democratic party. On June 25, 1891, Dr. Hart was united in marriage to Miss Mona Ward, a native of Albany, New York, and a daughter of Thomas and Maria (Van Buren) Ward. Their children are: Ward Van Buren, born October 2, 1893; and Morgan Drake, born January 8, 1899. Mrs. Hart was educated in Albany, New York, and is a woman of culture and refinement; she is a member of the Presbyterian church, while he belongs to the Methodist church of Peekskill.

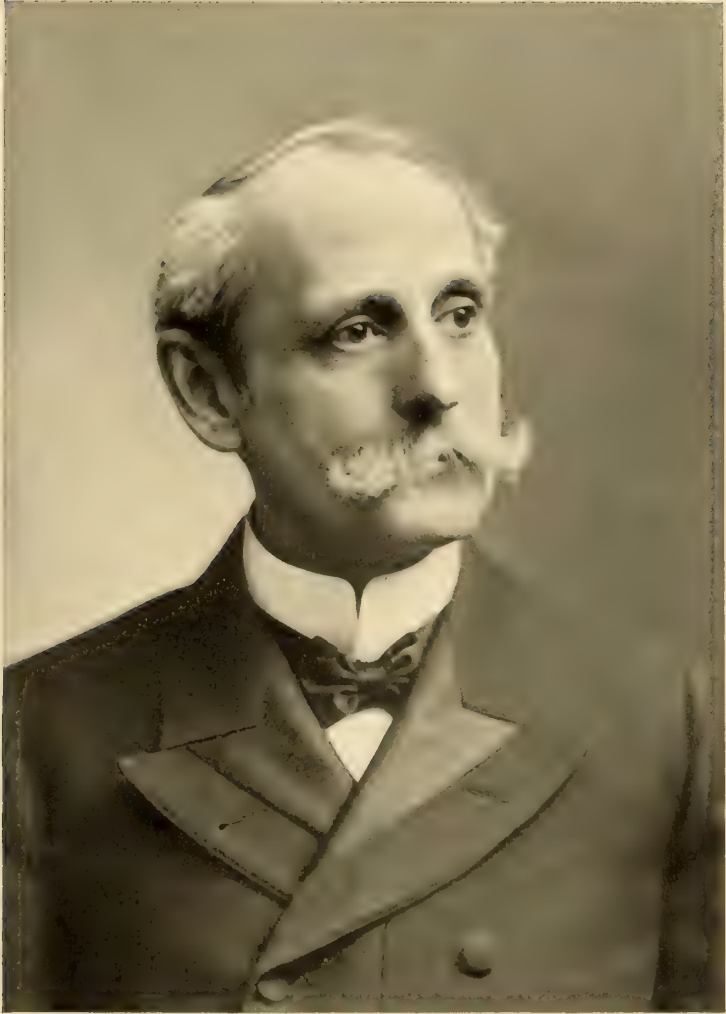

SCHUYLER CLINTON JAQUES, M. D.—1894.

Dr. Schuyler Clinton Jaques of 666 Lexington avenue, New York city, was born January 23, 1868, in Warsaw, Indiana, and is the son of Francis Marion and Phebe Elizabeth (McClure) Jaques. both here and in the various cities in Europe, also by the wide and varied experience he gained in his hospital service, he was well qualified to demonstrate his ability as a physician and very soon was attending to a large practice. In addition to this he became connected with the Albany Medical College, first as instructor in nervous diseases and diseases of the chest, then served in different positions until he was appointed professor of materia medica and therapeutics, becoming the successor to Dr. Bigelow; he also acted in the capacity of assistant professor of practice. He is also attending physician to the Albany Hospital, the St. Peter's Hospital, Hospital for Incurables, Child's Hospital, St. Margaret's Home for Babies and the Home for the Friendless; he has besides served as medical examiner for the civil service commission.

Dr. Van Rensselaer has been a liberal contributor to current medical literature, and received the Gorton prize for the "Pathology of the Caisson Diseases," and also a prize for "Ventilating of Buildings," "Purification of Water Supplies," "Modern Methods of Investigating Stomach Diseases" and many other medical papers. Dr. Van Rensselaer is a prominent member of the Albany County Medical Society, the State Medical Society, from which he was appointed a delegate to the American Medical Association, and one of his duties in that body was the revision of the pharmacopoeia.

HOWARD GRAHAM WETMORE, M. D.—1879.

Dr. Howard Graham Wetmore, son of George Carmer and Elizabeth Graham (Williams) Wetmore, was born in New York city, May 4, 1856. The founder of the family emigrated from Holland in the early colonial days, and settled in the Hartford plantation. He was a clergyman, and his descendants, in the direct line, have been almost exclusively devoted to the professional life, either as clergymen or physicians. On the maternal side the emigrant ancestor found a home in the New York colony, Dr. Wetmore's maternal grandfather, Platt Williams, having been a physician in Albany.

Dr. Wetmore received his preparatory education in the private schools of New York and subsequently entered the Massachusetts Agricultural College at Amherst, intending to become an agriculturist. Not finding this vocation altogether to his taste, however, he abandoned it for the profession of medicine, and leaving Amherst entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he graduated in 1879 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. After graduation he acted for two years as interne in the Presbyterian Hospital of New York, serving in both the surgical and medical departments. In 1881 he opened an office in New York, and has ever since been engaged in the work of a general practitioner. He was at one time visiting physician to the Marion Street Lying-in Asylum, now the New York Lying-in Asylum, and for eight years has filled the position of outside visiting physician to the Northern Dispensary.

Dr. Wetmore is the author of numerous papers and monographs on professional topics which have been published from time to time in the medical journals. He is a member of the New York County Medical Association, a member of the Alumni Association of the Presbyterian Hospital, and keeps in touch with the reminiscences of his college days, affiliating with the Delta Phi. In politics he is a Republican. Dr. Wetmore married, April 16, 1895, Edna Guernsey Burton Harding. They have no children. Dr. Wetmore's New York address is 63 West Ninety-first street.

EDWARD ARTHUR PARKER, M. A., M. D.—1890.

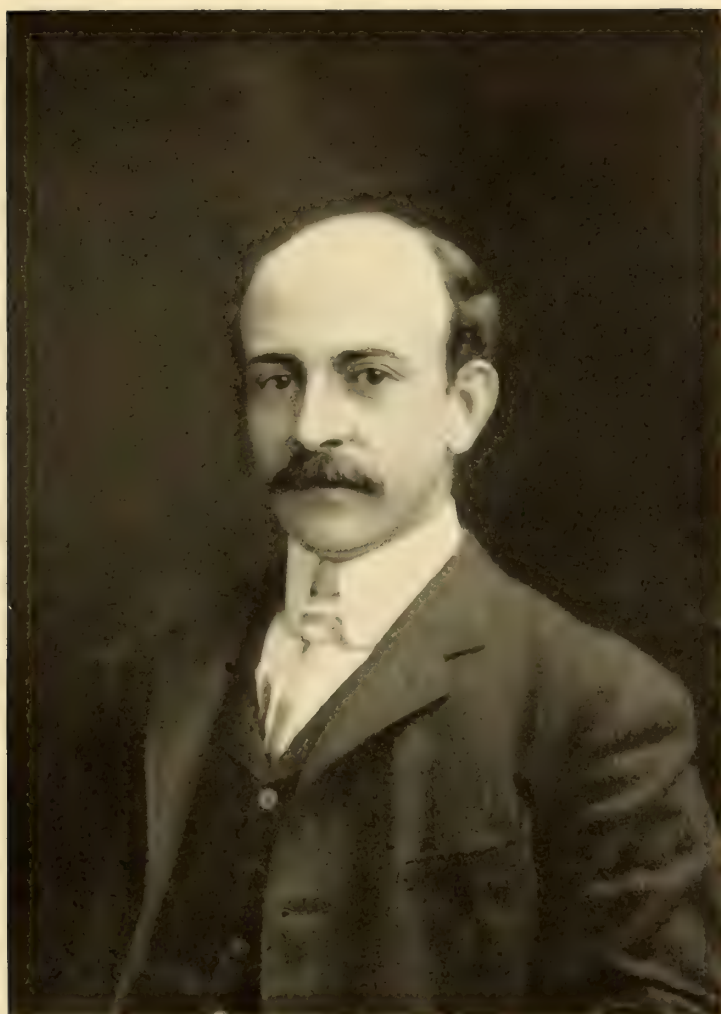

Dr. Edward Arthur Parker, a well established and highly esteemed physician of Brooklyn, New York, belongs to an old Virginia family, and he was born March 15, 1869, in Virginia, and was educated at Rock Hill College, Maryland, from which he graduated in the class of 1887, with the degree of Bachelor of Arts, receiving, at a somewhat later date, the degree of Master of Arts from the same institution of learning. After his graduation from Rock Hill College he became a student at the University of Virginia, for the purpose of matriculating in the medical department of the institution. There he took his first year's course, after which he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, and was graduated in the class of 1890.

After an experience of fifteen months in St. Mary's Hospital, Dr. Parker engaged in general practice in Brooklyn. He holds the position of surgeon to St. Mary's Hospital and to Williamsburg Hospital. He is a member of the Kings County Medical Society, the Brooklyn Medical Society, and St. Mary's Hospital Alumni Association. Dr. Parker married, in Brooklyn, February 25, 1895, Emma P. Woltje, and has one son, Arthur Joseph.

SAMUEL MAX BRICKNER, M. D.—1891.

Dr. Samuel Max Brickner, of 136 West Eighty-fifth street, New York city, was born January 11, 1867, in Rochester, New York, and is the son of Max and Caroline (Wile) Brickner. The former served in the Civil war, and was at one time president of the chamber of commerce in Rochester. Dr. Brickner comes of German ancestry, his great-grandfather having been the designer of the first wooden bridge with iron supports ever built in Bavaria.

Dr. Brickner was educated in his native city, being sent at the age of six years to the German Real-Schule, and from ten to fourteen attending a public school. He then became for three years a student at the Rochester Free Academy, taking preparatory college and scientific courses, and at the age of eighteen entered the University of Rochester, from which he received in 1888 the degree of Bachelor of Arts, and in 1891 that of Master of Arts. In 1888 he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, graduating in 1891 as Doctor of Medicine. From April 15, to August 15 of the last named year he served both as junior and senior resident physician of the Sloane Maternity Hospital, and from September 15, 1891, to January, 1894, as interne in the surgical division of Mount Sinai Hospital. He then spent some months abroad, and in Berlin studied embryology under Professor Hertwig, gynecology under Professor Martin, obstetrics under Professor Winter, and, in Vienna, obstetrics and gynecology under Professor

E. Arthur Parker

Chrobak, pathology under Professor Albrecht, and internal medicine under Professor Kraus. On his return to this country he became, in September, 1894, gynecologist to the dispensary of Mount Sinai Hospital, and on March 1, 1892, received the same appointment to the Good Samaritan Dispensary. Both these positions he still holds. He is consulting gynecologist and obstetrician for the Nurses' Settlement, and shares the labors of the committee of fifteen on prostitution in the tenements.

Among his contributions to the literature of his profession may be mentioned the following: "How to Study Medicine," New York Jewish Messenger, June 17, 1892; "Some Remarks on Anaesthesia from Ether and Chloroform," Medical News, November 9, 1895; "Dissection," article in American Cyclopaedia Annual, 1888; "The Dissecting Room," Rochester Democrat and Chronicle, December 20, 1890; "Haematoma of the Labium Majus in a Child," Pediatrics, January 15, 1896; "Menstruation and Pregnancy in Nursing Women," Philadelphia Medical Journal, August 5, 1899. Fifty articles contributed to Foster's "Reference Book of Practical Therapeutics." A translation, made in association with Dr. N. E. Brill, of Klemperer's "Clinical Diagnosis," published in 1898 by Macmillan.

From 1887 to 1888 Dr. Brickner edited the Jewish Tidings of Rochester, and has been an occasional contributor to the Rochester Democrat and Chronicle, the Rochester Post-Express, and the New York Evening Post. From 1897 to 1899 he was the book review editor of the New York Medical News, at the same time writing editorials for that journal. Some of these are as follows: "Water-borne Typhoid," November 27, 1897; "New York Board of Health and Pulmonary Tuberculosis," December 18, 1897; "Hospital Reports," October 15, 1898; "Epidemic Cerebro-Spinal Meningitis," September 3, 1898; "Hospital Reports," August 20, 1898; "Massage for Trained Nurses," December 31, 1898; "Rotunda Hospital," January 7, 1899.

Since 1900 he has been literary editor of the New York Medical Journal, and appended are the titles of a few of his contributions to this publication, besides many book reviews: "On the Physiological Character of the Pain of Parturition in Mammals," December 23, 1899; "Pain as a Symptom in Gynecology," September 27, 1902; "Incomplete Transverse Congenital Occlusion of the Vagina and a Theory as to Its Origin," February, 1903.

Following are the titles of some miscellaneous articles from the pen of Dr. Brickner: "A Short Umbilical Cord as a Cause of Dystocia with the Description of a New Symptom," American Journal of the Medical Sciences, November, 1899; "Treatment of Uterine Hemorrhages," American Therapist, December, 1899; "A New Symptom in the Diagnosis of Dystocia Due to a Short Umbilical Cord," American Journal of Obstetrics, April, 1902, also published in the Transactions of the New York State Medical Society, 1902, page 269; "Fissured Nipples: Their Treatment and Prophylaxis," American Therapist, August, 1902.

Dr. Brickner is the author of a series of hitherto unpublished lectures on "The History of Prostitution." He is the inventor of an instrument called the hysteroscope, designed for inspecting the interior of the uterus.

Dr. Brickner is a member of the New York County Medical Society, the New York County Medical Association, the New York State Medical Association, the Physicians' Mutual Aid Association, the New York Pathological Society, the Harlem Medical Society, the Metropolitan Medical Society, of which he is late corresponding secretary, the Greater New York Medical Association, the Alumni Association of the Sloane Maternity Hospital, and the Alumni Association of Mount Sinai Hospital. Of these two last named organizations he is respectively ex-president and president, and he was a delegate to the New York State Medical Society. He is a member of the American Anthropological Society. He is president and a former governor of the Society of the Genesee, and a member of the New York Alumni Association of the University of Rochester, the Jewish Publication Society, the New York Delta Upsilon Club, the Delta Upsilon college fraternity, and the Pi Phi fraternity of the preparatory school which he attended as a boy. His favorite studies are anthropology, history in its relation to evolution, comparative anatomy and embryology, and woman in her social and folk-lore aspects. He finds his chief source of relaxation in the game of chess, and the authors whose works afford him the most enjoyment are George Eliot, Tennyson, Huxley, Spencer, Darwin, and Spinoza. He is a member of the Society for Ethical Culture of New York city.

Dr. Brickner married, July 17, 1895, in Rochester, New York, Josephine Hays. They have two sons: Richard Max, born November 20, 1896, and Frank Hays, born November 21, 1900. Mrs. Brickner's brother, David Hays, is a leading member of the Rochester bar, and the entire family are possessed of rare musical ability.

MILTON C. CONNER, M. D.—1883.

Dr. Milton C. Conner, one of the ablest and best known physicians of Middletown, New York, was born September 6, 1853, in Orange county, New York, and there passed his early years, receiving his primary education in the Fort Edward Institute and Walkill Academy, and also in the Cazenovia Seminary. Dr. Conner's choice of the practice of medicine as a life calling was, in some sort, to be expected, his brother, Dr. L. Conner, having already embraced that profession and being established in practice in Detroit. Dr. Milton C. Conner's preparatory studies were pursued under the guidance of his brother, and on their completion he matriculated in the Detroit Medical College of Detroit, which he attended for two years, then becoming a student in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, where he remained two years more, graduating in the class of 1883.

In July of the same year Dr. Conner went to Middletown, where he was not long in making for himself a recognized position in the ranks of his professional brethren. While engaging in general practice, in which he has been extremely successful, Dr. Conner is, to a certain extent, a specialist, being peculiarly interested in abdominal surgery, to which he has devoted particular study and attention, and in which he has had an unusual amount of experience. In this department of medical science, as in all others,

Milton C. Conner

Dr. Conner is constantly enlarging the scope of his knowledge, and both as a physician and as a citizen, occupies a high place in the esteem of his fellow townsmen, and also in that of his county.

Dr. Conner has at different times served his town in the following offices: Was for three years register of vital statistics, health officer for four years, city physician one year, and has filled the position of vice president of the board of health and the department of health. He is a member of the Orange county Medical Association, which was organized largely through his efforts, and in which, for two years, he filled the office of president. In addition to his connection with the above organizations, Dr. Conner is a member of the American Medical Association, and of the executive committee of the fifth district branch of the New York State Association. Dr. Conner combines with the character of a devoted physician that of a public-spirited citizen, taking an active interest in whatever has a tendency to be a permanent benefit to the community, and using his influence always on the side of rectitude.

JOHN HORNI, M. D.—1896.

Dr. John Horni, a physician in active practice in Brooklyn, New York, was born in that city November 21, 1873, and received his education in the public schools of his birthplace. Having decided to adopt as a life work the profession of medicine, Dr. Horni, as a preliminary step in his course of preparation, became a student at the New York College of Pharmacy, from which he graduated in the class of 1893 with the degree of Graduate in Pharmacy. His preparatory studies were conducted under the careful direction of Dr. John Droge, and on their completion he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which institution he graduated in the class of 1896.

After a thorough experience in hospital work, Dr. Horni entered upon the active practice of his profession in his native city, where he has attracted in the course of time a large circle of patrons, and has earned for himself an honorable place in the ranks of his brother physicians. He is highly esteemed, both as a skillful and successful medical practitioner, and as an honest and enterprising citizen. Dr. Horni is a member of the Kings County Medical Society, the Associated Physicians of Long Island, and the Brooklyn Medical Society.

EDWARD HAZZARD HOXSIE, M. D.—1884.

Edward Hazzard Hoxsie, M. D., the son of Samuel B. and Betsie (Wells) Hoxsie, was born in Charlestown, Washington county, Rhode Island, February 20, 1860. To the limited instruction given in the public schools of his native town, he added the more extended course of study offered at the Westerly high school in his own county. He further prosecuted his studies at the East Greenwich Academy in Kent county, a co-educational institution founded in 1802, one of the oldest and best regulated schools in New England.

Well trained by accurate habits of thought and study, he was disposed to take up the science of medicine, in which he gained some insight under the teaching of Dr. John A. Wilcox, previous to his matriculation in the New York College of Physicians and Surgeons, where he took the full course and was graduated in 1884. He began his practice in Brooklyn, New York, where he has acquired a large share of patronage in the section of the city designated as the "Hill," his present address being 1 Hart street. He is a member of the Kings County Medical Society, the Brooklyn Medical Society, the Associated Physicians of Long Island, and of the Physicians' Mutual Aid Association. He was married June 24, 1891, to Nellie Evans, a native of Pennsylvania, but a resident of New York, where she was educated.

CHRISTIAN C. A. LANGE, M. D.—1898.

Dr. Christian C. A. Lange, a physician in active practice in Brooklyn, New York, is of Scandinavian extraction, and was born November 25, 1875, in Norway. His early childhood was passed in his native country, and at the age of eight years he was taken by his parents to Canada. His education was received at the Dalhousie University in Halifax, where he graduated with the degree of Bachelor of Science.

In 1895 Dr. Lange, having selected the science of medicine as a life calling, went to New York, where he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, from which institution he graduated in the class of 1898. Having been appointed house surgeon of the Norwegian Hospital, he served in that capacity for one year, during which time he acquired a fund of varied experience, being thoroughly equipped for his future duties by practical wisdom no less than by theoretical knowledge. In 1899 he engaged in general practice in Brooklyn, where he has earned for himself the reputation, alike among patrons and professional brethren, of an able, progressive and conscientious physician. He belongs to the staff of the Norwegian Hospital. Dr. Lange is a member of the Kings County Medical Association, the Norwegian Hospital Alumni Association, and the John Byrne Medical Club

JAMES MOORE DONNELLY, M. D.—1876.

Dr. James Moore Donnelly, of Troy, New York, who has been for more than a quarter of a century engaged in the successful practice of his profession, is the son of Thomas and Catharine (Moore) Donnelly, and was born October 17, 1850, in Delaware county, New York. The early life of Dr. Donnelly was passed in his native county, where he received his education in the district schools and in Stamford Seminary. After selecting the practice of medicine as the object to which the best energies of his life should be devoted, he entered upon a course of preliminary study under the guidance of Dr. E. W. Gallup as preceptor, and at the close of his period of preparation matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he graduated in the class of 1876.

In connection with his preceptor, Dr. Gallup, Dr. Donnelly at once entered upon the active practice of his calling, in Stamford, Delaware county, subsequently removing to Davenport, in the same county, where he practiced for eleven years, at the same time conducting the drug business. In both these places Dr. Donnelly was quickly recognized as an able and scientific practitioner, as well by the community in general as by his patrons and professional brethren. In 1888 he went to Troy, where he has since remained, and where the reputation acquired in his two former places of residence has been strengthened and extended. In addition to his practice in Troy Dr. Donnelly is the proprietor of a large drug store.

During his residence in Davenport Dr. Donnelly filled the position, from 1882 to 1885, of supervisor, being a man whose interests and activities were not limited by the sphere of his profession, but who enters earnestly into every movement having for its object the advancement of the public good and the welfare of society. He is a member of the Delaware County Medical Society, and the Medical Society of Troy and Vicinity. Dr. Donnelly married, in 1878, Frances M. Clark, of Stamford, Delaware county, New York. A son named Harry Clark is their only surviving child.

CALVIN F. BARBER, M. D.—1882.

Dr. Calvin F. Barber, of 57 South Oxford street, Brooklyn, New York, traces his ancestry back to James Barber, born in Wales in 1779, and later, accompanied by his four brothers, came to this country and settled in the New England states. William Barber, son of James Barber, was born in 1803, and subsequently removed from Milford, Massachusetts, to New York state. Dr. Isaac H. Barber, father of Dr. Calvin F. Barber, was for many years one of the most widely known medical practitioners of Brooklyn, New York; he was born in Florida, Montgomery county, New York, August 3, 1829. He received an academic education in the academy of Amsterdam, New York, and in 1847 began the study of medicine with Dr. Jacob G. Snell, of Port Jackson, now Amsterdam, New York; later he came to New York city and pursued his course of study under the guidance of Dr. R. K. Hoffman. In 1849-1850 and 1851 he attended lectures at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, receiving his degree of Doctor of Medicine from that institution in 1851. He commenced the practice of his profession in New York city, but after a few weeks received a call to go as surgeon to the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, in which capacity he served for a number of years, passing through the noted epidemics of cholera and yellow fever which were raging on the Pacific coast during the years of 1853 and 1854. Owing to the ill health of his mother, who was then residing in Amsterdam, New York, Dr. Barber, being the eldest of the family, felt it incumbent upon him to return home and care for his mother and sisters. In 1856 he opened an office in Amsterdam, New York, but the year following removed to Brooklyn, New York, becoming a resident of the eleventh ward, where he successfully conducted a general practice of medicine and surgery for the remainder of his life.

In 1861 Dr. Barber became a member of the Medical Society of the County of Kings, was elected vice president of the society in 1889, and in 1895 was elected to the office of trustee, which position he held up to the time of his death. On September 24, 1862, there came a special and urgent call from Surgeon General Hammond at Washington, D. C., for a number of experienced surgeons to go to the battlefield of Antietam and render what service they could. Among the Brooklyn surgeons Dr. Barber responded to the call and for five days, with others, worked night and day to relieve the sufferings of the wounded soldiers. They defrayed their own expenses and the only remuneration they received was high encomiums from surgeons and the medical director of the Sumner Corps. From June 1, 1870, until his death he was a member of the New York Physicians' Mutual Aid Association, a member of the attending staff of the Brooklyn Central Dispensary, and a member of the Practitioners' Club. For many years he was interested in the surgical work at the County Hospital at Flatbush, and in the fall of 1887 was appointed to succeed Dr. Hutchinson to the position of attending and visiting surgeon. Dr. Barber was truthfully a doctor of the old school, and as a man and friend was candid, outspoken, fearless and honest; would say what he thought without flattery, and was always loyal to his profession and its code of ethics. His death occurred February 5, 1896, and the members of the Kings County Medical Society have placed a bronze tablet in their building to his memory.

Dr. Calvin F. Barber was born in Brooklyn, New York, December 6, 1860, and acquired his literary education in the public schools and the Brooklyn Polytechnic. He began the study of medicine under the preceptorship of his father, subsequently matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, receiving his medical degree from that institution in 1882. In October of the same year he accepted a position in the Inebriate Asylum at Fort Hamilton, New York, where he remained until 1884; he then went abroad and continued his studies in the hospitals of France and England, where he acquired a wide and varied experience. After his return from Europe Dr. Barber resumed his connection with the Inebriate Asylum, remaining there until 1887, when he became associated with his father in private practice, this connection continuing until the death of the latter.

Dr. Barber conducts a general practice, but having a natural preference and aptitude for surgery, he devotes particular attention to that branch of the profession; he has also contributed original articles on brain surgery to the medical literature of the day. He is a member of the surgical staff of Kings County Hospital, a member of the Medical Society of the County of Kings, the Brooklyn Neurological Society, the Associated Physicians of Long Island and the Physicians' Mutual Aid Association.

In October, 1889, Dr. Barber married Miss Nellie Holbrook, a native of Hartford, Connecticut, and has two children, Holbrook and Janet Barber.

JACOB OUTWATER POLHEMUS, M. D.—1859.

Dr. Jacob Outwater Polhemus, for nearly half a century the leading physician and surgeon of Nyack, Rockland county, New York, where he still resides and engages in the active practice of his profession, was born February 26, 1834, in Rockland county, New York, receiving his primary education at Tappan Academy, and the Irving Institute, Tarrytown, after which he became a student at the Rutgers grammar school, where he prepared to enter Rutgers College, in New Brunswick, New Jersey, from which institution he graduated in the class of 1854.

When the time arrived for Dr. Polhemus to make choice of a life work, he selected the practice of medicine, and in his preparatory studies was so singularly fortunate as to receive the instructions of Dr. Willard Parker, whose name is a synonym both for professional skill and for elevation of character. On the completion of his period of preparation, Dr. Polhemus matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, graduating in the class of 1859.

Dr. Polhemus settled at once in Nyack, and entered upon the active duties of his profession, the constant practice of which has brought him, as the years pass, increasing honor. During his long professional career, his scientific skill, together with his magnetic personality, has drawn around him a large and ever widening circle both of patrons and of personal friends, all who belong to the former class becoming, sooner or later, included in the number of the latter. In all respects, both as a physician and a citizen, Dr. Polhemus' life has been a blessing to the community in which he resides. Dr. Polhemus is a member of the Rockland County Medical Society, the New York State Medical Association, and the Medical Society of the State of New York.

JOHN W. PARRISH, M. D.—1887.

John W. Parrish, M. D., the son of James D. and Susan (Burton) Parrish, was born September 21, 1865, at Johnstown, Fulton county, New York. He received a good public school education in the grammar and high schools of Johnstown, and subsequently studied medicine with Dr. W. L. Johnson, a physician of some prominence in the same town. Having made sufficient progress to enter the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York, he completed its requirements and obtained his medical degree in 1887.

Two years' active service at Bellevue Hospital gave him the necessary experience for a general practice which he afterwards acquired in Brooklyn, New York. For fourteen years he has retained the patronage first accorded him, and is still performing the duties of a general practitioner, at 111 Montague street. His experience at Bellevue Hospital has made him an authority at St. Christopher's Hospital, where he holds the position of attending physician. He is a member of the Medical Society of the County of Kings, of the New York State Medical Association, the American Medical Association and the Hospital Graduates' Club.

JOHN CONRAD GROSS, M. D.—1899.

Dr. John Conrad Gross, of Dobbs Ferry, New York, although one of the youngest among those physicians engaged in practicing the active duties of their profession, has already won for himself a recognized place in the ranks of his chosen calling. Dr. Gross was born, March 12, 1877, in New York city, and there grew to manhood, receiving his primary education in the grammar schools of his native place, and later becoming a student in the College of the City of New York. He had early in life displayed a strong preference for a particular vocation, that of the physician, and had decided that the study and practice of the science of medicine should constitute his life work. As a preparation for this he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, and was graduated in the class of 1899.

Dr. Gross gained his first experience in the active duties of his profession in New York city, and in August, 1901, came to Dobbs Ferry, where in the short time during which he has been resident there he has come into possession of a good practice, which is rapidly increasing. As a physician Dr. Gross is progressive without being radical, keeps abreast of the times in all matters pertaining to his calling, and is regarded by those who have watched the progress of his career as one likely to win a distinguished place in the ranks of his profession.

JOHN HUDSON THOMPSON, M. D.—1852.

Dr. John Hudson Thompson, foremost among the medical practitioners of Goshen, New York, whose long and honorable professional career covers a period of half a century, traces his descent from George Clinton, a name famous in the annals of the Revolution as that of the first occupant, under the new regime, of the gubernatorial chair of the state of New York, and later as that of vice president of the United States.

Dr. Thompson was born March 8, 1827, in Circleville, Orange county, New York, and received an academic education in the Sullivan County Academy, where he was prepared to enter the Albany Normal College, from which he graduated in the class of 1848. While still undecided as to the particular direction in which his energies should be employed, Dr. Thompson accepted a position in the Farmers' Hall Academy in Goshen, an educational institution which once numbered the now world-wide famous name of Noah Webster among those of its instructors. Having made choice of the practice of medicine as a profession, Dr. Thompson began his preparatory studies under the guidance of Dr. B. W. Thompson, and matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, where he had the advantage of receiving the instruction of Dr. Lewis A. Sayre as practitioner, and from which he graduated in the class of 1852.

After his graduation Dr. Thompson received the appointment as physician at the Seamen's Retreat at Stapleton, Staten Island, where he remained one year, a period upon which he now looks back as one of the most beneficial in his whole medical career. At the expiration of this appointment, Dr. Thompson went to Goshen and engaged in practice with his former preceptor, Dr. B. W. Thompson, to whose practice he succeeded at the end of a year, during which he had obtained the most gratifying recognition alike from patrons and professional brethren. For several years he was physician to the Orange county almshouse, and during the Civil war, in September, 1862, was made surgeon of the One Hundred and Twenty-fourth New York

John Hudson Thompson.

Volunteer Infantry, in which position he served until the latter part of November, 1864, and during this time served also as surgeon in chief of a brigade and division. It is not overstating facts to say that few surgeons had the opportunity of witnessing as much actual service in the field as fell to the lot of Dr. Thompson, who participated in the surgical work resulting from the leading battles of the army of the Potomac and in the operative department of the battles of Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Beverly Ford, Gettysburg, Kelly's Ford, Orange Grove, etc. After leaving the service Dr. Thompson resumed his practice in Goshen, which was marked by continuous and increasing success until his retirement. Dr. Thompson's career as a practicing physician is replete with all the qualities which dignify and ennoble the profession, and which render the medical practitioner not only the professional adviser of his patients, but also their personal friend.

Dr. Thompson occupies a conspicuous place in the literature of his profession, few practitioners having contributed more to the medical journals, conspicuously the Philadelphia Medical and Surgical Reporter, as well as other leading medical journals, or reported more interesting cases, particularly in the decades of 1860, 1870 and 1880. Nor has his range as a writer been limited to subjects within the sphere of his profession, but as an author in the field of general literature he has earned an enviable reputation.

As a public speaker Dr. Thompson is fluent and forcible, and possesses the faculty not only of expressing what he desires to communicate but that of impressing his convictions on the minds of others. To causes which he advocated, including matters pertaining to local affairs, he has rendered valuable services, and his influence has always been on the side of morality and right. His whole record has been an honorable one, and his years have been fruitful in deeds of usefulness and kindness.

Dr. Thompson is a member of the Orange County Medical Society, having served as secretary, treasurer and president. He was also a member of the Tri-State Society Association while that body was in existence, and was a delegate from it to the American Medical Association, in Philadelphia, in 1876. Dr. Thompson was at one time official surgeon of the Erie Railroad.

E. PENDER PORTER, M. D.—1900.

E. Pender Porter, M. D., was born in Rocky Point, Pender county, North Carolina, February 13, 1875. His father, Dr. Elisha P. Porter, was a native of North Carolina, and well known throughout the state as a general practicing physician. The family on both sides was prominent in the community, Pender county having taken its name from the Pender family to which Dr. Porter's mother belonged. His mother was Sarah C. Alexander, also a native of North Carolina.

Their son, E. Pender Porter, was an apt student in his boyhood, and was encouraged by his parents in making as rapid progress as possible through the ordinary public schools and in his preparation for Davidson College of North Carolina, from which he was graduated in the class of 1896, when only twenty-one years of age. He was probably influenced to some extent in his choice of the medical profession by his father's calling, but his own preference would have led him in that direction in any case. Under his father's competent and thorough instruction, he took the first steps in his medical education, so that he was able to enter the New York College of Physicians and Surgeons with some knowledge of the work he was about to undertake. He received the degree of M. D. in 1900, and was appointed interne at St. John's Hospital, Brooklyn, New York, where he served satisfactorily and showed the results of the careful medical training he had received.

He became a member of Brooklyn's medical fraternity by establishing a private practice immediately after completing his hospital work at St. John's. He is one of the youngest physicians in the city, and has, comparatively speaking, the whole of his professional career before him, although after only two years of general practice he has already attained a remarkable success. He is a diligent student, a close observer, a man with opinions of his own, yet ready to accept knowledge from any source. In view of what he has already accomplished, his professional prospects for the future are exceptionally brilliant. He is connected with the Bushwick Hospital and the Eastern District Dispensary as assistant physician, and is a member of Kings County Medical Society. His address is 473 Franklin avenue.

JOSEPH B. HULETT, M. D.—1887.

Joseph B. Hulett, a prominent physician of Middletown, New York, is a surgeon who by his enlightened skill has secured a wide reputation, and won a place in the front rank of his profession. He has attained to this distinction at a comparatively early age, having been born August 4, 1858, in Barton, Tioga county, New York. In his boyhood he was taken by his parents to Jersey City, New Jersey, and later to Middletown, Orange county, New York. His father died in 1875. It does not seem that Dr. Hulett was intended by his parents for the medical profession, for in Walkill Academy, where he received his primary education, he was prepared for teaching, and for a time followed this calling. He also had a brief business experience, which has been of great benefit to him in his professional career. Indeed, it may be questioned whether the experience gained both in this direction and in teaching has not been a positive advantage to him in his chosen calling, by broadening his outlook and enlarging his scope to a degree which might not otherwise have fallen to his lot.

Dr. Hulett had early in life formed a preference for the practice of medicine, and when he at last decided to make it his vocation, began his preparatory studies under the guidance of Dr. Darwin Everett, and later had for his preceptor Drs. F. D. Mills and Charles L. Wilkin, of New York. He matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, and was graduated in the class of 1887. By way of a post-graduate course he accepted the position of house surgeon in the Manhattan Hospital, the experience thus gained being a most valuable preparation for his future career.

In 1888 Dr. Hulet entered upon the active practice of his profession in Middletown, New York, and has succeeded in obtaining the most gratifying recognition in his calling. While engaging in general practice, his inclination has led him to become, at least in some degree, a specialist. In the treatment of abdominal troubles he has displayed a peculiar aptitude, which has been heightened by preference and developed by experience. The report of an operation which he performed in a case of this kind inspired great interest among local physicians and elicited wide-spread attention from those to whose notice it was brought. The operation was without a parallel on record, and may be looked upon as having been the means of earning for Dr. Hulett the distinguished position which he holds.

In addition to being ex-president of the Orange County Medical Society, Dr. Hulett is a member of the New York State associations and the Association of Railway Surgeons. He was secretary and one of the organizers of the State Association of Railway Surgeons, surgeon for the New York, Ontario and Western Railway, attending surgeon of the Thrall Hospital, military surgeon attached to Third Brigade, New York National Guard, honorary member of the Association of Medical Officers of the National Guard and Naval Militia, State of New York.

Dr. Hulett has taken a deep interest in electrical matters, to which, with the large-minded enthusiasm which is characteristic of him, he has devoted much study. He holds the office of director in the Middletown Heat and Light Power Company, in which position he has rendered valuable assistance to the company. As a further result of his interest in electricity, he is also an honorary member of the Corliss Engineers' Association. Dr. Hulett is likewise a member of the Masonic order, affiliating with blue lodge, chapter, commandery and the Mystic Shrine. Dr. Hulett married Lottie B. Hulse, daughter of Hudson E. Hulse, of Orange county, and they have one son, J. Leslie Hulett.

JAMES SEARS WATERMAN, M. D.—1889.

James Sears Waterman, son of Robert Whitney and Jane (Gardner) Waterman, was born in Wilmington, Will county, Illinois, August 22, 1852. His father, Robert Whitney Waterman, was born in Fairfield, Herkimer county, New York, and in 1851 went to Will county, Illinois; while living there he was a member of the national convention which nominated Abraham Lincoln for the presidency. In 1873 he went to California, where he became extensively interested in mining and ranching. In 1886 the Republican party nominated him for lieutenant governor, and while a Democratic governor and other officials were elected, he alone of his ticket had a large majority, running ten thousand ahead of his party vote. In the following year, after the death of Governor Bartlett, he became governor of California and remained in the office for the unexpired term.

James Sears Waterman pursued his studies in the public schools of Wilmington, Lake Forest Academy and the Illinois Normal School, without forming any special plans for the future. He was twenty-one years of age when he went to California with his father, and became associated with him in mining enterprises. It was several years later when he decided to enter the medical profession, and with Professor H. B. Sands as preceptor he completed the prescribed course at the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York and graduated in 1889. While in college he was prosector of anatomy with Professor Sabine. The first two years of his medical life were rich in the experience that comes from hospital practice, and his services at Bellevue and the Sloane Maternity hospitals were invaluable to him in after life.

After the death of his father in 1891, he went to California for the purpose of settling business affairs. In 1893 he returned to the east and settled in Brooklyn, New York. While he has made a special study of the diseases of the nose and throat and done much valuable work in the department of nose and throat diseases of the New York Eye and Ear Infirmary, where he has long held the position of attending surgeon, he devotes himself to the general practice of medicine, and is attending physician to St. Mary's Hospital.

He is a member of the New York State Medical Association, the Medical Society of the County of Kings, and the Kings County Medical Association. He is a fellow of the New York Academy of Medicine, the Society of Alumni of Bellevue Hospital, the Society of the Sloane Maternity Hospital, the New York Hospital Graduates' Club, the Brooklyn Pathological Society, the Brooklyn Medical Club, the Physicians' Mutual Aid Association and the American Rhinological, Otological and Laryngological Society. While his profession is always his first consideration, yet many other interests claim a certain share of his attention. He belongs to the Nassau Country Club of Glen Cove and to the Seawanhaka Corinthian Yacht Club of Oyster Bay. Dr. Waterman was married, December 15, 1902, to Sara Clifford Brown, daughter of Judge E. G. Brown of Riverside, California.

WILLIAM BALDWIN FLETCHER, M. D.—1860.

The name of Fletcher was a familiar one in early colonial history, and the Robert Fletcher who emigrated from England in 1630 to Concord, Massachusetts, was one of the ancestors of the above named gentleman. In the Revolutionary period grandfather Jesse, who was born in Westford, Massachusetts, in 1762, was an officer in the patriot army. His son Calvin came from Ludlow, Vermont, to Indianapolis in 1820. By his wife Sarah Hill, Calvin Fletcher became the father of William Baldwin, at Indianapolis, Indiana, on August 18, 1837.

The early education of William Baldwin Fletcher was received in a private school in Indianapolis, and he prepared for college at the Lancaster Academy in Lancaster, Massachusetts. He had intended to enter Harvard, but having a strong inclination for medicine he began his study in J. L. Thompson's office. He pursued his studies further in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, where he received his degree in 1860, during the vacations having made use of his time in the summer clinics at the Bellevue and other hospitals. For six months he was engaged in practice in New York city, but in 1861 enlisted in the volunteer engineer corps of the Federal army and served till the end of the war; he was taken prisoner in 1861, but was released on parole after a year. He then opened his office in Indianapolis, and with the exception of two years spent in Europe, has been engaged in a lucrative practice up to the present time.

Dr. Fletcher has been interested in medicine as a science as well as a profession, and has done much to advance both sides of the great art. He has written hundreds of monographs on scientific subjects. He has paid particular attention to the causes of mental diseases and cerebral circulation. And he is a member of the American Medical Association, and is president of the Marion County and the State Medical societies. He is a Scottish Rite Mason of the Thirty-second degree. Although a Democrat in a Republican community, Dr. Fletcher was elected to the state senate in 1883, being the first Democrat elected from that district in sixteen years, a striking tribute to his popularity. He was also the superintendent of the Central Hospital in Indiana for five years. On April 3, 1863, Dr. Fletcher was married to Miss Agnes O'Brien, and by this union the following children have been born: Agnes, Robert, who died in infancy, Lucy Hines, Albert Carolan, Aileen Desmond, Una and William Baldwin, Jr.

LOUIS GRIFFIN KNOX, M. D.—1872.

Dr. Louis Griffin Knox was born June 20, 1851, in New York city, and is the son of Peter Hart and Dorcas Urania (Young) Knox. Dr. Knox's preparatory education was received at the Bedford Academy. He took up the study of medicine under the private preceptorship of Dr. Seth Shove and Dr. Willard Parker, Sr., and later entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University, from which institution he received the degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1872. Since graduation he has been engaged in the practice of his profession. From 1875 to 1885 Dr. Knox filled the office of coroner of Putnam county, New York. In politics he is an upholder of the principles advocated by the Republican party. He married, in November, 1880, Millie De Granville. They have no children.

GEORGE FRENCH LITTLE, A. B., M. D.—1895.

Dr. George F. Little, general practitioner at 469 Clinton avenue, New York, was born in that city, July 11, 1865. He was educated in his native city at the Adelphi Academy, and in this institution he received an excellent preparation for Columbia University, from which he was graduated, after pursuing the regular course of study, in the class of 1888 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. Shortly after his graduation he was engaged for a short period of time in journalistic work, but wishing to devote his energies to a professional life he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which he was graduated in the class of 1895; immediately after securing his diploma Dr. Little spent an internship in St. Mark's Hospital, New York, for two years, after which he engaged in private practice in Brooklyn, New York.

Dr. Little has shown an especial interest in work with children. He is assistant visiting surgeon to the Kings County Hospital, pediatric division; clinical physician and instructor in diseases of children, Long Island College Hospital; examining physician, Brooklyn Children's Aid Society, and visiting physician to Working Boys' Home.

Although busily occupied with hospital and private work, he acts in the capacity of medical examiner for the Royal Arcanum, the Loyal Association, and is examining surgeon for the United Commercial Travelers' Association and the Travelers' Protective Association.

Dr. Little is a member of the State Medical Society, Kings County Medical Society, Pediatric Society, Pathological Society, and of the Associated Physicians of Long Island.

DAVID BOUGHTON WASON, M. D.—1900.

Dr. David B. Wason was born in Bridgeport, Connecticut, July 28, 1878, the son of William James and Sarah E. (O'Connor) Wason. He received his early education at the Port Richmond, New York, public school, and the Haverford College grammar school, and prepared for college at the Pennington Seminary. Desiring to enter upon a professional career, he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which he was graduated in the class of 1900 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. After his graduation he served as interne in the Bridgeport General Hospital, gaining a wide and varied experience. Dr. Wason engaged in the work of a general practitioner in Bridgeport, Connecticut, where he has continued up to the present time (1903), devoting his best energies to his profession. He is a member of the Fairfield County (Connecticut) Medical Society, Bridgeport City Medical Society, and the Connecticut State Medical Society; also of Pequonnock Lodge No. 4, I. O. O. F., Bridgeport, Connecticut.

WILLIAM F. SWALM, M. D.—1859.

Dr. William F. Swalm, for many years actively engaged in the practice of medicine and surgery in Brooklyn, New York, was born in New York city, June 27, 1837, a descendant on the paternal side of German ancestry, and on the maternal side of Holland origin. His parents were both natives of the state of New York.

Dr. Swalm acquired his literary education in the public schools of Brooklyn, and in Hopkins grammar school, New Haven, Connecticut, and this was supplemented by a course of study under the efficient preceptorship of the Rev. Levi Wells Hart, a graduate of Yale University. Wishing to devote his life to the science of medicine, Dr. Swalm began his preparatory studies under the competent guidance of an uncle, Dr. S. J. Swalm, with whom he remained two years, and later was under the personal supervision of Dr. Willard Parker, the eminent physician and surgeon of New York city. He then matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he was graduated in the class of 1859; shortly after receiving his diploma Dr. Swalm opened an office in Brooklyn, New York, where he was engaged in a general practice of his profession until the outbreak of the Civil war, when he enlisted in the capacity of assistant surgeon of the Brooklyn Fourteenth Regiment, New York State Militia, and was taken prisoner at the first battle of Bull Run. The regiment left Brooklyn, April 18, 1861, went direct to Washington and encamped on Meridien Hill, Washington, D. C., and on May 23, 1861, they were mustered into the United States service by General Mc Dowell and sent to Arlington, Virginia. They were ordered to the front July 17, 1861, and four days later the first battle of Bull Run was fought. Dr. Swalm remained behind with seven other surgeons at Sudley Church, Virginia, to take care of the wounded, being paroled by General Beauregard for that purpose. He then assisted Dr. Noral at the old stone house, at the junction of Warrenton turnpike and Manassas road, with the wounded of the Seventy-ninth New York Highlanders, and on July 24, while standing in the doorway of the house, was accosted by an officer of the Confederacy (who afterward proved to be General Sam Jones), who stated that an officer of the Fourteenth Regiment was still alive on the field, and Dr. Swalm was given an escort to investigate and found the officer dead. He was then surrounded by civilians of all kinds, who insisted upon his being taken to General Beauregard; he was placed behind an orderly on horseback and taken to headquarters. After stating all particulars Dr. Swalm was given a written parole, but on returning he stopped at the Lewis House on the field and found many wounded soldiers belonging to the Fourteenth Regiment. He remained there about ten days, caring for the wounded, when all were removed to Richmond and confined in Libby Prison; after remaining there two weeks he was ordered by the provost marshal to Shockoe Hill Hospital, the building had been the almshouse, to take charge of the wounded Federal officers. He remained there until October 6, when he accompanied the first thirty-three wounded men who were sent to Fortress Monroe to report to General Wool, after which he reported to General McClellan at Washington, and being a paroled prisoner, was ordered, April 30, 1862, by special order No. 95, adjutant general's office, to report to the commanding officer of the Mountain department, General Fremont, who appointed him surgeon-in-charge of the General Hospital in Wheeling, Virginia, where he remained nearly one year; he was then ordered to report, after the first battle of Fredericksburg, to the surgeon general, and was mustered out on November 15, 1862, as a supernumerary officer by special order No. 35, adjutant general's office, dated January 22, 1862, the Fourteenth New York State Militia having become the Eighty-fourth New York Volunteer Infantry. Dr. Swalm then received a commission from the war department as an inspector of hospitals on the United States sanitary commission; he was the executive officer at City Point, Virginia, and this office he filled until 1864. On January 16, 1865, Dr. Swalm was appointed assistant surgeon of the Fifteenth New York Volunteer Engineers, and given charge of all the engineer hospitals within the fortifications at City Point, Virginia; he retained this position until the close of the war, being mustered out in July, 1865.

Dr. Swalm then returned to Brooklyn and resumed the practice of his profession: prior to his joining the army he acted in the capacity of surgeon for the Brooklyn City Dispensary and Eye and Ear Infirmary, and after his return he was appointed physician-in-charge of the department of heart and lungs in the same institution, which he held for thirty years. He was the first surgeon of the Brooklyn paid fire department, and in 1866, when the first metropolitan commission was formed, he was appointed assistant inspector of that commission for the city of Brooklyn and had charge of the cholera hospital at City Park during the epidemic of that year. Dr. Swalm was appointed surgeon of the Second Brigade, Second Division of the National Guard of the state of New York, was promoted to the rank of major May 30, 1874, then to surgeon of the Second Division. He then attained the rank of colonel, April 5, 1875, was promoted to surgeon general of the state of New York with rank of brigadier general, June 7, 1878, and was honorably discharged January 1, 1880. Dr. Swalm is a member of the Kings County Medical Society, the New York Academy of Medicine, the Physicians' Mutual Aid Association, and the military order of Loyal Legion. In April, 1868, Dr. Swalm was united in marriage to Mrs. Anna K. Raymond, nee Gardner, and they have a pleasant home at 118 Lafayette avenue, Brooklyn.

AMOS O. SQUIRE, M. D.—1899.

Dr. Amos O. Squire, a rising and progressive young physician of Ossining, New York, was born in Cold Spring, Putnam county, New York, May 28, 1876, and received his primary education in Haldane high school, from which he graduated in the class of 1892. It seems that Dr. Squire did not make immediate choice of the medical profession as a life calling, but for the space of one year devoted himself to teaching in Fishkill, Dutchess county, New York, subsequently receiving the regents' diploma.

It is probable that this interval between the completion of his studies and the choice of a profession was of great benefit to him, inasmuch as the reflection afforded by it insured to him the advantage of a deliberate and unbiased selection, rather than one made under the influence of haste and excitement. Having at last decided to devote himself for life to the practice of medicine, he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, and graduated from that institution in the class of 1899. After graduating, he was not satisfied with the ordinary hospital experience usually accorded to a young physician, but took a special course in insanity at Ward's Island and a course in the diseases of the nose and throat at the Vanderbilt Clinic. This spirit of thoroughness and enthusiasm Dr. Squire has carried into his active professional life, and it has no doubt contributed largely to his success, which has been remarkable for so young a practitioner. Amid the rapidly accumulating cares of professional life, Dr. Squire never forgets to be a student, but constantly avails himself of all possible opportunities of extending the scope of his knowledge and experience, chief among which are those afforded by the large hospitals of New York. He is a member of the Westchester Medical Society.

Amos Q. Squire

Dr. Squire's activities are not bounded by the limits of his profession, but he is deeply interested in Masonry, being a warden of Westchester Lodge No. 180, and also affiliating with Buckingham Chapter 174, Peekskill Council No. 55, F. & A. M., Westchester Commandery No. 42, K. T., also Mecca Temple at New York city. While doing all in his power to promote the interests of Masonry, Dr. Squire manifests in his life the spirit of the fraternity, exemplifying its honorable teachings both in his professional career and in his private life, and is universally esteemed a worthy and accepted member of the craft.

FRANK W. SEARS, M. D.—1895.

Dr. Frank W. Sears, the son of Charles W. and Augusta (Howe) Sears, was born in Binghamton, New York, August 16, 1857. He received his early education in the grammar and high schools of that city, intending to adopt the medical profession, and with that end in view began to study under Dr. Esterbrook. He soon gave up this plan, however, and entered upon a mercantile career, for which the city of Binghamton, situated on the Susquehanna and Chenango rivers, and being a noted railroad center, offered great inducements. After following a business life for several years, he decided to complete the medical education which had been the aim of his boyhood, and he made rapid preparations to enter the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York city, where he completed the course with honor, and was graduated in 1895.

He had a year of practice at Bellevue Hospital, and then returned to Binghamton, where he settled down to a general medical practice. He turned his attention especially to surgery, for which he developed a decided aptitude, and he has performed many surgical operations with such marked success that his work has been favorably commented on. During the comparatively short time that has elapsed since his graduation, he has accomplished what many have only attained in a lifetime, and his energy and persistent efforts have already gained for him a creditable record among surgeons of note. He is enthusiastically devoted to his profession, and conscientiously gives much time to careful study.

Dr. Sears is a member of the Medical Society of Broome County, the Binghamton Academy of Medicine and the Medical Society of the State of New York; he is attending surgeon to the Binghamton City Hospital. He was married in 1880 to Miss Frances G. Clark, of Delaware county. Their son, Henry Clark Sears, has chosen his father's profession, and is at present a medical student in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York.

IRA OTIS TRACY, M. D.—1882.

Dr. Ira Otis Tracy, born in Lisbon, St. Lawrence county, New York, is of New England parentage, his father, Ira Otis Tracy, Sr., having been a native of Vermont, while his mother, Lydia (Caldwell) Tracy, passed her early life in New Hampshire. After their marriage they established a home in the township of Lisbon, New York, and there their son, Ira Otis, Jr., was born, September 17, 1858.

He began his education in the schools of his native town, and pursued advanced courses in the Canton high school and the St. Lawrence University. Having chosen medicine for his life work, he began his studies under the preceptorship of Dr. L. E. Felton, of Potsdam, New York, and Dr. Wilson O. Bridges, of Ogdensburg, New York. In 1879-80 he attended a course of lectures at the medical department of Michigan University at Ann Arbor. In the following year he was prepared to take an advanced course at the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York, from which he was graduated in 1882. During a private practice of eight years he acquired a general experience in the treatment of all diseases. In February, 1890, he received the appointment of physician to the New York Asylum for the Insane at Ward's Island, and after remaining there for six months, he became attached to the staff of Kings County Lunatic Asylum, now the Long Island State Hospital; he has filled this position for thirteen years, at present being first assistant, and his long continued service testifying to his ability as a physician.

Dr. Tracy is a member of the Kings County Medical Association, the New York State Medical Association, the New York Society of Medical Jurisprudence and the New York Academy of Medicine. He takes a keen pleasure in the study of American history, through all its stages of development and progress, and he is a life member of the New York Genealogical and Biographical Society, of the New York Society of the Founders and Patriots of America, and of the Society of the Sons of the Revolution in the State of New York.

GUSTAV GRANT FISCHLOWITZ, M. D.—1892.

Dr. Gustav G. Fischlowitz was born in New York city, March 4, 1869, a son of Isaac and Annie (Rauchinger) Fischlowitz, both natives of Austria, coming to this country in the year 1866. The great-grandfather of Dr. Fischlowitz on the paternal side occupied the responsible position of comptroller of Poland before the dissolution of that monarchy; at that time the name was Zimmiser, but thereafter they were known by the name of Fischlowitz. His grandfather was prominently identified with the commercial interests of Poland, being a well known merchant of that country. On the maternal side his grandfather was a noted rabbi.

Dr. Fischlowitz attended the public schools of New York city, where he obtained an excellent preliminary education; later he became a student in the College of the City of New York, from which institution he was graduated in 1889, with the degree of A. B. He began the study of medicine in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, under the competent preceptorship of Dr. William H. Porter, of the Post-Graduate Medical College, and the degree of Doctor of Medicine was conferred upon him by that institution in 1892. From 1892 to 1894, inclusive, he served as house surgeon in the German Hospital, after which he filled the position of attending physician to Mt. Sinai Dispensary, being appointed in October, 1894.

Ernest G. Fiddow's Juncos.

Since September, 1901, he has served in the capacity of assistant attending physician to the New York Maternity Hospital, besides attending to the needs of a large private practice which he established shortly after his graduation. In 1898 Dr. Fischlowitz was appointed school inspector by Hon. W. L. Strong, and his tenure of the office continued until it was abolished by an act of charter, and in 1902 he was appointed a member of the local school board. Dr. Fischlowitz is a member of the County Medical Society, the German Medical Society, the Harlem Medical Association, the Eastern Medical Association, the Metropolitan Medical Society, and the Alumni Association of the German Hospital.

On February 23, 1897, Dr. Fischlowitz was united in marriage to Miss Ella Louise Wise, a daughter of the late Rev. Dr. Aaron Wise, of New York city. Dr. Fischlowitz resides at 1290 Madison avenue. He is a Mason, a member of Perfect Ashlar Lodge No. 604, F. & A. M., being past master of this lodge.

CHARLES HENRY LEONARD, M. D.—1868.

Dr. Charles H. Leonard, a descendant of Solomon Leonard, who came to Plymouth about the year 1630, and was the ancestor of the Bridgewater branch of the Leonard family, was born in Madison, Indiana, December 29, 1841. Manning Leonard, father of Dr. Leonard, was born at Sturbridge, Massachusetts, June 1, 1814, removed to Noblesville, Indiana, in 1835, and from 1836 to 1844 was engaged as a merchant in Madison, in that state; at the expiration of which period he moved to Southbridge, Massachusetts, where he entered into the manufacture of cotton cloth and was secretary and treasurer of the Central Mill until 1863. He was united in marriage to Mary Fisher Ammidown, who was a descendant of a French Huguenot ancestry. His death occurred July 31, 1885; her death, May 31, 1892.

Dr. Leonard prepared for college in the high school at Southbridge, Massachusetts, and in Williston Seminary, Easthampton, Massachusetts; he entered Yale in 1860, but at the beginning of his junior year, in the darkest days of the Civil war, he enlisted as a private in Company A, Forty-fifth Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry, served nine months in North Carolina in the Eighteenth Army Corps, and participated in the battles of Kinston, Whitehall and Goldsboro. In the summer of 1863, at the expiration of his term of service, he returned home sick with typhoid fever, contracted in the camp at Newbern. In the fall of 1863 he returned to Yale, from which he was graduated in 1865 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts; in October, 1865, he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, and was graduated from that institution in 1868, receiving the first Harsen prize for reporting clinical lectures at the New York Hospital. His medical preceptors were Doctor S. C. Hartwell, of Southbridge, and Professor F. J. Bumstead, of New York. From March, 1868, to October, 1869, he served as interne of Charity Hospital, now New York City Hospital, after which he spent two months in travel through the west. In January, 1870, he located in Providence, Rhode Island, where he has since been engaged in a general practice of medicine and surgery. For a short time he acted in the capacity of pathologist to the Rhode Island Hospital, and later as admitting physician; from 1886 to 1892 was attending physician at the Providence Lying-in Hospital, and since that date has been one of the consulting physicians to the same institution; from July, 1870, to July, 1872, he was connected with the Providence Dispensary; from December, 1870, to January, 1883, was the physician to the Provident Reform School, and since April, 1870, has been almost continuously engaged in the vaccinating department of the city board of health.

Dr. Leonard was the author of an article published in the superintendent of the board of health's report for 1885, entitled "The Original Jennerian Vaccine Virus as Preserved and Used in the Public Vaccinations in the City of Providence." He still propagates this virus and from more than forty-five thousand vaccinations can testify as to its safety and protective value. He has contributed occasionally to the local press, the Providence Medical Journal, and the Transactions of the Rhode Island Medical Society, writing, for example, upon: "The Physician's Duty as to Vaccination," "A Case of Infantile Scurvy Caused by Prolonged Use of Sterilized Food," and "A Case of Infantile Indigestion Treated by Bread and Milk Diet." He has also written and compiled a historical manual of the Union Congregational church, printed in 1894, which has been pronounced a model of its kind.

In 1870 Dr. Leonard joined the Rhode Island Medical Society, serving as treasurer from 1878 to 1888; in 1870 he joined the Providence Medical Society, serving as president during the years 1889 and 1890. He has been for many years the medical examiner for the State Mutual Life Insurance Company, the National Life, the Connecticut Mutual, and other insurance companies. During his college term at Yale he was a member of the "Brothers in Unity," and of Kappa Sigma Epsilon, and Alpha Delta Phi fraternities, and also received an "Oration" at commencement. He is a charter member of the Congregational Club of Rhode Island, and is also a member of the Union Congregational church of Providence, in which he has served as deacon since 1872.

At Southbridge, Massachusetts, June 1, 1872, Dr. Leonard married Miss Mary Grace Beecher, who was born in New Haven, Connecticut. Their children are: Grace Fisher, a graduate of the New York State Library School at Albany in 1895, and now at the Providence Athenæum; Mary Beecher, a graduate of Brown University in 1899; and George Manning, a graduate of the Manual Training high school, now a mechanical draftsman at the Corliss Engine Works in Providence.

JOSEPH BONGARTZ, M. D.—1886.

Dr. Joseph Bongartz, general practitioner of Kingston, Ulster county, New York, was born in Cologne, Germany, July 9, 1857, where he acquired an excellent literary education in the schools and gymnasium of his native town. In 1876, when nineteen years of age, he came to the United States and took up his residence in New York city, where he pursued an active business career as a pharmacist for five years. While engaged in this occupation he acquired a thorough knowledge of medicine, and being associated with many members of the medical profession he determined to devote his life work to that calling. Accordingly he placed himself under the efficient preceptorship of Dr. Beck, of New York, with whom he remained for some time, and later studied with Dr. Koehler, of Brooklyn, New York. He then matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which he was graduated in the class of 1886.

Dr. Bongartz, being well equipped for the duties of his chosen profession, removed to Des Moines, Iowa, where he commenced the practice of medicine and surgery; he remained there about one year and was steadily acquiring a large patronage when he returned east and settled in Brooklyn, New York, where he remained until 1890, in the enjoyment of a practice which claimed all his attention. He then located in Kingston, New York, where his career was a success from the beginning; he is a close and earnest student of the fundamental principles of the science of medicine, and throughout the passing years has kept in touch with the latest discoveries and improvements, until now he is recognized as one of the leading practitioners of Ulster county, New York. He is a prominent member of the Ulster County Medical Society.

ADDISON RAYNOR, M. D.—1893.

Dr. Addison Raynor, a physician of Brooklyn, New York, was born August 10, 1867, in Suffolk county, Long Island, and there passed his boyhood, receiving his primary education in the schools of the neighborhood, after which he became a student at Cornell University. After the completion of his education Dr. Raynor took into serious consideration the choice of a life work, and having decided to devote himself to the medical profession, he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, where he graduated in the class of 1893. After serving for eighteen months as interne in St. Francis Hospital, and thereby gaining the experience so invaluable to a young practitioner, Dr. Raynor entered upon the active practice of his calling in Riverhead, Suffolk county, Long Island, where he was not long in building up for himself the reputation of a skillful and conscientious physician.

In July, 1900, Dr. Raynor removed to Brooklyn, New York, where he established himself at 997 Flatbush avenue, where he has since remained. The well established reputation which Dr. Raynor took with him from Riverhead has been strengthened during his residence in Brooklyn, where he is recognized by a large circle of patrons as an able and progressive practitioner, and holds an honorable place in the ranks of his professional brethren. After returning to Brooklyn, Dr. Raynor resumed his connection with the health department of New York city, in which, during his previous residence in the city, he had served as medical school inspector and vaccinator, and his official service has continued to the present time. Dr. Raynor is a member of the Kings County Medical Society and of the Associated Physicians of Long Island.

GEORGE BINGHAM FOWLER, M. D.—1871.

In the early half of the last century many of the young professional and business men of New England chose the southern states as the theater for their careers. Some of them, notwithstanding the influences with which they were surrounded during their early years, absorbed the political tenets of their neighbors and became active participants on the side of the Confederacy in the strife between the states. Others whose sympathies remained true to their antecedents moved northward and resumed in new fields the business or professional employments interrupted in their former localities by the conflict at arms.

Among the latter was Dr. Edward Fowler, a native of Southwick, Massachusetts. He graduated from the medical department of Williams College in 1834, and soon afterwards located in Alabama. There he married Margaretta Tittle, a niece of Judge B. S. Bibb, and a direct descendant of Martha Washington. Dr. Fowler practiced his profession with marked success until the breaking out of the Civil war, when, with his wife and child (George Bingham Fowler), he removed to Louisville, Kentucky. The journey was perilous in the extreme. From Chattanooga to Nashville the little family drove in an open wagon, over rough mountain roads infested with tramps and deserters. In the second year of the war Dr. Fowler removed to New York city. After the restoration of peace, he returned to the south, intending to remain; but on account of the unsettled state of the country he came back to New York and successfully practiced his profession until his death, which occurred in 1879.

George Bingham Fowler, only child of the parents named, was born in Macon county, Alabama, October 23, 1847. His advanced education was obtained in the Westfield (Massachusetts) Academy and in New York city, where he attended the College of the City of New York, then the Free Academy. For three years he was engaged in a broker's office in Wall street. He then went to Germany to study in the celebrated University of Heidelberg, but the illness of his mother necessitated his return after an absence of three months. In 1867 he entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons, from which he was graduated in 1871. Immediately afterwards he became assistant to Dr. John C. Dalton, professor of physiology in that institution, and was thus intimately associated with that eminent scientist for eight years, deriving great advantage from the association. During this same period Dr. Fowler entered upon that work as a teacher which has been a distinguishing feature of his professional career. In 1872 he was quiz master in chemistry and physiology, and was also curator of the college museum. From 1883 to 1885 he was adjunct professor of physiological chemistry and diseases of children in the New York Polyclinic. In 1886 he was appointed to the professorship of clinical medicine (kidney and digestive disorders) in the Post-Graduate Medical School and Hospital, a position in which he has acquitted himself most creditably to the present time. He has been visiting physician to Bellevue Hospital since 1886, and has occupied various other positions for longer or shorter periods as his many other duties would permit. From 1873 to 1875 he was assistant sanitary inspector to the board of health of the city of New York; from 1874 to 1877 he was visiting surgeon of the New York Dispensary, and for thirteen years was medical officer of the Provident Saving Life Insurance Company. In 1894 he was appointed consulting physician to the French Hospital. In 1895 he was appointed by Mayor Strong to the position of health commissioner of the city of New York, and in the same year Governor Morton made him a commissioner of the state board of health. He was president of the Medical Society of the County of New York for two successive terms, 1900 and 1901. On April 16, 1900, Governor Roosevelt appointed him on the tenement house commission of fifteen, which was instrumental in having a bill passed establishing a tenement house department for the city of New York, bringing within this department all the laws pertaining to tenement houses, and so modifying those laws relative to the construction of buildings as to abolish many evils that had been a long-standing menace to tenement life. The voluminous report made by the commission is a most valuable contribution to the literature of public sanitation, housing of the masses, promotion of morality and decency among tenement dwellers, etc. His long and intimate connection with the great medical institutions of the metropolis, and his association in a professional way with its public life, have afforded him exceptional opportunities for usefulness and for further development of his own capabilities.

In addition to all his professional work and public duties, Dr. Fowler has contributed largely to medical literature, and his accomplishments in that line have given him a prominent place among medical writers. He performed valuable work as assistant editor of the American Journal of Obstetrics and Diseases of Women and Children from 1880 to 1886, and he was the founder and editor of the Dietetic Gazette, which he edited for two years. In 1897 he was awarded the Alumni prize in the College of Physicians and Surgeons for a thesis on "A New and Simple Method for the Quantitative Estimation of Urea." Among the most notable of his many contributions to medical literature are the following: "Detection of Sugar in Urine," "Value of the Spectroscope in Medicine," "Intravascular Alimentation," "Nutritive Value of Peptone," "Farinaceous Infant Foods," "Incontinence of Feces in Children," "Use and Value of Artificially Digested Food, Peptone" (his experiments and publications on this subject were the first published; he holds priority), "The Dietetic Value of Water," "Plea for the Employment of More Delicate Tests for Albumen in Urine," and "Poisoning by Potassium Chlorate." His work on the "Chemical and Microscopical Examinations of Urine" (G. P. Putnam Sons) has passed through four editions. He was chosen by the editors of Wood's "Handbook of the Medical Sciences" to write the description of the mineral waters of America, and the articles on the "Kidney and Affections" in Keating's Encyclopedia of the Diseases of Children were the production of his pen. In 1894 he received from the College of the City of New York the honorary degree of Bachelor of Arts.

Dr. Fowler is a fellow of the Academy of Medicine, a member of the

New York County Medical Society, of the New York Obstetrical Society, of the Physicians' Mutual Aid Society, of the American Therapeutic Society, and of the Society of the Alumni of Bellevue Hospital. He is also a member of the New England Society and the Southern Society. He is also identified with the Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity and is actively interested in the Alumni Association of the College of Physicians and Surgeons.

In 1870 Dr. Fowler married Miss Anna Prince, of New York city, a daughter of Dr. Christopher Prince. There have been born to them six children, of whom three are living: Dr. Edmund Prince Fowler, Gertrude, married to Dr. H. F. Owsley, and Charles W. Fowler. Public-spirited and progressive as he has shown himself to be in all matters relating to the public welfare, and thoroughly versed in all points of medical interest, Dr. Fowler stands as one of the foremost representatives of the medical profession in the metropolis. Inheriting from his father a genuine talent for his profession, he is also the inheritor of strong traits of personal character derived from a worthy ancestry. His maternal great-great-grandfather was William Bibb, who was lord high sheriff of Prince Edward county, Virginia, in colonial times; a member of the house of burgesses in 1774 and 1775; a member of the Virginia convention of December, 1775; a member of the convention of 1776 from Prince Edward county, and also a member of the committee of safety of 1776. He was a captain of cavalry in the Revolutionary army, and subsequently a member of the house of delegates. William Bibb's ancestor was a native of France and a devoted Huguenot, who emigrated to Wales in consequence of the political and religious persecutions which followed the assassination of Henry IV of France, and which terminated in the revocation of the Edict of Nantes. He removed to America about 1685, and located in Hanover county, Virginia, where William Bibb was born in 1735. His first wife, Lucy Booker, whose father was a distinguished patriot of Prince Edward county, was the great-great-grandmother of Dr. Fowler.

HARMON G. HOWE, M. D.—1875.

Harmon G. Howe was born in Jericho, Chittenden county, Vermont, September 3, 1850. His father, Lucien B. Howe, was a Vermonter, from Connecticut ancestors. His mother was a descendant of several of the Vermont governors, Thomas Chittenden, Jonas Galusha and Martin Chittenden, the Chittendens originating from the well known family that settled in Connecticut in the early part of the seventeenth century; in 1639 Thomas Chittenden's father, William Chittenden, with others, bought the town of Guilford, Connecticut, from the Indians.

Harmon G. Howe spent his boyhood in Vermont with the exception of a winter in Canada and one year of school in Ohio. He received his preparatory school education at Essex Classical Institute and at the Underhill Academy and afterward entered the chemical laboratory of the University of Vermont. After a course in chemistry of some months, he entered the medical school of the University of Vermont, at Burlington, graduating with honors in July, 1873, and receiving an appointment to the Hartford Hospital. Early in 1874 he received the appointment of assistant to Dr. Barstow, Sanford Hall, Flushing, Long Island. Leaving the institution after a period of about a year, he took a Post Graduate Course at the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city. After graduating in 1875 he received the appointment of assistant at the Retreat for the Insane in Hartford, Connecticut, remaining in this institution one year, and resigning to enter the general practice of medicine and surgery in the city of Hartford in April, 1876, where he is still located.

He was soon appointed on the Hartford Dispensary staff, and in 1878 to the visiting staff of the Hartford Hospital, where he has served continuously up to the present writing, occupying, also, the position of director, member of the executive committee and chairman of the same, and now holds the position of president of the Hartford Hospital. He has served eleven years as medical officer of the First Regiment, Connecticut National Guard. He is one of the medical visitors of the Retreat for the Insane, medical referee of several large insurance companies for the state of Connecticut, member of the Country Club of Farmington, Hartford Club, Scientific Club, and member of the City, County and State National Medical Associations. He has never been a ready writer, but has several papers to his credit in the state as well as the city society. He has paid more particular attention to surgery for the past twenty years, and is called in consultation to different parts of the state.

Dr. Howe is a member of the South Baptist church, which he joined from his home church in Jericho, Vermont. He has a summer home, "Windhart," at Lake Sunapee, New Hampshire, and engages in out-of-door recreations, belonging to the St. Bernard Fishing and Hunting Club of the Province of Quebec, Canada. He was married on April 12, 1876, to Harriet M. Stevens, daughter of Luther M. and Mary Ann (Catlin) Stevens, of Jericho, Vermont. They have two surviving children, Horace S. Howe and Frances B. (Howe) Mucklow, both residing in Hartford, Connecticut.

WILLIAM PETRY EARL, M. D.—1898.

The medical profession has many representatives in the city of Little Falls, New York, yet none who are more devoted to their profession or more earnest in the discharge of professional duties than Dr. William P. Earl, who was born in Herkimer, New York, February 7, 1874, a son of Samuel and Frances (Lansing) Earl, the former named being a prominent attorney of Herkimer, and the latter a native of Albany, New York.

Dr. Earl spent the early years of his life in his native town, and the excellent educational advantages he enjoyed there prepared him to enter Cornell University in the class of 1894; but he did not remain a student of this institution long enough to enable him to graduate. Being then of a suitable age, he began the study of medicine by matriculating in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which he was graduated in 1898 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. Dr. Earl then accepted a position as assistant surgeon during the progress of the Spanish-American war, and after leaving the service of the United States, had a hospital experience of eighteen months' duration in the City Hospital of New York. In December, 1900, Dr. Earl located in Little Falls, where he soon distinguished himself by his discrimination, tact and skill; from the beginning his practice has steadily and constantly increased, and success has attended his efforts. He is thoroughly informed on the various branches of medical science, and investigates clearly all theories put forth for the advancement of his chosen work. In addition to his private practice Dr. Earl is a member of the staff of the Little Falls City Hospital, and is prominently identified with the Herkimer County Medical Society, the New York State Medical Association, and the American Medical Association.

WILLIAM JERAULD LEWIS, A. M., M. D.—1878.

Dr. William J. Lewis, of 319 West One Hundred and Sixteenth street, New York city, son of John Benjamin and Mary K. (Mann) Lewis, was born in Vernon, Connecticut, March 26, 1856. He is a descendant on the paternal side from George Lewes, who emigrated from East Greenwich, county of Kent, England, in 1630, and settled in Scituate, Massachusetts; also from Henry Merritt, who joined the Plymouth colony soon after its settlement by the Pilgrims, and who, with a few others, about 1626, formed the settlement which they named Scituate; also in the ninth generation from Thomas Moore, who emigrated to America in September, 1635, in the ship Dorset, and settled first at Salem, Massachusetts, and afterward moved to Southold, Long Island. On the maternal side he is a descendant in the eighth generation from William Mann and his wife Mary Jerauld, who emigrated from England and settled in Cambridge, Massachusetts, in 1636; also a lineal descendant from James Allen, John Gay, Joseph Kingsbury, Thomas Elliott, Henry Adams (great-great-grandfather of President John Adams), Thomas Wright, and others, who were among the earliest settlers of Dedham, Roxbury, Dorchester, Braintree and Plymouth, Massachusetts.

The early education of Dr. Lewis was acquired partly from private instruction and partly in the public schools of Connecticut, and he subsequently received a classical education in the Adams Academy at Quincy, Massachusetts, from which school he was graduated in 1874. The foundation of his medical education was acquired at Harvard, after which (1876) he entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York, where he received the degree of M. D. in 1878.

Soon after graduation Dr. Lewis entered the medical service of the New York Hospital. In the fall of the same year he located in Albany, and began the general practice of medicine in partnership with Dr. William H. Bailey, then one of the most prosperous and best known physicians of that city. In the spring of 1880 he went to Europe to resume his studies in Vienna (Das Allgemeine Krankenhaus), which then seemed to offer physicians the best opportunity for clinical instruction and observation. He continued his studies in that institution for about eighteen months, devoting the greater part of his time to diseases of the ear and general pathological histology, which courses were followed by a few months' practical work in the laboratories of the University of Heidelberg.

On returning to this country he was offered, and accepted the position of consulting surgeon and adjuster to the Traveler's Insurance Company of Hartford, Connecticut. As this position required a practical knowledge of forensic medicine, and to better fit himself for his new duties, he took a private course of law, under the instruction and guidance of some of Connecticut's best known jurists. During his connection with the Traveler's Insurance Company Dr. Lewis made frequent trips to all the principal cities and towns in the United States, Canada and Mexico, and became familiar with most of the hospitals and allied institutions. During this period also he was frequently called upon to testify as an expert in medico-legal cases in various parts of the country. On April 1, 1892, Dr. Lewis resigned his position with the Traveler's Insurance Company, returned to New York, and again entered the field of private practice.

In 1882 Olivet College conferred upon him the degree of A. M., and in the same year he was elected a permanent fellow of the Royal Microscopical Society of London. He has held office in two international medico-legal congresses, was president of the American Microscopical Society and is a member of the New York County Medical Society, the Harlem Medical Association, the New York Medico-Legal Society, and Society of Medical Jurisprudence and of several scientific societies not related to medicine. He has also been a contributor to medical and scientific journals. He is a member, by descent, of the Society of the Sons of the American Revolution and of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion. Although he has never taken an active part in politics, he has been a firm supporter of the principles of the Republican party. Fraternally he is affiliated with the Masonic order, being a Knight Templar and a thirty-second degree Mason. On December 10, 1879, Dr. Lewis was united in marriage to Mary Ella Bailey, a daughter of Dr. William H. Bailey, of Albany, New York. Their children are Margery, Marian and Elsie.

SAMUEL A. WOOD, M. D.—1879.

Dr. Wood is the son of Barton and Mary (Hall) Wood, and is a native of New York city, where he was born on the 13th of July, 1855, and where he was reared to the age of twelve years, when he accompanied his parents on their removal to Dutchess county, where he grew to manhood. He received his preliminary education in the public schools, and supplemented the same by a course of study in the Delaware Institute, at Franklin, Delaware county, New York. He determined to adopt the medical profession as his vocation in life, and began his technical study under the direction of Dr. George L. Sutton, of Fishkill, who proved an able preceptor. He then entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons, where he completed the prescribed course, and was duly graduated with the degree of Doctor of Medicine as a member of the class of 1879.

Dr. Wood began the active practice of his profession in Putnam county, where he remained about eight years, thence removing to Woodside, Queens county, Long Island, where he built up a large and representative practice. He retained his residence there for more than a decade, after which he passed one winter in the state of California, whence he returned to Queens county, and took up his abode in Elmhurst, which has since continued to be the field of his earnest and successful professional endeavors. Dr. Wood has continued a close student of the sciences of medicine and surgery and has thus kept pace with the progress made in his profession. He is a member of the Royal Arcanum. He was married in 1880 to Susie E. Ludington, of Ludingtonville, Putnam county, New York. Mrs. Wood died in 1898. They had one son, Fred B. Wood, who is a student at the New York Art School.

WILLIAM RICE PRYOR, M. D.—1881.

Dr. William Rice Pryor, of 121 East Thirty-eighth street, New York city, was born October 31, 1858, in Richmond, Virginia, and is the son of Roger A. and Sara (Rice) Pryor. The former was a brigadier general in the Confederate army, and subsequently judge of the supreme court of New York, special minister to Greece, and member of Congress. The latter belongs to the Society of Colonial Dames. Dr. Pryor is a lineal descendant on the paternal side from the Virginia families of Randolph, Isham, Cary, Bland, Poythress, Yates and Atkinson. These families trace their lineage in direct line to the chief justices of England, the de Veres, the Paxon and the Norman dukes, who came over with William the Conqueror. Dr. Pryor is a lineal descendant on the maternal side from the Bacon family of Virginia and England, through Nathaniel Bacon (the Rebel), and to the Rice family in Virginia and Wales, also to the Leftwich families of Virginia and Cheshire in England and the Vernon family of England and France. The line is a direct one at home and abroad.

Dr. Pryor was educated at the Dabney University School of Virginia, and at Washington and Lee and Princeton universities. In 1878 he entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he received the degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1881. After serving for eighteen months as interne in Bellevue Hospital, he became successively assistant to Dr. J. Marion Sims and Dr. W. Gill Wylie. He has since made gynecology a specialty. He was subsequently appointed visiting gynecologist to St. Elizabeth's hospital and assistant to the chair of surgery in the New York Polyclinic, where he was for a time adjunct professor of gynecology, later receiving the appointment to the full professorship, which he still holds. He is attending gynecologist to the Polyclinic Hospital, was formerly visiting gynecologist, and is now consulting gynecologist to the City Charity Hospital, and also to St. Vincent's Hospital.

Dr. Pryor is one of the co-authors of the following works: "American Text Book of Gynecology," published by W. B. Saunders; "Treatise on Gynecology," published by Kelly & Noble. The last named work is still in course of preparation, and Dr. Pryor is also engaged in writing a book which is to Another of his books is entitled "Pelvic Inflammations," published by W. B. Saunders.

He is the author of many brochures and pamphlets, chiefly on the subject of gynecology.

Dr. Pryor is the inventor of an operating table, and of a number of instruments designed to facilitate vaginal operations. He was for five years major and surgeon of the Twenty-second Regiment, National Guard, State of New York. He is a member of the American Gynecological Society, and of the New York Academy of Medicine. He is one of the founding members of the International Gynecological and Obstetrical Society, and also belongs to the New York Obstetrical Society, the County Medical Society, the County Medical Association, the Pathological Society and the Urological Society. He belongs to the Manhattan Club and the Blooming Grove Park Association, has served on the general committee of Tammany Hall, and has filled the office of pension examiner. He married, in 1888, Louise G. Allan, who was born at Fredericksburg in the home of Martha Washington; she is granddaughter of John Allan, who adopted Edgar Allan Poe. They have two children, Allan and Louise.

ROBERT HALL BABCOCK, M. D.—1879.

Dr. Robert Hall Babcock was born July 26, 1851, in Watertown, Jefferson county, New York, and is the son of Robert S. and Emily M. (Hall) Babcock. The former, who was born in 1818, at Stonington, Connecticut, moved in 1851 to Kalamazoo, Michigan, where he engaged actively in business as a merchant, and at the time of his death was president of the First National Bank of Kalamazoo. He married, in 1850, Miss Emily M. Hall, and his death took place in 1885. His wife, who was a resident of New York city, was descended from the family of Halls who settled at Old Lyme, Connecticut. The great-grandfather of Dr. Babcock was Colonel Henry Babcock of the Revolutionary army, son of Dr. Joshua Babcock, a practicing physician of Westerly, Rhode Island, and a man of influence in the councils of the province. Both Colonel Babcock and his father were graduates of Yale. On the maternal side the great-grandfather and great-great-grandfather of Dr. Babcock were officers in the Revolutionary army. Through his grandmother Hall he is a descendant of Colonel Edward Thomas of Elizabethtown, New Jersey, and through collateral ancestors he traces his pedigree from several well known men who came in the Mayflower.

At the age of thirteen Dr. Babcock had the great misfortune to lose his sight. He had always been fond of hunting and of military matters, and was attempting to manufacture a bomb-shell, when an explosion occurred which deprived him of sight. In September, 1864, he entered the Institution for the Blind at Philadelphia, where he remained three years, gaining much needed self-reliance and independence. In September, 1867, he entered a preparatory school at Olivet, Michigan, and in two years was fitted for college. He then spent three years at Western Reserve College, Hudson, Ohio, losing one year in consequence of ill health. In 1874 he graduated from Michigan University with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. Being advised by a medical friend to study medicine, he began his first course of lectures in October, 1874, at the University of Michigan, remaining there through two sessions. He then entered the Chicago Medical College, graduating in 1878 as Doctor of Medicine, and the following year received the same degree from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University. In July, 1880, he went to Germany, and for three years attended lectures and clinics in Berlin, Munich, and Wurzburg. In October, 1883, he began practice in Chicago, where he has since remained, making a specialty of diseases of the heart and lungs. In 1891 he was appointed to the chair of clinical medicine and diseases of the chest in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Chicago, and about the same time helped to organize the Post-Graduate Medical School of Chicago, in which he held a professorship for several years. In 1891 he was appointed attending physician to the Cook County Hospital, a position which he still holds. Since 1898 he has been a member of the staff of the Cook County Consumptive Hospital. He has just completed a book entitled, "Diseases of the Chest and Arterial System," published by D. Appleton & Company.

Since 1884 Dr. Babcock has been a member of the American Medical Association, and since 1893 of the American Climatological Association, in which he held the office of president in 1901. In 1893 he joined the Congress of American Physicians and Surgeons, and the same year became an honorary member of the Colorado State Medical Society, and the Tri-State Medical Society of Missouri, Iowa, and Illinois. In 1894 he became a member of the Mississippi Valley Medical Association, and in 1898 of the American Academy of Medicine. He has belonged since 1883 to the State Medical and the Chicago Medical societies. He is also a member of the Chicago Academy of Medicine, the Chicago Pathological Society, the Chicago Neurological Society, and the Physicians' Club of Chicago. He belongs to the Illinois chapter of Sons of the American Revolution, and the Illinois chapter of the Military Order of Foreign Wars, being entitled to membership in these organizations through both his paternal and maternal ancestry. He has been a member of the University Club of Chicago ever since its inception.

Dr. Babcock married, June 12, 1879, at Montclair, New Jersey, Lizzie C., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Weston, of New York city. They have two children: Eleanor Clinton, born in 1888; and Robert Weston, born in 1893. Mrs. Babcock is a lineal descendant of George Soule of the Mayflower.

EUGENE BERARD LAIRD, M. D.—1877.

Dr. Eugene Berard Laird is a native of New York and received his education in that city, and in 1877 was graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University. For about two years following he was in hospital practice in New York and later practiced at Manasquan, New Jersey. He then went to Brooklyn and practiced for a time, and in 1881 came to Haverstraw. In 1882 Dr. Laird was nominated and elected by both parties to the office of coroner of Rockland county, and he has been health officer fifteen terms and still holds that position for Haverstraw and West Haverstraw. He is a member of the Grand Lodge, Knights of Pythias, state of New York, was the first noble grand of Sequel Lodge, I. O. O. F., and afterward a member of the Grand Lodge. Dr. Laird has been chancellor commander of Iona Lodge No. 128, K. of P., and is court physician to Court Rockland, F. of A. No. 184. He is also a member of the Rockland County Medical Society and has been its president for the past ten years. He was also at one period a member of Rescue hook and ladder company. In 1879 Dr. Laird married Miss Mary F. Clayton, of Long Branch, New Jersey. They have six children living.

Dr. Laird's ancestors were illustrious defenders of the cause of liberty and right. His great-grandfather, Robert Laird, participated in the battle of Monmouth, June 28, 1778, in Colonel Barnes Smock's regiment of light dragoons, and another great-grandfather, Moses Mount, was in the same battle, in Colonel Treaton's troop of dragoons. Ancestors on the maternal side took active part in the French and Indian wars, the Revolution and the war of 1812. Dr. Laird's office and residence is in Main street, corner of Clove avenue, Haverstraw, and he enjoys an extensive and lucrative practice in these villages and surrounding country.

NEWTON PHINEAS SMITH, M. D.—1882.

Dr. Newton Phineas Smith was born June 6, 1852, in East Lyme, Connecticut, and is the son of Horace and Obedience (Mizelle) Smith. His paternal ancestors were among the first families of Norwich, Connecticut. He attended the common schools until reaching the age of sixteen, and then took up the study of pharmacy, Latin and Greek, under the tuition of Franklin Emerson Smith, a graduate of Amherst College and subsequently a pharmacist in Brooklyn, New York. In 1882 he received from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University the degree of Doctor of Medicine. After graduation he served for a time as interne in the Kings County Hospital, and since 1883 has been engaged in private practice. For the last seven years he has been one of the visiting physicians to the W. W. Backus Hospital, and lecturer to the Nurses' Training School, and for the last six years has held the office of president of the examining board of surgeons for pensions. He has resided in Norwich since February, 1883.

Dr. Smith is a member of the Connecticut State Medical Society, the Norwich City Medical Society, and the New London County Medical Society, of which he became president in 1903. He married, May 26, 1882, Julia W. Sanford, of Meriden, Connecticut. They were the parents of the following children: Annie Burr, born in 1884; Emerson, born in 1885; Berinece, born in 1888; Leonard Almy, born in April, 1890; and Jennie May, born in December, 1891. Mrs. Smith died December 10, 1893, and in 1894 Dr. Smith married Jennie A. Guild. They have one son: Morris Kingston, born in August, 1895.

GEORGE BANKS, M. D.—1883.

Dr. George Banks, one of the successful general practitioners of Patterson, Putnam county, New York, was born in New York city, August 1, 1858. His early life was spent in that city in attendance at the public schools, and when he reached the age of twelve years his parents removed to Patterson, New York; he then pursued his studies in the Amenia Seminary, at Claverack and at the Columbia grammar school. He selected the medical profession as his life work, and began his preparatory studies under the supervision of Dr. N. W. Wheeler, and afterward matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which he was graduated in 1883 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine.

He served an internship of eighteen months in the Charity Hospital on Blackwell's Island, and then commenced the practice of his profession in Danbury, Connecticut, in association with Dr. A. E. Adams. This professional alliance continued for one year, and he then removed to Patterson, New York, where he has since prosecuted his labors with a remarkable degree of success. He has been a close and thorough student of the science of medicine, and his knowledge is very broad and exact, while his skill in the sick-room is most marked. He has gained the reputation of being a physician that possesses sound judgment and an ability of a high order, and is earnest in purpose. He keeps well informed in all matters pertaining to his chosen calling. Dr. Banks was married October 26, 1887, to Miss Sarah F. Kent, and they have two surviving children, Florence E. and Cornelia J.; one son, George, died, aged three years.

JAY STEPHEN STONE, M. D.—1865.

Jay Stephen Stone, M. D., was born at Middlebury, Connecticut, August 5, 1842. He is of English origin and traces his descent directly from the Stone and Stowe families of Herefordshire, England. William and John Stone were the first members of the family who came to America; they settled in Connecticut and built the Guilford Stone House; Dr. William Stone lost his life while attending the sick on board the Plague ship anchored in Milford Harbor. One of their descendants was the Rev. Samuel Stone, who was known as the founder of Congregationalism in Hartford, Connecticut, and whose son married the daughter of Rev. Thomas Hooker, also prominently identified with the Congregational movement in New England. Their children left Hartford and located in Boston, where they founded another branch of the Stone family.

Dr. Stone's grandfather was Deacon John Stone of Milford, Connecticut, and his grandmother was Esther Stowe. His father, Stephen Stone, was a farmer, and it was on a farm in Middlebury that Jay Stephen Stone's earliest years were spent. He attended the public schools of Woodbury, Connecticut, and in 1860 was admitted to Yale College, with the intention of making his studies there preliminary to the medical profession which it had been his aim from boyhood to enter. Lack of funds prevented him from completing his course at Yale, and after leaving college he taught in the public schools of Plymouth, Connecticut, for some time. In 1862 he entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York, from which he graduated in 1865. He was also a private student of Dr. Conant of New York, and while he was finishing his course assisted at the Demilt Dispensary. On the completion of his medical course in 1865, he settled in New Britain, Connecticut, where he established a large practice both as physician and surgeon. He was a member of the staff of the New Britain Hospital, but resigned after serving a year. He was also a member of the Society of Regular Physicians of New Britain, of the Hartford City Society, the Hartford County Society, the Connecticut State Society and the American Medical Association.

Following the trend of his ancestors' belief, he is a Congregationalist, and a member of the South Congregational church of New Britain. In 1866 he married Anna E. Warren, of Plymouth, Connecticut, who died in 1876. His second wife was Rebecca C. Davis, of New Britain. He has three children, Dr. William S., Mabel W. and Elizabeth H. His son Dr. William S. was educated in the public schools of New Britain, graduated at Yale College, and received the degree of M. D. from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, and at present holds the position of attending surgeon at the Memorial Hospital and also at New York Lying-in Hospital. Dr. Stone has devoted his attention equally to medicine and surgery, and has been successful in both departments for thirty-seven years.

HENRY E. HANDERSON, A. M., M. D.—1867.

Dr. Henry Ebenezer Handerson, the descendant of an old Connecticut family of the seventeenth century, was born in Orange, Ohio, March 21, 1837. The original immigrant of the Handerson family (probably John Handerson, by tradition a Scotchman) married, prior to 1663, in the colony of Hartford, Connecticut, Martha, the granddaughter of George Steel, one of the founders of the Hartford colony. Gideon and Timothy Handerson, of Amherst, Massachusetts, later ancestors of Dr. Handerson, were enrolled in the continental army, and were present at the siege of Boston in 1776. Thomas Handerson, the father of Dr. Handerson, was born in Claverack, Columbia county, New York, and married, in 1824, Catharine Potts, of Livingston, New York. Removing in 1834 to Orange, Ohio, he died there in 1839. On the death of his father, Dr. Handerson was adopted and educated by his uncle, Lewis Handerson, a well known druggist of Cleveland, Ohio.

Dr. Handerson's primary education was received in private schools of Cleveland, and later at Sanger Hall, a boarding school at New Hartford, Oneida county, New York. In 1854 he entered Hobart College at Geneva, New York, where he graduated in 1858. Proceeding thence to Tennessee, whither his adopted father had removed in 1851, in 1859 he accepted the situation of a private tutor in the family of a planter near Alexandria, Louisiana, and devoted his leisure to the study of medicine. His first course of medical lectures was taken in the medical department of the University of Louisiana at New Orleans, in the winter of 1860-61.

On the outbreak of the Civil war, Dr. Handerson enlisted as a private in the Ninth Louisiana (Confederate) Regiment, proceeded to Virginia, and participated in most of the general engagements of the Army of Northern Virginia under Lee and Jackson, gradually advancing to the rank of captain and assistant adjutant general of the Second Louisiana Brigade of the Army of Northern Virginia. Captured at the battle of the Wilderness on May 5, 1864, he remained confined in various military prisons until the close of the war.

On his discharge from Fort Delaware in June, 1865, he proceeded to New York and resumed his medical studies. Graduating at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York, in 1867, he began the practice of medicine in that city, where he continued the duties of his profession until 1885. In the latter year he returned to his early home in Cleveland, where he now resides.

Dr. Handerson is at present professor of hygiene and sanitary science in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Cleveland, an ex-president of the Cleveland Medical Library Association, and a member of the Cleveland Academy of Medicine. His literary activity has been displayed chiefly in the departments of medical history and sanitary science. In 1883 he published "The School of Salernum," a medico-historical paper read before the New York County Medical Society in 1878; and in 1889 he edited, with notes and additions, a translation of "Baas's History of Medicine." "A Contribution to the Genealogy of the Handerson Family" appeared in 1885, and a number of papers, chiefly of a historical or sanitary character, have appeared from his pen in the pages of Janus, the Cleveland Medical Gazette, the Cleveland Medical Journal, etc.

Dr. Handerson married, first, in 1872, Juliet Alice, daughter of Milo B. Root, of New York, by whom he had four children: Lewis Milo, Henry Thomas, Louisa Prudence and Juliet Alice. Mrs. Handerson died in 1881, and the elder three children followed in 1882. In 1888 he married Clara, daughter of William K. Corlett, of Cleveland, by whom he has two children: Clarence Henry and Philip Corlett. He resides at present at 444 Dunham avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

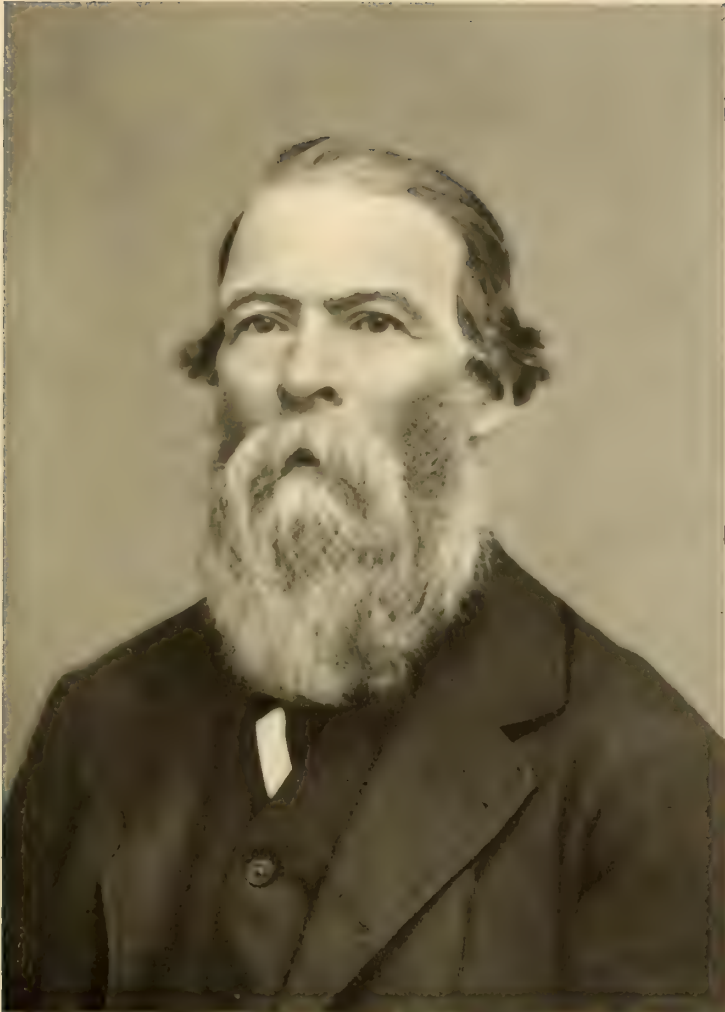

NORTON JEROME SANDS, M. D.—1868.

Dr. Norton Jerome Sands, of Port Chester, Westchester county, New York, is a representative of a family which was founded in America, at Plymouth, Massachusetts, as early as 1658 by Captain James Sandys (the original form of the family name), who came from Reading, Berkshire, England. His descendants, many of whom were Quakers, dispersed to Rhode Island and New York. Dr. Sands is seventh in descent from his emigrant ancestor.

His father, Dr. David Jerome Sands, who may be said to have been the founder of a family of physicians, was born in 1814 in Chappaqua, Westchester county, New York, and after receiving his education in the schools of the county engaged in teaching. He utilized his leisure time in making preparation for the practice of medicine under the instruction of Dr. Nathaniel C. Husted. He was graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York, in the class of 1840, and entered upon the active duties of his profession in Port Chester, where his remarkable success was the combined result of great professional skill and a strongly magnetic personality. He commanded not only the confidence of his patients, but their lasting friendship, and in the skill, the charity and the knowledge which he displayed, he might well be cited as a type of the ideal physician. The imprint of his personality was marked, and several of his descendants adopted his calling—a son, a grandson and a granddaughter—and a brother was also a physician. Dr. Sands died February 29, 1888, leaving as an enduring monument to his long and beneficent career the veneration, gratitude and affection of all who were brought within the circle of his influence.

Dr. Norton Jerome Sands, son of Dr. David Jerome Sands, was born October 6, 1845, in the village which was the scene of his father's life work. He received his primary education in the schools of the county and in the Columbia grammar school. Having inherited the taste and enthusiasm for the medical profession which characterized his father, from whom he received a careful preliminary training, he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York, in which institution he had for a preceptor the accomplished Dr. Henry B. Sands. He was graduated in the class of 1868, and began the active practice of his profession in his native place, where, by his skill as a physician and his estimable qualities as a man, he has built up a reputation worthy of the distinguished name he bears. In his attitude as a physician, the liberal and the conservative types of character are happily blended, and while a practitioner he has not ceased to be a student, keeping pace with all medical progress. Dr. Sands is a member of the Westchester County Medical Association, the State Medical Association, the Westchester County Medical Society, and the American Medical Association. In 1868 he married Mary Evelyn Green, daughter of Benjamin Green, of Port Chester. They have three children, Benjamin J., Georgiana and Adelaide G.

Dr. Benjamin Jerome Sands, son of Dr. Norton J. Sands, was also born in Port Chester, March 29, 1869, and followed in the footsteps of his father and grandfather, receiving his primary education in the schools of his native county. Later he entered Harvard University, from which he was graduated with the degree of Bachelor of Arts in the class of 1890. Inheriting a disposition to the profession of medicine, he pursued his preparatory studies under the guidance of his father, and subsequently matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York, and was graduated in the class of 1893. He at once entered upon practice in the village which has been the home of his family through the years covered by this narrative. Dr. Sands is a member of the Westchester County Medical Association, of the Westchester County Medical Society, the Delta Upsilon fraternity and the Harvard Club of New York.

It is worthy of remark that a woman of this family is also identified with the medical profession—Dr. Georgiana Sands, daughter of Dr. Norton J. Sands. She was educated at Vassar College, from which she was graduated in the class of 1893, with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. She then attended the medical department of Johns Hopkins University, from which she was graduated in the class of 1898. During the year following she served an internship in the hospital connected with the medical school. She is now engaged in the active practice of her profession, in which she has received gratifying recognition.

THOMAS WILLIAM HARVEY, A. M., M. D.—1878.

The Harvey family originated in England, and the first American immigrants of the name came and made settlement in the Boston colony in 1636. The great-grandfather of the above named Dr. Harvey was Rufus Harvey, who was a farmer, teacher and justice of the peace, and was also a soldier in the Revolutionary war. His son, Thomas W., was a major general in the New York national guard; he was a mechanical genius, and among his many inventions was the gimlet-pointed screw, as well as the machinery for its making, which brought him both fortune and fame. His son, Hayward A. Harvey, was his worthy successor, and made for himself a name throughout the world, particularly by his invention of the Harveyized steel process, which, as applied to the manufacture of ship armor, revolutionized the methods of protection of warships in every nation on the globe. Hayward A. Harvey married Mary Matilda Winant, a member of the well known Staten Island family of that name.

Dr. Thomas William Harvey is the son of the parents last named, and was born September 10, 1853, in New York city. He was prepared for college at the Edwards Place school in Stockbridge, Massachusetts, after which he entered Princeton College and was graduated in 1875 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts, later being honored by the same institution with the degree of Master of Arts. His professional studies were carried on in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, from which he received his diploma as a Doctor of Medicine in 1878. He at once began practice in Orange, New Jersey, which has been the scene of his busy and successful efforts to the present time. As a general practitioner and surgeon he has won a large and select patronage, and he has devoted himself conscientiously and enthusiastically to his profession. During the greater portion of his career he was associated with the late gifted and highly honored Dr. William Pierson, whose name is commemorated in the William Pierson Medical Library Association; on the death of Dr. Pierson in 1900 Dr. Harvey succeeded to his practice. Dr. Harvey has also devoted considerable time to the practice in the charitable institutions; he has always maintained connection with the Orange Memorial Hospital, of which he became the first house physician soon after entering upon practice, and which he now serves as attending surgeon and secretary of the staff. From 1880 to 1884 he was city physician and secretary of the Orange board of health, and was also associated with the introduction of the Orange water supply. He has been physician to the Orange Orphan Home for a score of years past, and is also physician to the Orange Training School for Nurses, lecturer on obstetrics and dean of the faculty.

Dr. Harvey is an active and influential member of the various professional bodies; of the Essex County District Medical Society and the Orange Mountain Medical Society, both of which he has served in the capacity of president; he is a permanent delegate to the New Jersey Medical Society, holds an honorary relationship with the Orange Practitioners' Club, belongs to the New York Academy of Medicine, the American Medical Association, the American Climatological Association, and is president of the William Pierson Medical Library Association. He has presented before these various organizations papers on professional subjects, and these have been published in the columns of leading journals. Dr. Harvey is also a business man; he has large interests in the Harvey Steel Company of New York and Newark, and is vice president of the corporation. He is in no sense a politician, but is a public-spirited citizen, and has been foremost in advancing the interests of Orange, his services as a member of the board of education having been of particular usefulness. He is a member of the New England Society and of the Orange Camera Club. On October 3, 1882, Dr. Harvey was married to Miss Katharine Green, daughter of Edward Green of New York, and of this union were born three children, Thomas William, Jr., Spencer Green and Alice Harvey.

ORRIN FRANKLIN HARRIS, M. D.—1866.

Dr. Orrin Franklin Harris was born May 31, 1843, in Preston, Connecticut, and is the son of Robert B. and Betsy (Brewster) Harris. His early education was received in the common schools, and in 1866 he graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. While still a student he served for several months as a medical cadet, in 1862 and 1863, during the Civil war, being stationed in the hospital at Alexandria, Virginia, under the direction of Surgeon Edwin Bentley. Since graduation he has been engaged in the practice of his profession.

In politics Dr. Harris adheres to the Republican party, being a firm upholder of the doctrines which it advocates. He married, August, 19, 1890, Mary Adelaide Tracy. They are the parents of three children, Orrin F., Mary A. and Daniel T.

WALTER LINDSAY, M. D.—1866.

Dr. Walter Lindsay, a skillful physician of Huntington, Long Island, where he has been for many years engaged in the active practice of his profession, was born August 12, 1838, in Manchester, England, and when an infant was brought by his parents to the United States. His boyhood was passed in New York, his primary education being received in the public schools of that city.

After selecting the science of medicine as a calling, Dr. Lindsay pursued a course of preparatory study under the preceptorship of Dr. Henry W. Leonard, by whom he was prepared to matriculate in the medical department of the University of Vermont, where he remained one year, and then, at the outbreak of the Civil war, he entered the service of the United States sanitary commission, with which he was connected for a considerable period. At the expiration of his term of service, he entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, where he remained two years, graduating in the class of 1866. He immediately entered upon the active practice of his calling in Huntington, where he has for many years been in the enjoyment of a large and lucrative patronage. He is a public-spirited citizen and is interested in whatever has a tendency to aid in the growth and development of the neighborhood in which he resides. Since January 1, 1903, he has held the office of supervisor of the town of Huntington.

Dr. Lindsay is a member of the Associated Physicians of Long Island, the American Medical Association, the New York State Medical Association, and the Queens-Nassau Medical Society, of which he is ex-president. He is also a member of Japhtha Lodge, F. & A. M. On October 25, 1870, he married Miss Julia Emma Thomas, of Brooklyn, who died in December, 1895. To them were born four children: Nina Eleanor, Walter Thomas, an attorney in New York; Roy Warriner, electrician, Lakewood, New Jersey; and Fraprie Stephen, who is in the insurance business in New York. Dr. Lindsay and his family attend the Methodist Episcopal church of Huntington, of which he is an active member.

OLIVER LUTHER AUSTIN, M. D.—1896.

Dr. Oliver Luther Austin, a rising young practitioner of Tuckahoe, New York, already in the possession of a flourishing practice, was born September 18, 1873, in Yonkers, Westchester county, New York. He attended the high school and also enjoyed the benefit of receiving private tuition from the Rev. Dr. H. B. Brown. He became a student at the Wesleyan University but did not graduate. Selecting the practice of medicine as his life work, he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York and graduated in the class of 1896.

After receiving the valuable training of the experience to be gained at St. John's Hospital, Riverside, he settled, in 1897, in Tuckahoe, where he has a fine and increasing practice. Dr. Austin's professional ability has been testified to not only by the acquisition of a large circle of patrons, but by his appointment to the position of health officer of his town, in which capacity he has served for several years with the most satisfactory results. Dr. Austin is a member of the Westchester County Medical Society, the Jenkins Medical Association, and the Mount Vernon Medical Association. He was married September 21, 1900, to Miss Elizabeth Wise, of New York city.

SHERMAN HARTWELL CHAPMAN, M. D.—1869.

Dr. Sherman Hartwell Chapman was born February 22, 1846, in New Haven, Connecticut, and was the son of Timothy Pitkin and Maria (Hartwell) Chapman. On both sides he is descended from old colonial ancestry, his great uncle, Major General Chapman, having served in the Revolutionary war.

Dr. Chapman attended Professor Arnold's grammar school in New York city, where he was prepared for Columbia University, but owing to a change of plan he entered Yale instead, where he graduated in the class of 1866 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts, receiving in 1869 that of Master of Arts. In the latter year he also graduated as Doctor of Medicine from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York. He then spent some time studying in Berlin, Vienna and Heidelberg, and during the Franco-German war served as assistant in field hospitals. He devoted himself chiefly to the study of the throat and lungs under Professor Eckraetter, and spent one year in the Soho Square Hospital, London, studying gynecology. From 1873 till his death he was engaged in the practice of his profession in New Haven, devoting himself mainly to diseases of the throat and lungs. From 1874 to 1878 he was pathologist to the New Haven Hospital, and for a time held the positions of clinical instructor and lecturer on the throat and ear in the medical school of Yale University. He was physician and also pathologist to the New Haven Dispensary.

S. H. Chapman

Most of the contributions made by Dr. Chapman to the literature of his profession have appeared in the publications of the Laryngological Society. Dr. Chapman was vice president of the American Laryngological Society, and a member of the Climatological, Laryngological, and Otological societies. He also belonged to the Connecticut State Medical Society, the New Haven Medical Society, and the American Medical Association. He was for one term a member of the New Haven board of aldermen. His death occurred in New Haven, Connecticut, April 15, 1903, at the age of fifty-seven years.

GEORGE H. DONAHUE, M. D.—1882.

Dr. George H. Donahue, who commands a wide practice in medicine and surgery in Northport, Long Island, was born in Brooklyn, New York, June 20, 1855, a son of John and Alice Donahue. John Donahue was a member of the old Scotch Covenanter settlement in the north of Ireland, and after removing to this country he settled in Brooklyn, where for many years he was extensively engaged as a merchant tailor; later he removed to Northport, Long Island. He was united in marriage to Miss Alice Scott, of Canada, who was also a descendant of Scotch-Irish ancestry, and the following named children were born to them: James, George H. and Benjamin J. Donahue.

Dr. Donahue acquired the necessary education to prepare him for college in the private schools of Brooklyn; he then entered the University of Rochester, a Baptist school, from which he was graduated in 1877, receiving the degree of Bachelor of Arts. After a complete rest from study for one year he attended the medical department of the University of New York for a year, and later matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which he was graduated in the class of 1882. Dr. Donahue then secured the appointment of interne in the Charity Hospital, now known as the City Hospital of New York, and also of the Maternity Hospital on Blackwell's Island, and for two years he continued to serve in this capacity; he was the recipient of diplomas from both institutions. He then entered upon the active practice of his calling in New York city, and in addition to his large consulting patronage found time to attend the summer lectures in gynecology at the Post-Graduate College. He was also actively connected with Professor Winters at the Demilt Dispensary for three years in the department of diseases of children, and for two years served in the outdoor department of venereal diseases in Bellevue Hospital.

Owing to impaired health Dr. Donahue was forced to leave New York, and having some property in the village of Northport he removed there. Being well qualified both by study and hospital experience for all the duties that fall to the lot of a physician, he was soon in command of a large and lucrative patronage, which has increased with the passing years.

Dr. Donahue is a member of the Queens-Nassau Medical Society and the Associated Physicians of Long Island. In politics he is strictly independent and in social fraternities is a member of the Order of the Royal Arcanum. On June 29, 1882, he married Miss Susan Emma Mott, of Philadelphia, and they have one child, Walton Scott Donahue.

FREDERIC SMITH SELLEW, M. D.—1881.

Dr. Frederic S. Sellew, 61 East Seventy-ninth street, New York city, was born in Moscow, Livingston county, New York, July 27, 1858. His ancestry may be traced to Philip Sellew, who came to this country from Bordeaux, France, after the revocation of the Edict of Nantes, and settled near Boston. His son married a daughter of Sir Thomas Hamilton, a cousin of James I. of England. His grandson, Philip Sellew, fought in the Revolutionary war. Dr. Sellew's father, Welles Hamilton Sellew, was a graduate of the Yale Medical College in 1852. He practiced in western New York.

Dr. Sellew graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York in 1881, since which time he has resided in New York city. He is a member of the County Medical Society, the New York Academy of Medicine, the Society of Medical Jurisprudence, the Pathological Society, the Lenox Medical Society and the Physicians' Mutual Aid Association. He is also a member of the Grolier Club and of the Huguenot Society.

On October 19, 1887, Dr. Sellew married Catharine E. Willcox, of Hartford, Connecticut, a daughter of Samuel W. Willcox and seventh in direct line from Peregrine White, of Mayflower fame. Dr. Sellew has two children, Welles Hamilton Sellew and Waldo White Sellew.

ROBERT FANNING NOYES, M. D.—1873.

Dr. Robert Fanning Noyes was born February 8, 1850, in South Kingston, Rhode Island, and is the son of Thomas W. and Elmer E. (Allen) Noyes. The former, who was a farmer, traced his descent from the Rev. James Noyes, who came from England in 1634, in the ship Mary and John, and landed at Newbury, now Newburyport, Massachusetts. He was a man who had much to do with the upbuilding of New England. Through his paternal grandmother, who was an Arnold, Dr. Noyes is descended from Benedict Arnold, first governor of Rhode Island.

Until reaching the age of seventeen or eighteen, Dr. Noyes remained on the paternal farm, which had been his birthplace, being educated by private tutors and receiving instruction in mathematics and the languages from the Rev. J. H. Welles. Later he attended the Providence Conference Seminary at East Greenwich, the Friends' School at Providence, and the Connecticut Literary Institution at Suffield, Connecticut. In 1873 he graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York with the degree of Doctor of Medicine, and since December of that year has been engaged in the practice of his profession. For nearly a quarter of a century he has been connected with the Rhode Island Hospital, first with the out-patient department, and later as visiting physician. He is consulting physician to St. Joseph's Hospital, and also holds the position of medical director of that institution.

Dr. Noyes has written many papers which have been read before the different medical bodies with which he is connected, and is the author of an article entitled, "Perityphlitis Before Appendicitis was Thoroughly Understood." Dr. Noyes is a member of the Rhode Island Medical Society, in which he held the office of president from 1892 to 1894; the Providence Medical Association, of which he was president from 1890 to 1892, the Clinical Club, and the Friday Evening Medical Club. He is a member of the Baptist church. He married, May 15, 1888, in Providence, Miss Katharine H. Gifford. They have one child, Emily G. Mrs. Noyes, who is descended from an old New England family, is a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

JOSEPH HÜGER, M. D.—1880.

Dr. Joseph Hüger, physician and surgeon of Fort Lee, New Jersey, was born in that town, October 26, 1857, a son of Louis and Catherine (Faller) Hüger, both natives of Germany. Dr. Hüger prepared for college in the public schools of Fort Lee, and he received some private instruction from competent preceptors, after which he entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he was graduated with the degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1880. He then served an internship of sixteen months in St. Peter's Hospital, Brooklyn, New York. In the fall of 1881 he located in his native town, where he has since conducted an extensive practice that is constantly growing, both in volume and importance.

Dr. Hüger is a man of unswerving integrity and honor, and he has gained and retained the confidence and respect of his fellow men, and ranks among the prominent practitioners of Fort Lee, with whose interests he has long been identified. In addition to his private practice he was appointed health inspector of Richfield township, and he also acts in the capacity of examiner for the New York Life Insurance Company, the Equitable Life Insurance Company, the Home Life Insurance Company of New York, the Prudential Insurance Company of Newark, New Jersey, and many others. He is a prominent member of the Bergen County District Medical Society.

ALEXANDER COCHRAN, M. D.—1855.

Alexander Cochran, M. D., the youngest son of George and Mary (Gilfillan) Cochran, was born in county Derry, Ireland, November 13, 1831. His school days were passed at the Temple Moyle Seminary and at Foyle College, Londonderry. On the completion of his studies he came to the United States, and after travelling extensively through different parts of the country, he finally decided upon Brooklyn as a temporary residence. He was influenced in his choice of a profession by the fact that two of his brothers had come to New York some time prior to his arrival and had graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons; with one of these, John Cochran, M. D., he immediately began a course of medical study, previous to his own matriculation at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, from which he was graduated in 1855.

He served in the hospital at Blackwell's Island for six months, then traveled with his brother through the south, Mexico, and to Havana, Cuba, returning to Brooklyn only to continue his travels abroad in 1857. During his stay in Ireland he pursued his studies at Trinity College, and on his return to America the following year he located in Brooklyn for the permanent practice of his profession, being now at 182 Park Place. He has always been especially interested in surgery, having devoted much time to anatomy and to the operating room through his entire medical course.

Dr. Cochran was one of the Sanitary Inspectors connected with the health department of Brooklyn for many years. At different times he was surgeon of the Thirteenth Regiment, and of the Fifty-sixth Regiment, National Guards State of New York, and of the Eleventh Brigade, having served as surgeon for the latter during the late war, and having retained this position until he received his discharge from the state of New York and from the United States.

Dr. Cochran was married September 10, 1858, to Christina Isabella Wilson, a native of Meath Park, Coleraine, county Derry, Ireland; they have six sons and two daughters: John A., a graduate of the College of Physicians and Surgeons; George G., a physician in Brooklyn; William H. A., an attorney at 13 Broadway, New York; James W., who served in the Spanish war and is at present with the Wells-Fargo Express Company of San Francisco; Joseph G., a clerk in the United States supreme court clerk's office, Brooklyn; Robert S. H., Mary G., and Maria, the wife of Dr. V. A. Robertson.

GEORGE WASHINGTON PAPEN, M. D.—1874.

Dr. George W. Papen, physician and surgeon of Albany, New York, was born in that city, April 20, 1854, a son of Theodore and Julia (Wachter) Papen, the former named being a native of Europe, where his father was prominently identified with the army, holding a high position; an uncle of George W. Papen was for many years an eminent physician of the city of Hanover, Germany.

Dr. George W. Papen passed the early years of his life in attendance at the Albany Boys' Academy, and later pursued a course of study in the German-American Academy of Albany, New York. Shortly after his graduation he was engaged in pharmacy. The deep interest felt in the study of medicine, also his acquaintance with the members of the profession, led to his selection of medicine for his life work. He commenced his preparatory studies under the competent preceptorship of Dr. Jacob S. Mosher and later studied with Dr. Edward and Dr. Thomas Hun. After completing this course of reading he matriculated in the Albany Medical College, and subsequently in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which he was graduated with the degree of Doctor of Medicine in the class of 1874. Dr. Papen then visited Europe and pursued a course of study in nervous diseases under the guidance of Dr. Charcot. Upon his return to his native land he engaged in active practice in Albany, New York. The success which attends his efforts is but a natural sequence, for his position is assured by reason of his ability, his sterling integrity, his devotion to his profession, and the interest which he manifests in the welfare of those to whom he ministers.

Dr. Papen is a member of the Albany County Medical Society, the New York State Medical Association, and the Alumni Association of the Albany Boys' Academy. He is also prominently affiliated with the Masonic order, having attained the thirty-second degree in the Scottish Rite, and he is a noble in the Ancient Arabic Order of the Mystic Shrine. Dr. Papen was united in marriage to Miss Elizabeth A. Peters, of Albany, New York, in 1881. Their children are: George W., Jr., a student of medicine, and Hilda W. Papen.

HENRY SHILLINGFORD MILES, PH.G., M. D.—1891.

Dr. Henry S. Miles was born in Sag Harbor, Long Island, October 14, 1866, the son of Dr. Edgar and Frances Esther (Lewis) Miles, the former being a successful medical practitioner of that town for fifty-four years. Dr. Henry S. Miles attended the high school of Sag Harbor, from which he was graduated in 1884; he entered the New York College of Pharmacy in 1886, from which institution he received the degree of Graduate of Pharmacy in 1888; he then matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, and graduated with the degree of Doctor of Medicine in the class of 1891.

On June 1, 1892, Dr. Miles entered upon the active practice of his profession at Bridgeport, Connecticut, and since September of the same year he has devoted special attention to eye and ear diseases, spending the winter of 1895-96 in the eye hospitals of Europe, where he gained valuable knowledge on ophthalmic and aural subjects. On June 1, 1891, he was appointed a member of the house staff of Bridgeport Hospital for the term of one year; in November, 1892, he received the appointment of clinical assistant at the Manhattan Eye and Ear Hospital, New York, and on January 1, 1895, was appointed assistant surgeon of the same institution, which position he resigned in January, 1902. In October, 1894, he was appointed assistant surgeon to the eye and ear department of the Bridgeport Hospital, and three years later became visiting ophthalmic and aural surgeon to the same institution, in which capacity he still acts. In 1897 Dr. Miles was requested by the superintendent of schools to examine the eyes of the public school children of Bridgeport, and spent much of his time during the next two years in this work; he was instrumental in having a law passed by the state legislature in 1899 requiring a regular, uniform examination of the eyes of all school children in Connecticut. On March 1, 1903, he was appointed to the New York Eye and Ear Infirmary.

Dr. Miles is the author of a number of medical articles, among which are the following: "The Errors of Refraction Found in Four Thousand Eyes," 1894; "A Number of Lens Cases Illustrating Heredity," 1896; "The Eyes of School Children," 1902; "The Conjunctival Flap in Cataract Extractions," 1902. Dr. Miles is a member of the Bridgeport Medical Association, of which he was president in 1900; Fairfield County and Connecticut Medical societies, American Medical Association and the New York Academy of Medicine. He is also actively associated with the Bridgeport Historical and Scientific societies, the Bridgeport Yacht Club and the Bridgeport Seaside Club. On November 5, 1896, Dr. Miles married Carrie Snibert Merrall, the ceremony being performed at Sag Harbor, Long Island. Miss Merrall was a daughter of Edward R. Merrall and a descendant from Revolutionary stock through his mother's family.

JOSEPH WILLIAM STICKLER, M. S., M. D.—1879.

The late Dr. Joseph William Stickler, of Orange, New Jersey, was born in Hoboken, New Jersey, June 26, 1854, and was an only son of Joseph Whipple and Charlotte (Snell) Stickler. His early education was obtained in private schools, and he completed his preparation for college in the Orange high school. He was graduated from the University of the City of New York with the degree of Bachelor of Science, and later his alma mater conferred upon him the degree of Master of Science. He matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York in 1876 and received his medical degree in 1879. After passing several months abroad and serving an internship in the Presbyterian Hospital in New York, he located in Orange in 1881, where until his death, May 18, 1899, he enjoyed a large and select patronage. In 1881 and 1882 he was lecturer on surgery and diseases of the skin in the College of Comparative Medicine of New York. From 1878 to 1880 he was physician to the Lying-in Asylum of New York, and from 1893 to 1899 visiting surgeon and pathologist to the Orange Memorial Hospital. When the phthisis ward was established there he requested that he be transferred from the surgical to the medical side and given charge of that ward. This led to his making very extended investigation along that line, and when Professor Koch announced his antitoxine, Dr. Stickler visited Germany and conducted a long course of experiments, only to find that the true antitoxine had not yet been discovered. Upon another occasion, in 1886, he visited England and passed some time in a district where cattle were affected with foot-and-mouth disease with a view to determine its relation to human scarlatina as a prophylactic, and his article on the subject which appeared in the Medical Record, December 10, 1887, and later in pamphlet form, was highly appreciated by the profession. He was also the author of "Adirondacks as a Health Resort," "Diseases and Climatology of Essex County, New Jersey," and numerous other monographs and papers. In recognition of the value of the last named articles, he was awarded a prize of one hundred dollars by the Medical Society of the State of New Jersey, a proceeding which was unique in the history of that organization. At the time of his death Dr. Stickler was engaged in experiments in New York upon the lower animals, trying to isolate the germ of scarlet fever, and a very interesting point had been reached. After his death an article written some time previous, "Scarlet Fever Reproduced by Inoculation; Some Important Points Deduced Therefrom," was published in the Medical Record and was considered of much value.

Dr. Stickler was a member of the New York Academy of Medicine, the New York Pathological Society, the Orange Mountain Medical Society, the Essex County District Medical Society, the New Jersey State Medical Society, and the Society for the Relief of Widows and Orphans of Medical Men of New Jersey. He was ex-president and a director of the Young Men's Christian Association of Orange, a director of the Second National Bank, and an elder of the First Presbyterian church. Dr. Stickler was not only a distinguished member of his profession, but stood high in the social and public life of the community in which he had labored so long and earnestly. He was ever ready to aid, by his means and influence, all undertakings which he thought would benefit society or his beloved profession. He was especially interested in educational work and for several years prior to his death was pathologist to the board of health. In him were combined the qualities of a social and domestic gentleman, and a cultivated man of science, and he possessed in a high degree the public spirit which is essential to good American citizenship. After his death, his parents, since deceased, presented to the city of Orange a beautiful public library as a memorial to their beloved and only son. On August 6, 1896, Dr. Stickler married Miss Mary Harding, daughter of Rev. John W. and Mehetable (Lane) Harding, of Longmeadow, Massachusetts; she and her son, Joseph Harding Stickler, survive him.

GEORGE VAN RENSSELAER MERRILL, M. D.—1863.

Dr. George Van Rensselaer Merrill, an able and experienced physician of Elmira, New York, was born in Cortland county, New York, February 24, 1841, and is the son of Rensselaer and Henrietta (Sweet) Merrill. When he was six years old his parents removed to Elmira, where he received an academic education in the schools of the city. Having made choice of the practice of medicine as a life calling, he entered upon a course of preparatory study under the guidance of Dr. R. Morse, subsequently matriculating in the medical department of the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, where he attended his first course of lectures. He then entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, but had scarcely completed his first course when the country was startled by the outbreak of the Civil war. Being then too young to graduate and receive his diploma, he decided to abandon his studies for the time being, and accordingly enlisted as a private, but was shortly after taken from the ranks and made a medical cadet. Subsequently he passed a successful examination for assistant surgeon of the Sixth United States Colored Infantry. In 1863 he graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons, and in 1865 was promoted to surgeon of United States Colored Infantry. In the same year he was mustered out of the service, after which he returned to Elmira, and thence removed to Waverly, where for a few years he engaged in the drug business. Returning once more to Elmira, he entered upon the active practice of his profession, where he has been for many years in the possession of a large and profitable practice.

Dr. Merrill's professional appointments in both military and civil life have been numerous. While assistant surgeon in the army he was on detached service, and had charge of the construction of convalescent camps at Point of Rocks. He was also health officer at Newberne and subsequently for a brief time in charge of the field hospital of the Tenth Army Corps. From 1890 to 1900 he served as visiting physician on the staff of the Arnot-Ogden Memorial Hospital, and from 1885 to 1889 he filled the office of superintendent of schools in Elmira. The fact that Dr. Merrill held the last named position shows that his interests are not bounded by the limits of his profession, but that he is no less zealous in the duties of a citizen than in those of a physician. He is a member of the Medical Society of the State of New York, of the Chemung County Medical Society, and is a fellow of the Academy of Medicine. Dr. Merrill married in 1863 Miss Harriet E. Johnson, a native of Maine, who died in 1901, and in 1902 Dr. Merrill married Miss Loretta F. Burgess, of Elmira.

EDWARD WILLIAM DANIELS, M. D.—1892.

Dr. Edward William Daniels, of 60 Warrenton street, Boston, Massachusetts, was born in Worcester, Massachusetts, and is the son of Thomas and Anna (Power) Daniels. His father was a native of Carrick-on-Suir, county of Tipperary, Ireland, and came from Waterford, Ireland, and settled in Worcester about 1850.

Dr. Daniels received his early education in the public schools of his native city, and in the Worcester high school, subsequently receiving from the Holy Cross College of that city the degree of Bachelor of Arts. In 1892 he was graduated as Doctor of Medicine from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University, New York city. From 1892 to 1895 he served as surgeon-in-charge on the staff of the Boston Emergency Hospital. At the expiration of his term of service he remained in Boston, where he has since been engaged in general practice. In politics he is a Democrat. Dr. Daniels married Mary Z. McKenna; they have no children.

SIMON LEOPOLD ELSNER, M. D.—1887.

Dr. Simon Leopold Elsner, a well known and very successful physician of Rochester, New York, is a member of a German family which has contributed several of its members to the medical profession, his father having been a physician, and his two brothers, Professor Henry L. Elsner and Dr. John Elsner, being at the present time active practitioners in Syracuse, New York, and in Denver, Colorado, respectively.

Edward W. Daniels

Simon Leopold Elsner, son of Dr. Leopold and Hanchen (Sulzbacher) Elsner, was born August 25, 1865, in Syracuse, New York, and received his elementary education in the schools of that city, subsequently becoming a student at the University of Syracuse. He did not, however, remain to graduate, having decided early in life to adopt the profession which might be said to be hereditary in his family. His preliminary professional study was pursued under the guidance of his brother, Dr. Henry L. Elsner, of Syracuse, after which he attended his first course of lectures in the medical department of Syracuse University. He then matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which institution he was graduated in the class of 1887. After serving for two years as house physician in Mount Sinai Hospital, New York, he entered upon an active personal practice in Rochester. He is now serving on the junior staff of the Rochester City Hospital. Dr. Elsner is a member of the Monroe County Medical Society, the Rochester Pathological Society, and the Medical Association of Central New York, of which he is ex-treasurer, and was formerly chairman of the gynecological section of the Rochester Academy of Medicine. He is medical examiner for Union Central Life Insurance Company, Cincinnati, Ohio; State Mutual of Worcester, Massachusetts; John Hancock Life Insurance Company, Massachusetts. Dr. Elsner married, in 1891, Miss Minnie Wolff, of Rochester, who died in 1901, and in 1902 Dr. Elsner married Mrs. Steinert, of Boston, Massachusetts.

RALPH SCHUYLER GOODWIN, JR., PH. B., M. D.—1893.

Ralph Schuyler Goodwin, Jr., physician and surgeon of New Haven, Connecticut, was born at Thomaston, Connecticut, September 19, 1868. He is the son of Ralph Schuyler and Jeanie Edith (Irvine) Goodwin, and comes of a family that has furnished many honored names to the history of Connecticut. His father, who is widely known as a skillful and reliable physician, was born in Litchfield, Connecticut, and his mother in New York city. He is a lineal descendant of Ozias Goodwin, who came to America from Braintree, county Essex, England, and located at Newtown, Massachusetts, September 16, 1632. This ancestor was one of the famous little band of emigrants who accompanied the Rev. Thomas Hooker from eastern Massachusetts across the wilderness to found the colony of Hartford in 1636.

The subject of this sketch began his studies, preparatory for college, at the high school of his native town and finished them at a private school in Elizabeth, New Jersey. At the age of eighteen he entered the scientific department of Yale College, where he graduated in 1890 with the degree of Ph. B. Having chosen medicine for his profession, he became a student at the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which college his father was graduated in 1866, and there he gained the degree of M. D. in 1893. He was soon afterwards appointed resident physician and surgeon on the staff of the New Haven Hospital, in which capacity he served a year and a half. In 1895 he temporarily assumed the practice of his father during the absence of the latter on a vacation trip to Europe. The succeeding year he went abroad and spent several months in study and recreation. He settled in New Haven in 1897, where he still resides and is favorably known as a successful general practitioner.

Dr. Goodwin has been an assistant in pediatrics in the Yale Medical School since 1900 and is a member of the City, County and State Medical societies, to which he has contributed papers of interest. He was for many years a member of the Quinnipiack Club and has belonged to the Gradautes' Club since his first residence in the city. He is socially inclined and fond of athletic sports, being a member of the New Haven Golf Club. His record as a physician is an honorable one and reflects credit for his thorough medical training as well as for a careful and patient discharge of his professional duties.

DAVID KENNEDY, M. D.—1860.

Dr. David Kennedy, who for over thirty years was closely identified with the interests of Rondout, Ulster county, New York, was a physician whose name is dear to many, both as a skillful and respected practitioner and as a personal friend. He was born in New York city, April 20, 1832, and when nine years of age was taken by his parents to Roxbury, New York, where he spent his youth, receiving his education in the district schools, supplemented by attendance at a private school known as Beechwood. When only ten years of age he became a United States mail carrier between Roxbury and what is now Arkville, making the thirteen-mile trip tri-weekly on horseback. When nineteen years of age he further exhibited that self-reliant and resolute spirit which characterized his entire life. Becoming impressed with the idea that the new El Dorado of California offered superior inducements to men of perseverance and energy, he resolved to join the company of the argonauts. His father being a man of limited means, and an elder brother wishing to make the trip also, David negotiated a loan from neighbors, and sailed from New York for Aspinwall in company with his brother and three hundred others bound on the same mission. After reaching Aspinwall, they poled their way up the Chagres river to Gargona, making the remainder of the trip to Panama City with their worldly effects strapped on their backs. On arriving there, they found that the price of passage to San Francisco had been increased, and as a consequence they were compelled, with others similarly situated, to remain at Panama City until a sailing vessel could be put in condition to take them to their destination. After a delay of forty days in starting and a journey of seventy-two days with short rations, they arrived in San Francisco in a destitute condition. Without delay young Kennedy proceeded to Sacramento, where his brother had arrived in advance, and who was engaged in the real estate business. Through his brother's instrumentality, David obtained a clerkship, and while thus engaged secured one hundred and sixty acres of land on Sacramento river at the price of fifty dollars an acre, disposing of it the following week at an advance of three hundred and fifty dollars. After paying necessary expenses he remitted the balance to his parents at home, and then started for Nevada City in quest of gold, working, after his arrival, with a pick and shovel. Eighteen months later he returned to his home, liquidated his loan, and after a short stay once more turned his face westward. He remained in Nevada City one year, and then went to San Francisco.

Having decided to devote himself to the practice of medicine, he began his preparatory studies by matriculating in the medical department of the Pacific University, where he took a preliminary and regular course, after which he returned to New York and entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons, where he was graduated in the class of 1860. He entered upon the active practice of his profession in Schenectady, where he remained in successful practice for one year, but on the outbreak of the Civil war he offered his services to the government and was appointed acting assistant surgeon, and assigned to the Nineteenth Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry. He participated in the second battle of Bull Run, and in those of Slaughter Mountain and Antietam. After the last named engagement he was ordered to duty at Fortress Monroe, where he was appointed president of the examining board for the deportation of soldiers and hospitals. His duties called him from Fortress Monroe to Portsmouth and Norfolk, and finally to the Satterlee United States General Hospital in West Philadelphia, where he was made president of the examining board and consulting surgeon, remaining until the close of the war in 1865. No important operation at this hospital could be performed without Dr. Kennedy's consent, and many of the most delicate operations he performed himself.

On returning to civil life Dr. Kennedy decided to settle in Titusville, Pennsylvania, where he engaged in the practice of his profession. The "oil fever" was then at its height, and Dr. Kennedy invested in oil lands, a venture that proved profitable and from which, with that foresight which was one of his most prominent characteristics, he retired before the crash came. The year 1870 found him settled in Rondout, established in a profitable practice, and recognized both by patients and professional brethren as a skillful, successful and conscientious physician. It was at this period that, owing to the popularity to which some of his prescriptions had attained, he was led to the preparation of the remedies which by reason of their merit have made his name known throughout the land. The business which had its origin in the sale of these remedies has grown from a small beginning to its present proportions, and his Calcurea Solvent and various other well-known preparations are in demand everywhere.

Notwithstanding the absorbing nature of Dr. Kennedy's professional duties, he took an unflinching and active interest in public affairs, and was recognized by his townsmen as a power for truth and right. He was twice elected mayor of Kingston, and at the time of Cleveland's first election to the presidency Dr. Kennedy filled the office of presidential elector and was designated by the New York electors to convey the result of the vote to Washington. He was prominently connected with financial institutions and business enterprises, and in these as in all his other undertakings his name was a synonym for honor and integrity. Dr. Kennedy married, in 1868, Miss Eliza B. Gilbert, of Stamford, Delaware county, New York, and was the father of two sons and two daughters, Gilbert F., David, Anna McPherson and Adelaide.

In the death of Dr. Kennedy, which occurred August 5, 1901, hundreds of friends felt that they had sustained a personal loss. Aside from his unblemished public and professional life, there is another and a greater phase that no mere biographical sketch of dates and achievements can cover. There was nothing of the Pharisee in Dr. Kennedy's nature. Boasting and display were so repugnant to him that only those who experienced his kindness and generosity ever heard of this side of the man. Ever ready to impart wise counsel when sought, he was equally ready with that more immediate and tangible aid that so many mere givers of good advice withhold. And of these multitudinous acts of generosity only the recipients ever told. A hater of shams, Dr. Kennedy was fearless in advocating that which to him seemed right. With him acts, not words, counted. It was by their acts that he gauged men. It was by his acts that those who experienced his kindness gauged him. Quietly, without hope of material reward, actuated only by love of doing good, Dr. Kennedy dealt with his fellows less fortunate than he in accumulating worldly goods, and many a life was saved from wreck by his kindly and timely aid.

FREDERICK PORTER HAMMOND, M. D.—1889.

Dr. Frederick Porter Hammond, of 129 East One Hundred and Sixteenth street, New York city, belongs to an old New England family. The first mention in the Massachusetts archives of Dr. Hammond's lineal ancestors is the record of the marriage of John Hammond, of Gloucester, to Mary Lowell, which occurred October 17, 1660. The place and date of his death are unknown. John Hammond (2), elder son of John (1) and Mary (Lowell) Hammond, was born and died at Gloucester, Massachusetts, in 1748. John Hammond (3), elder son of John (2), is believed to have been the earliest settler of North Yarmouth, Maine.

Benjamin Hammond (4), second son of John (3), was born January 8, 1735, in North Yarmouth, Maine, and in early youth moved to New Gloucester in the same state. He served in the continental army of the Revolution, and acted as a scout in conducting the Arnold expedition through the Maine wilderness. His signature appears on a document in the Massachusetts state house asking that troops be sent to New Gloucester to protect the place against Indians, whose proximity, it seems, was a menace to the town as late as 1770, in which year the petition was presented. While still serving in the continental army, Benjamin Hammond died at Saratoga, New York, in 1777, the place and year rendered memorable by a conflict now mentioned as the battle of Saratoga, but known for nearly a century as Burgoyne's surrender.

Benjamin Hammond (5), son of Benjamin (4), was born July 13, 1760, in New Gloucester, Maine, and was one of the first settlers of the town of Paris in the same state, where he died February 28, 1838. Ezra Hammond (6), son of Benjamin (5), was born May 21, 1786, in Paris, Maine, and died at his birthplace, March 22, 1863. George Francis Hammond (7), son of Ezra (6), was born June 16, 1825, in Paris, Maine, where he was prominent in town and county affairs, serving for many years as selectman of the place, and from 1880 to 1888 holding the office of county commissioner of Oxford county, Maine. He married Julia Freeland Albee, born February 28, 1829, in Bethel, Maine.

Frederick Porter Hammond (8), son of George Francis (7) and Julia Freeland (Albee) Hammond, was born April 22, 1866, in Paris, Maine, and received his elementary education in the public schools of his native place, subsequently attending Paris Hill Academy, and later Hebron Academy at Hebron, Maine, one of the oldest educational institutions of the state. He was a student for one year, 1885-86, in the medical department of Bowdoin College in Brunswick, Maine, and passed the years 1887-88 and 1888-89 at the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he graduated June 13, 1889, with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. After two years' service as interne in the Harlem Hospital, he entered, October 1, 1891, upon a career of private practice at 1427 Washington avenue, Borough of the Bronx, but remained there only three weeks, removing then to Harlem. In this neighborhood he has since continued in practice, and has resided at his present address, 129 East One Hundred Sixteenth street, for the last six years. From October 1, 1889, to October 1, 1891, while serving as one of the internes at the Harlem Hospital, he successively filled the positions of ambulance surgeon, junior assistant, senior assistant and house surgeon. For about a year and a half he was one of the assistants in the gynecological department of Vanderbilt Clinic, serving in a corresponding position for about one year in the Post-Graduate Medical School. For six years he was attending gynecologist and chief of clinic at the out-patient department of Harlem Hospital, resigning this position in March, 1901. He has served on various committees of the New York County Medical Association, and in June, 1902, was elected second vice president of this body.

Among the articles upon gynecological topics which Dr. Hammond has contributed from time to time to the medical journals, may be mentioned the following: "A Belief that the So-Called Displacements of the Womb Were Not Pathological," New York Medical Record, June 4, 1888; "Genital Neuralgia," and "The Genito-Reflex Pains," Transactions of the New York State Medical Association, Vol. 15, 1898, and the Philadelphia Medical Journal, March 11, 1898.

Dr. Hammond is a member of the American Medical Association, the New York State Medical Association, the Harlem Medical Association, the New York Physicians' Mutual Aid Association, and the Alumni Association of the College of Physicians and Surgeons. He is a prominent member of the Masonic fraternity, joining Harlem Lodge No. 457, F. & A. M., in 1898; Sylvan Chapter No. 188, R. A. M., in 1899; and Constantine Commandery No. 48, K. T., the same year; he is a member of Mecca Temple, Ancient Arabic Order Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. He takes a great interest in field sports, following in the footsteps of his father by being an ardent lover of the rod and gun. Fishing and camping out are among his favorite modes of recreation. He is liberal in his religious views, and in matters of theology inclines toward Universalism. Dr. Hammond married, January 1, 1894, in New York city, Elizabeth Helen Van Blarcom, daughter of John and Emma (Weller) Van Blarcom, of Sussex county, New Jersey. Dr. and Mrs. Hammond have two children; Helen Van Blarcom, born June 27, 1896; and Julie Freeland, born January 8, 1899.

J. FRANCIS CHAPMAN, M. D.—1869.

James Francis Chapman, physician and surgeon of Katonah, Westchester county, New York, was born in Pepperell, Massachusetts, July 23, 1844, at the old homestead still remaining in the family possession, near the home of the renowned historian Prescott. His paternal ancestry were of the good old Puritan stock, noted for its integrity and strict religious principles. On the maternal side, he claims a kinship to Revolutionary sires, and the heroes of 1812, and tells of the old "flint-lock" musket, of his grandfather's, with which he played soldier when a boy.

Elias Chapman, father of Dr. J. Francis Chapman, one of the eldest of a numerous family of sons and daughters of Elijah Chapman, was throughout a long lifetime of nearly ninety years, one of Pepperell's most highly esteemed citizens. He was a "past master" at his trade of carpenter and builder, for more than fifty years, and although not ambitious for civic honors, was counted among the most reliable and worthy of his townsmen. He married Harriett Elizabeth Tarbell, eldest daughter of Luther and Phoebe M. Tarbell, and three children were born to them: Henry A., who for twenty-five years spent his best energies as teacher, principal, and commissioner of public schools in his native town, and later entered upon mercantile pursuits; he died, in his prime, at the old home, October 7, 1898. The subject of this sketch was the second child, and Eliza J., wife of Herbert T. Lawrence, a prominent coal merchant of Boston, the youngest. The devoted mother, of sweetest memory, lived to see her children started in life and with them around her fell asleep, March 11, 1878.

Dr. Chapman acquired his preliminary education at the public schools of his home town, and at the Pepperell Academy, and for a while took a position as clerk in a Boston store. This being the thrilling period of the great Civil war, he was prompted to go to the front with the boys in blue. Being too young to enlist he took a position in the quartermaster's office with the One Hundred Twenty-ninth United States Colored Infantry, and for two years did faithful and important duty, with pen, rather than with sword. In the spring of 1866 the regiment was disbanded and while upon a visit to relatives near Philadelphia, on his way home to New England, he met his fate and a new future, undreamed of, for he met the accomplished daughter of Dr. Seth Shove, of Katonah, New York, who on October 10, of the same year, became his wife.

He commenced June 1, 1866, the study of medicine under Dr. Shove, noted as the leading surgeon of Westchester county, known and honored throughout a wide field; he was a "twenty-niner" of old Yale, when Benjamin Sillman, Ives, Knight and a coterie of famous men of the old century filled the professorships. On March 1, 1869, after three years of hard work, and invaluable clinical experience at the bedside, with his preceptor, Dr. Chapman graduated and had the distinction of winning the first Harsen prize medal, together with a check for one hundred and fifty dollars, and the Harsen prize diploma. He also received second honorable mention for his graduating thesis. After his graduation he continued his affiliation with Dr. Shove, his father-in-law, which pleasant alliance continued for about ten years, or until the death of Dr. Shove, which occurred February 24, 1878. After this sad severing of ties so dear, of friend, relative, preceptor and associate, Dr. Chapman continued his practice alone, and has, during the thirty-five years of professional life, gained and held an exalted place in the hearts and lives of a wide circle of confiding friends and patrons.

J. Francis Chapman

Dr. Chapman was for ten years secretary of his County Medical Society and was then honored by being made its president. In 1872 he became a member of the New York State Medical Society. For twenty years or more he has been physician to St. Joseph's Institute, Amawalk, and has served in a like capacity in the Jennie Clarkson Home for Children since its organization. At the Bedford Reformatory for Women he has held the position of oculist, a branch of the profession to which he has been greatly attached and to which he has devoted much time and special study, for which purpose he attended the clinics of the New York Eye and Ear Infirmary for more than two years. He was appointed pension examining surgeon of the Tarrytown board, and served during the administration of President Harrison. This appointment was conferred upon Dr. Chapman without his solicitation or knowledge, and was the result of the many years of near association with his friend, the late Judge William H. Robertson. Careful and conscientious in everything, he has been a highly valued examiner for all the large life insurance companies.

In 1872 he was one of the seven zealous Christian professors who organized the Katonah Presbyterian church; he was ordained as elder, served as superintendent of its Sunday school for twelve years, has been clerk of the session from its beginning, and chairman of its board of trustees since the death of his predecessor, Judge Robertson. He was a frequent delegate to the Presbytery of Westchester, and was appointed by that body a commissioner to the general assembly at Minneapolis in 1899. He is a member of Kisco Lodge No. 708, F. & A. M., a large and progressive body of Masons. Dr. Chapman is noted among his friends and acquaintances as an enthusiastic lover of art, and his censorship is often solicited in matters pertaining thereto. He seldom allows a noted exhibition in the New York galleries to pass unvisited, and his library contains many choice works upon the ancient and modern masters. From time to time he responds to requests to give illustrated lectures, which have always been received in terms of highest praise, both for pleasing delivery and the superb projection upon the screen of carefully selected artistic views, by means of his self-constructed apparatus. "Art is long and time is fleeting," and Dr. Chapman is jealous of time, and does much reading while upon long drives over the country in his daily rounds of professional calls, and for years, a common remark passes around, "You never see the doctor without his book."

Dr. and Mrs. Chapman have two children. The eldest is Dr. Charles Francis Chapman, born in 1868, carefully prepared for college and a graduate of the College of Physicians and Surgeons in 1890. He settled in Mount Kisco, New York, and enjoys a large clientele. The younger, Herbert Shove Chapman, born in 1870, evinced no liking for the profession of his father, and entered the office of the North British and Mercantile Insurance Company, and is now an underwriter in that institution. The family home is one of the largest and most attractive residences in the village of Katonah, situated upon the Terrace, and called "Glenhurst," for nearby runs a babbling brook through a glen shaded by some noble old chestnut trees.

HANAU WOLF LOEB, M. D.—1888.

The ancestors of this well known physician and surgeon were from Rhenish Prussia, and he was born in Philadelphia to Bernhard and Bertha (Myer) Loeb. Almost his entire life has been passed in Missouri. His early education was acquired in Christian College and Stephens College at Columbia, and he was graduated from the Missouri State University in 1883 with the degrees of A. B. and Pe. B., and three years later was honored with the A. M. He was a fraternity member of the Phi Beta Kappa. He was a student of the well known Dr. Jacob Geiger of St. Joseph, Missouri, and received his degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1888. In 1888-90 he was professor of physiology in the Ensworth Medical College at St. Joseph, and since that time has been professor of diseases of the nose and throat in the Marion-Sims College of Medicine at St. Louis, having held the position of secretary of the faculty since 1894.

Dr. Loeb was secretary of the Mississippi Valley Medical Association in 1898-99, a member of the council and the vice president of the American Laryngological, Rhinological and Otological Society in 1902, has been editor of the St. Louis Medical Review since 1899, and since the same date the editor in chief of the Annals of Otology, Rhinology and Laryngology. He is a member of the American Medical Association, the American Laryngological, Rhinological and Otological Society, the Mississippi Valley Medical Association, the Missouri State Medical Society, the St. Louis Medical Society, the American Academy of Medicine and the St. Louis Academy of Science. He has lately been made secretary of the executive committee of the International Medical Congress to be held in St. Louis during the World's Fair in 1904.

These remarks would already indicate the prominence of Dr. Loeb in professional circles, but he has done much more to advance the science by his writings, and the following titles will show the results of his work in his special line: "The Electro-Cautery in Nose and Throat Diseases," "Nasal Headaches," "Double Nasal Atresia due to Smallpox," "The Value of Sharp Curettes in the Removal of Septal Projections," "A Means of an

Overgrowth of the Intermaxillary Frenum." "A Case of Rhino-Pharyngeal Fibroma, with Projections Extending to Both Anterior Nares," Carcinoma of the Epipharynx." "Fibro-papilloma of the Larynx with Unusual Movements."

On April 12, 1893, Dr. Loeb was married to Miss Grace Sadler, and they have one child, Jeanette Irene Loeb; their residence is at 4401 Delmar Boulevard. Such a devotion to his profession and science as the above sketch would suggest is worthy of the highest commendation, and in the interest of the medical fraternity in general it is to be hoped that there are many years before him which he can devote to the prosecution of his research and instruction.

WILLIAM PARTRIDGE BRANDEGEE, M. D.—1889.

Dr. William Partridge Brandegee was born in New York city, April 16, 1864, and is the son of Marius and Catherine Amelia (Fountain) Brandegee. The former graduated from Yale University in the class of 1843. Dr. Brandegee was fitted for college at Dr. John Pingry's School in Elizabeth, New Jersey, and then entered Yale University, from which he graduated in June, 1886, as Bachelor of Arts. He then took up the study of medicine at the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University, receiving his degree in 1889. Since that time he has practiced medicine in New York city. From 1890 to 1897 he served as assistant surgeon to the throat and nose department of the Manhattan Eye and Ear Hospital, and since 1896 has held the position of senior assistant surgeon to the aural department of the New York Eye and Ear Infirmary. He is instructor in otology to the University and Bellevue Hospital Medical College.

Dr. Brandegee is a member of the New York State Medical Society, the New York County Medical Society, and a fellow of the New York Otological Society, and the American Laryngological, Rhinological and Otolological Society. He is connected with the University and Bellevue Hospital Medical Societies, and belongs to the Yale Club and the University Glee Club. Dr. Brandegee married, December 27, 1888, Caroline Morris. They have three children, Ruth Morris, William Partridge, Jr., and Morris Marius.

EPHRAIM DANIELS KLOTS, M. D.—1894.

Dr. Ephraim Daniels Klots was born December 10, 1870, in Brooklyn, New York, and is the son of Walter Travis and Elizabeth Underhill (Brown) Klots, the former, until his death, prominent in the business circles of Brooklyn. The paternal grandfather of Dr. Klots was all his life engaged in business in New York city, and was descended from German ancestors who originally settled in Pennsylvania. On the maternal side Dr. Klots comes of English stock, his grandfather having been a native of New England, who for many years held the office of president of the Mechanics' and Traders' Bank of New York. He was also one of the promoters of the Bowery Savings Bank, and a director of that institution.

The childhood of Dr. Klots, to the age of ten years, was spent in Paris, France, and his education was conducted by private tutors. Later he was sent to the Shattuck School, Faribault, Minnesota, where he graduated in the class of 1888. His first year in medicine was taken at the medical department of the University of Minnesota in 1891-2. The credentials offered by this college were accepted by the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, and it was there that Dr. Klots completed his course of study, graduating in 1894 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. In the spring of that year he received the appointment of interne to the Metropolitan Hospital, Blackwell's Island, and served as such from June 1, 1894, to December 1, 1895. Since February 1, 1899, he has been attending physician to this hospital, and also to the Hahnemann Hospital, New York city, where he is physician to the outdoor department. He is lecturer on bacteriology to the New York Homeopathic Medical College and Hospital. He is the author of a number of articles which have appeared in the medical journals. Dr. Klots is a member of the New York State Homeopathic Medical Society, the New York County Homeopathic Medical Society, and the Clinical and Barnard clubs of New York city. He married, October 16, 1901, Helen Constance, daughter of the Rev. William Leese Giles, of London, England. They have no children. Dr. Klots' address is 132 West Forty-seventh street.

WILLIAM BENHAM SNOW, M. D.—1885.

Dr. William B. Snow, editor of the Journal of Advanced Therapeutics and president of the New York School of Physical Therapeutics, was born in Ashland, Greene county, New York, October 23, 1860, a son of Newell C. and Nancy (Benham) Snow. On both sides Dr. Snow is a descendant of English ancestors. His father was a prosperous agriculturist and was universally beloved and respected in the community in which he resided. On the maternal side some of his ancestors were among the earliest settlers of New England, and several have been members of the medical profession. Dr. Thomas Benham, great-grandfather of Dr. Snow, was the father of three sons, all of whom were physicians, and in 1887 there were seven of his descendants who were actively engaged in the practice of medicine and surgery.

Dr. Snow attended the common schools of Ashland, and in 1878 completed an academic preparatory course in the Binghamton high school, Binghamton, New York, and received a state scholarship from his native assembly district for Cornell University. Owing to ill health, however, he was unable to embrace the opportunity. For two years he taught in the public schools and at the same time was under the tutelage of his pastor. Subsequently he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which institution he was graduated in 1885. During the winter of 1885-86 he pursued a course of instruction at the New York Polyclinic, for the purpose of more thoroughly qualifying himself for the practice of his profession. In the spring of 1886 he established an office in Ashland, Greene county, New York, and after remaining there for five years removed to Milton on the Hudson, Ulster county, where he was in active practice until March, 1895, when he settled in Kingston, New York, remaining three years.

In June, 1898, Dr. Snow took up his residence in New York, where he began an active study and practice of electro-therapeutics in the office of Professor William J. Moston and in the clinic at the Post-Graduate Medical School and Hospital. In the same year he was appointed clinical assistant in the department of electro-therapeutics and nervous diseases at the Post-Graduate School, and the following year was promoted to the position of instructor, which he held until March, 1900, when he resigned. From March, 1900, to October, 1900, he acted in the capacity of medical director of a sanitarium in Atlanta, Georgia, and then returned to New York and resumed his private practice. In January, 1902, at the request of A. L. Chatterton, Dr. Snow assumed the editorship of the Journal of Advanced Therapeutics, a publication which supplanted the Journal of Electro-Therapeutics and the New York Lancet. This publication retains none of the characteristics of either of the older journals, but is the culmination of the efforts of Dr. Snow to place before the profession abstracts from current literature and original articles upon the subjects of physical therapeutics and other methods recognized but not generally understood by the majority of the members of the medical profession.

At about the same time Dr. Snow conceived the idea of organizing the New York School of Physical Therapeutics, which project was carried out with the aid of several physicians. In this school clinics are held and lectures are given for the instruction of physicians in the various physical therapeutic methods which have not been taught in the medical schools of the past, and are taught in but few, if any, at the present time. The address of the school is 627 Lexington avenue, where two floors of the house are equipped with the best apparatus that can be procured for purposes of clinical demonstration, including large static machines, X-ray coils, galvanic and faradic outfits, hot air and vibration apparatus and electric arc light employed in photo-therapy. More than two hundred patients have already been treated, including generally the class of conditions in which other methods utterly fail. The use of electricity, which is taking an important place in therapeutics, is taught in the departments of gynecology, genito-urinary diseases, dermatology, diseases of the ear, nose and throat, and general and nervous diseases. The uses of the X-ray, now attracting general interest, is a leading feature of the work. Therapeutic exercise has been recognized and is in charge of one of the best educators in the country. The subject of dietetics, too often neglected, is in competent hands. Psychiatry and phototherapy and vibrationtherapy are recent additions to the course. The Clinical Society connected with the school meets on the third Friday evening of each month, when members of the profession are invited to take part in discussions upon the various subjects of the curriculum. The school has outgrown its present quarters and needs facilities for accommodating a constantly growing clinic. The institution, like others of its sort, is a charitable one, supported largely from donations and the students' fees; the services of the members of the faculty are gratuitous. Dr. Snow occupies the chairs of static technique and general electro-therapeutics, and radiotherapy.

He has contributed the following papers to current medical literature: "Rheumatoid Arthritis, and Treatment by Electro-Static Currents and Sparks," read before the American Electro-Therapeutic Association in Washington September, 1899, and published in the Post-Graduate for November, 1899; "The Electro-Static Treatment of Some Forms of Paralysis," read before the Post-Graduate Clinical Society, February 2, 1902, and published in the Post-Graduate of March, 1900; "The Applications of the Electro-Static Wave Current," published in the Medical Record of March 3, 1900; "The Present Status of Electricity in Medicine," Atlanta Medical Journal for August, 1900; "The Morton Wave Current Mode of Application and Therapeutics," read before the American Electro-Therapeutic Association in New York, September 24, 1900, published in Transactions of the Association for 1899 and 1900, and in the Journal of Electro-Therapeutics for December, 1900; "The Electro-Static Treatment of Neurasthenia," read before the American Electro-Therapeutic Association, September 25, 1900, and published in the Transactions of the Association for 1899 and 1900, also in the Post-Graduate for December, 1900; "Successful Treatment of Some Acute and Chronical Joint Affections," read before the Post-Graduate Clinical Society, January 18, 1901, and published in the Post-Graduate for February; "Therapeutic Modes of Application and Skiagraphy," a series of papers published in eleven numbers commencing with February of the Journal of Electro-Therapeutics for 1900; "The Application of Electro-Static Currents to Nervous and Inflammatory Affections of the Eye, Nose and Throat," published in the Journal of Ophthalmology, Otology and Laryngology for September, 1901; "The Effects of Electro-Static Modalities Upon Hyperemia and Pain," read before the American Electro-Therapeutic Association at Buffalo, September 5, 1901, and published in the Journal of Advanced Therapeutics for March, 1902; "Means and Modes in Radiography," read before the American Electro-Therapeutic Association at Buffalo, September 5, 1901, published in the Journal of Advanced Therapeutics in June, 1902; "The Application of High Potential Electrical Modalities for the Relief of Inflammatory Conditions and Pain," read before the New York Academy of Medicine, October, 1902; "The Physiological Actions of the Electro-Static Modalities," read before the Clinical Society of the New York School of Physical Therapeutics in March, 1902; "Modern Medical Electricity," published in the New York Lancet for December, 1902; "The Actions of the X-ray and Its Uses in Therapeutics," read before the American Electro-Therapeutic Association at the Kaaterskill Hotel, September 2, 1902, and published in the Journal of Advanced Therapeutics for November, 1902; "A Manual of Electro-Static Modes of Application and Therapeutics," 133 pages, illustrated, published by A. L. Chatterton & Company, New York; "The Therapeutic Uses of the Static Brush-Discharge and Induced High-Frequency Discharge of Vacuum and Geisler Tubes Excited by Static Machine or Rumkorff Coil," read before the Clinical Society of the New York School of Physical Therapeutics on November 25, 1902, and published in the Journal of Advanced Therapeutics of March, 1903; in preparation, "A System of Physical Therapeutics," to comprise not less than eight volumes, the contributors to which are leading authorities upon the subjects.

Dr. Snow is a member of the American Electro-Therapeutic Association, the Greene County Medical Society, the Harlem Medical Association and the New York Electrical Society. He was also appointed chairman of the committee on static machines and condensers, and at the last meeting was chosen chairman of the committee on the St. Louis Exposition in 1904, of the American Electro-Therapeutic Association. Dr. Snow is in politics an independent, and never neglects an opportunity to cast his ballot. In religion he is a communicant and an active worker in the Protestant Episcopal church.

On April 15, 1886, Dr. Snow married Adeline M. Smith, and the following children were born to them: Lucy Marion, Thomas Benham, Minnie Peck, Mabel; Newell Calvin, deceased; William Benham, Claude Nelson and Adeline, deceased. On March 4, 1898, after a short illness, his beloved wife, who had been a faithful helpmeet and loving mother to his children, died. On August 22, 1899, he married Dr. Mary Lydia Hastings Arnold, a graduate of Cooper Medical College of San Francisco, California, in the class of 1897. As a co-worker in his professional work, associate editor of the Journal of Advanced Therapeutics, and devoted wife and mother of his children, she fills an important place in his destiny. To them has been born one child, Mary Benham Arnold Snow. Dr. Snow's present address is 627 Lexington avenue, New York city.

JAMES DUANE FEATHERSTONHAUGH, A. B., A. M., M. D.—1870.

Dr. James D. Featherstonhaugh, for many years actively engaged in the practice of medicine and surgery in Cohoes, New York, was born in Washington, D. C., January 24, 1845, a son of James D. and Emily (Chapman) Featherstonhaugh, the former a native of Schenectady, New York, and the latter a native of Washington, D. C. Dr. Featherstonhaugh spent his boyhood and youth in France and England, where he obtained an excellent preliminary education, and after his return to his native country he entered Union College at Schenectady, New York, from which he was graduated with the degree of Bachelor of Arts in 1867, and three years later the same institution conferred the degree of Master of Arts upon him. He then decided to take up the science of medicine and he pursued his studies under the efficient preceptorship of Dr. Alex M. Vedder, of Schenectady; this was supplemented by the full course of instruction in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which he graduated in the class of 1870.

After receiving the degree of Doctor of Medicine, Dr. Featherstonhaugh took up his residence in Cohoes and has since engaged in the general practice of medicine and surgery, being very successful in both branches of the art. In addition to his private practice he performs the duties of surgeon of the Cohoes City Hospital, has also acted in the capacity of health officer, and for four years was a member of the board of public works, and chairman of the same. He has always taken a commendable interest in every movement that had for its object the permanent benefit of the city and vicinity, and his influence is always on the side of morality and right. He is a member and ex-president of the Albany County Medical Society and the State Medical Society. In 1892 Dr. Featherstonhaugh married Miss Caroline M. Johnson, of Kinderhook, Columbia county, New York. They have no children.

FRANCIS DE REVERE, M. D.—1888.

Francis De Revere is a native of Tarrytown, Westchester county, New York, where he was born on the 22d of April, 1865, a son of John and Mary (Burras) De Revere. His preliminary education was received in the public schools of his native town and was supplemented by a course of study at the Irving Institute, which is also located in Tarrytown. Choosing the profession of medicine and surgery he began his technical reading and study under the effective direction of Dr. R. B. Coutant, of Tarrytown, and prepared himself for matriculation in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, where he completed the course as a member of the class of 1888. After a hospital experience of two years in the Westchester County Hospital, Dr. De Revere engaged in the active practice of his profession on Staten Island, and as a resident physician and surgeon of the village of Stapleton he has built up a satisfactory and representative practice, commanding confidence and esteem on the part of the community and also in professional circles.

Since 1890 he has held the position of surgeon of the Staten Island Rapid Transit Company, and is connected with the health department of New York city in the capacity of medical inspector, while he is also a valued and active member of the Richmond County Medical Society. Dr. De Revere married, July 19, 1898, Lucie E. H. Simpson, of Stapleton, Staten Island. One child has been born to them, Francis De Revere.

NATHAN SMITH DAVIS, A. M., LL. D., M. D.—1837.

Dr. Nathan S. Davis, the father of the American Medical Association, a Nestor of the medical profession, and for more than sixty years actively engaged in the practice of medicine and surgery, was born in a primitive log house on a new farm in the township of Greene, Chenango county, New York, January 9, 1817, a son of Dow and Eleanor Davis. Dow Davis was left an orphan in his boyhood, and being thrown upon his own resources he engaged in farm work in one of the counties on the Hudson river, where he remained until he attained his majority, when he removed to the new settlement of Greene, on the Chenango river. He settled on a new and uncleared farm, three miles west of the village of Greene and on the hills skirting Genesetslet creek, and the remainder of his life was devoted to agricultural pursuits. He was united in marriage to Miss Eleanor Smith, who died at the age of forty-five years; her husband survived her and lived to the extreme old age of ninety years. Dr. Davis was the youngest of their seven children.

Francis De Revere

Dr. Nathan S. Davis acquired his literary education at the Cazenovia Seminary, after which he commenced the study of medicine in the office of Dr. Daniel Clark, of Smithville Flats, and during the two subsequent years he continued his studies under the competent preceptorship of Dr. Thomas Jackson, of Binghamton, New York, with the exception of four months of each year when he attended the College of Physicians and Surgeons of the Western District of New York at Fairfield, from which he was graduated with the degree of Doctor of Medicine January 31, 1837. Immediately after his graduation Dr. Davis commenced the practice of his profession in Vienna, Oneida county, New York, but after remaining five months he opened an office in Binghamton, Broome county, where he successfully conducted a large and select practice for nine years. Dr. Davis was chosen to represent the Broome County Medical Society in the Medical Society of the State of New York, at Albany, and while there started the measures that resulted in the organization of the American Medical Association in 1846 and 1847.

In the spring of 1847 Dr. Davis removed to New York city, and at the opening of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York he was invited to assist Dr. Sabine in the demonstration of anatomy, but owing to the illness of Dr. Sabine at that time, Dr. Davis acted in the capacity of demonstrator during that college term and also delivered a course of lectures on medical jurisprudence during the spring term. These duties were continued through the college terms of 1847-1848-1849, and in addition to this work he edited the semi-monthly medical journal known as the Annalist. The latter part of September, 1849, Dr. Davis removed to Chicago, Illinois, in order to accept the professorship of physiology and general pathology in Rush Medical College. After giving one course of instructions in that chair, he was transferred to the chair of principles and practice of medicine and of clinical medicine in the same college, which positions he occupied until 1859, when he resigned; he was also secretary of the faculty. Dr. Davis then accepted the same chair in a new medical college established for the sole purpose of extending and grading the courses of instruction, and also to enforce some standard of preliminary education and attendance on hospital clinical instruction in Chicago. Dr. Davis has continued his connection with the new college, now known as the Northwestern University Medical School, up to the present time (1902) in the capacity of member of the board of trustees and honorary dean of its medical school. Dr. Davis discontinued active teaching in 1897, but since then he has devoted from five to seven hours daily, except Sundays, to such patients as call at his office.

Dr. Davis was one of the founders of the Chicago Society for the Relief of the Poor, of Washingtonian Home for the Reformation of Inebriates, of the Chicago Academy of Sciences, of the Chicago Historical Society, of the Chicago Medical Society, and of the Illinois State Medical Society, and he still retains membership in these different organizations. He is also a member and ex-president of the American Medical Association, and of the Ninth International Medical Congress in 1887; he is also an honorary member of the College of Physicians of Philadelphia, of the New York Academy of Medicine, and of the British Medical Association; and a regular member of the American Public Health Association and the American Association for the Advancement of Science. In his political affiliations he is a strong advocate of the old Democratic doctrines of equality of human rights, free trade and special protection of favors to none, and has voted for the same whenever opportunity offered; he has never sought or held public office. In his religious faith he follows the teachings of his mother, who was a devout Methodist, and he has been a member of some branch of the Methodist church since he was sixteen years old.

On October 5, 1901, a testimonial banquet was tendered to Dr. Davis at the Auditorium Hotel in Chicago under the auspices of the Chicago Medical Society. Three hundred and fifty physicians from Chicago and various parts of the country attended the feast, and typified in a striking manner the high esteem in which Dr. Davis is held by the profession. The speeches were timely, replete with wit and humor, and the reminiscences about Dr. Davis recited by Drs. Andrews, Waxham, Hollister and Bridge were fraught with interest and created much amusement. After the banquet Dr. Christian Fenger, president of the Chicago Medical Society, introduced Dr. James H. Stowell, who said that the members of the profession had assembled to pay their respects to one of the greatest examples of professional honor and dignity in the medical profession; Dr. Frank Billings was the toastmaster of the evening, and he claimed it was an honor to preside at a banquet given in honor of Dr. Davis. Dr. Edward F. Wells presented the loving cup to Dr. Davis and said: "Honored Sir and Guests—In behalf of the medical profession of Chicago and of the whole country, it is my privilege to present to you this loving cup as a token of the esteem in which you are held by your associates, and as an expression of their appreciation of your valuable services in the advancement of scientific, practical, academic and social medicine. This beautiful cup, of Grecian design, is, in its lines and proportions, a model of simple, vigorous dignity, and was selected as being peculiarly emblematic of your character and career. Engraved upon one side is an excellent likeness of yourself; upon another is the leaf of victory, and beneath it the inscription, 'Palmarum qui meruit ferat'—'let him who has won it bear the palm,' and beneath this, 'Pioneer in local and national medical organizations, and in graded medical instruction,' and upon the other is this memorial tribute: 'Presented to Nathan Smith Davis, A. M., M. D., LL. D., in recognition of his long and distinguished services to medicine, in its every field of usefulness, by the members of that profession which he has so conspicuously adorned, and to whose shield he has given an added luster.' Few possess the creative genius necessary to initiate great forward movements in public affairs, and fewer yet are permitted to see the realization of their lofty conceptions. But you, sir, are singularly fortunate in both these respects; and now, after these many years, you may stand before the bow of promise, supported, as it is, upon one side by the fathers of medicine, resting upon the adamantine foundations of experience and truth, and upon the other by the moderns, standing upon the broad expanse of experiment and fact, and, looking through, view with satisfaction the fair and boundless plains of the future as they stretch out beyond."

Dr. Davis accepted the loving cup with gratitude, after which he responded with a speech which was greeted with loud and prolonged applause and three hurrahs were lustily given for the distinguished guest.

On March 5, 1838, Dr. Davis married Miss Anna Maria Parker, a daughter of Honorable John Parker, an agriculturist of Vienna, Oneida county, New York; Mr. Parker served as a soldier in the war with England from 1812 to 1815, and he also served one term as a member of the New York state legislature. Shortly after the ceremony Dr. Davis and his bride started in a cutter with a single horse for their new home in Binghamton, where they arrived safely after a two days' journey. She has had complete charge of the household from that day to this, and has made it in the true sense of the word a neat, loving and hospitable home. Three children have been born of this union, Ellen Parker, born in 1842; Frank Howard, born in 1848; and Nathan Smith, Jr., born in 1858. Their daughter died in 1881, a few days after her seventh child was born. Frank Howard, after practicing medicine for nine years, died in 1880, from an accidental injury received while riding on horseback; he was survived by a widow and three children. Nathan Smith Davis has established an excellent reputation as a practitioner of medicine, is a teacher of practical medicine in the Medical School, and an active contributor to medical literature; he is married and has three children.

ALFRED WILLIAM GRAY, M. D.—1899.

This young physician of Milwaukee has taken up the profession of medicine naturally, for he comes of a family of practitioners, the heads of two previous generations being well known in the medical circles of the city mentioned. As to ancestry the Gray family is of good old colonial stock and is of a mingling of Scotch and English blood. Grandfather Gray was a physician and was one of the earliest members of the profession to settle in Milwaukee, coming here in 1854. His son, Nathaniel A., followed in his footsteps, and by his wife, Letitia J. Dunn, became the father of Alfred William. The last named was educated in a private school and in the high school of his native city and completed his literary training in the University of Wisconsin, where he graduated in the classical course in 1895, receiving the degree of A. B. He became a student in the New York College of Physicians and Surgeons and was made a Doctor of Medicine in 1899.

He at once entered the office of his father, and this partnership still exists, the son being a valuable assistant to his father's greater experience, and there is doubtless a brilliant future before him in this greatest of all the learned professions. Dr. Gray is a member of the Chi Psi fraternity, of the University Club of Milwaukee, of the Town Club of Milwaukee, is a member of the Milwaukee Medical Society, is secretary of the Milwaukee County Medical Society, a member of the Wisconsin State Medical Society and the American Medical Association. He is attending physician to the Milwaukee Infants' Home and to the Johnson Emergency Hospital. He is a Republican voter, but otherwise takes no part in politics; he is unmarried.

RODERICK COLIN McLENNAN, M. D.—1886.

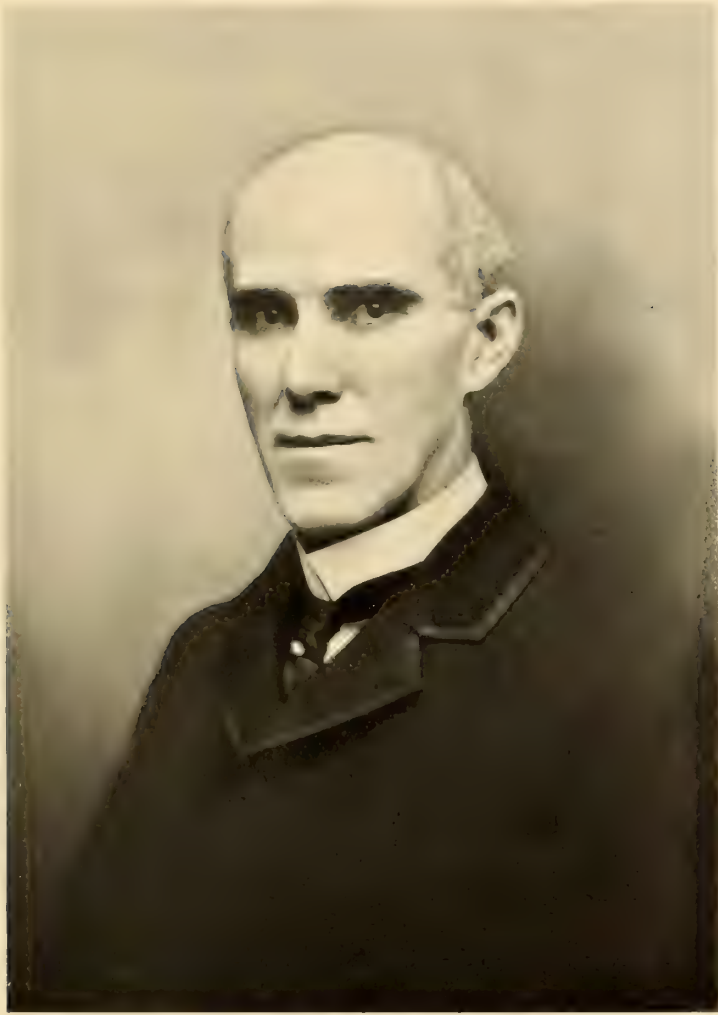

Dr. Roderick C. McLennan, a general practitioner of Syracuse, New York, was born in Cattaraugus county, New York, March 19, 1858, the son of Colin and Ann (Fraser) McLennan. Dr. McLennan began his education in the district school of his native town, continuing his studies in the preparatory departments of Alfred University and Oberlin College. He entered Cornell University in the class of 1884. During his junior year, however, he left Cornell to take charge of the graded school at Portville, New York, where he remained two years, when he began the study of medicine under the guidance of Dr. Daniel Lewis, in New York city. He matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, securing his degree of Doctor of Medicine in the class of 1886. Immediately after his graduation he established an office in Syracuse, New York, where he at once put to a practical test the theoretical knowledge he had acquired in his collegiate course. He has continued his practice to the present time (1903) in the same city, and in addition to the duties of his private practice acts in the capacity of surgeon to the Hospital for Women and Children, of whose staff he was for many years the president.

Dr. McLennan is the author of a number of valuable scientific papers which have been presented before medical societies, among them being: "Surgical Treatment of Cholelithiases," "Report of Two Cases of Abdominal Fibroids," "Cause and Symptom of Epidemic Influenza." He is a member of the New York State Medical Society, the Central New York Medical Association, the Onondaga County Medical Society, and the Syracuse Academy of Medicine, of which he is an ex-president. He is also a medical director of the Universal Indemnity Company of Syracuse, New York.

Dr. McLennan has been twice married. His first union was with Miss Edith R. Leavens, of Portville, New York; their children are: Edith, a student in the Syracuse high school; and Marjorie McLennan; the mother of these children died in 1893. In 1896 Dr. McLennan married Mrs. Carola Lambie, nee Cushman, of Syracuse, New York.

HENRY FREEMAN WALKER, M. D.—1866.

Dr. Henry Freeman Walker was born July 3, 1838, in Brattleboro, Vermont, and is the son of Charles and Lucretia (Ambrose) Walker. He is descended on both the paternal and maternal sides from English Puritans who landed in Massachusetts in 1630. Dr. Walker received his primary education in the common schools, and was prepared for college by a private instructor. In 1860 he graduated from Middlebury College, Vermont, with the degree of Bachelor of Arts, and received from that institution, in 1863, the degree of Master of Arts. He taught for three years, studying afterward at the School for Medical Instruction in Portland, Maine, and attending lectures at the medical department of Bowdoin College, at the Long Island College Hospital, and at the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York. He received, from the last named institution, in 1866, the degree of Doctor of Medicine. From April, 1866, to November,

R. L. M. Leeman

1867, he served as interne in Bellevue Hospital. He then went to Europe, where he pursued his studies for some months, and on his return began practice in association with Dr. T. Gaillard Thomas.

In 1869 and 1870 he was attending physician in diseases of digestion at the DeMilt Dispensary; attending physician in diseases of the heart and lungs at outdoor-poor department of Bellevue Hospital from 1870 to 1872; and attending physician in the diseases of women to the same institution from 1872 to 1875. He was visiting physician to the Nursery and Child's Hospital from 1871 to 1875, and visiting physician to Bellevue Hospital from 1875 to 1884, and visiting physician to the Emergency Hospital. From 1876 to 1881 he held the position of chief of clinic in the diseases of women at the College of Physicians and Surgeons. He is consulting physician to St. Luke's Hospital. He has made occasional contributions to medical literature through the medium of current periodicals.

Dr. Walker is a member of the County Medical Society, the Academy of Medicine, the Pathological Society, the Medical Association of Greater New York, the Obstetrical Society, the Medical and Surgical Society, the Practitioners' Society, the Alumni Association of Bellevue Hospital, the Physicians' Mutual Aid Association, the Society for the Relief of the Widows and Orphans of Medical Men, and the Century, University, Grolier and South Side clubs. Dr. Walker's address is 18 West Fifty-fifth street.

EDWARD FIELD WALKER, M. D.—1876.

Dr. Edward Field Walker was born February 4, 1846, in New York city, and is the son of William and Caroline (Steel) Walker. The former, in 1822, removed from Utica to New York, where he became a merchant and banker, and aided Professor Morse in bringing before the world his invention of the telegraph. He was descended from a family which was founded in America about the time of the Mayflower immigration by a widow named Walker, who came from England with her children and settled in Rehoboth, Massachusetts, where the grandfather of Dr. Walker was born, and whence he removed to Western New York, where he became the editor of a newspaper in Rome, and in Utica the founder of the Utica Herald. The family was an influential one in central New York during the early part of the nineteenth century. On the maternal side Dr. Walker is descended from Scotch ancestry. His grandfather, who was born near Paisley, Scotland, came to America in the latter part of the eighteenth century, participated in the war of 1812, was captured by the French, and shortly after was lost at sea. His wife was a member of the White family.

Dr. Walker was educated in his native city in private schools and by tutors. During boyhood he was an invalid, and as he grew older his health was not such as to permit him to take a college course. During the Civil war he was a volunteer nurse in what was known as the New England Hospital. During the summer and autumn of 1863 he was in the United States coast survey. In October, 1863, he was sent abroad for the benefit of his health, being absent four years, during which time he made an extended African and oriental tour, returning to America at occasional intervals and reaching California by a voyage around the Horn. In 1862 he had begun the study of medicine, but on returning from his travels was engaged from 1867 to 1871 in business. In 1872 he resumed the study of medicine, spent one winter in the Albany Medical School, and in 1874 matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he graduated in March, 1876, with the degree of Doctor of Medicine.

While still a student he had been engaged, in the latter part of 1875, in making urine analysis in the office of Drs. Crane and White. In 1876 he was appointed to the department of children's diseases in the Demilt Dispensary, and served during 1876 and 1877 as special inspector on the board of health. In 1878 he removed to Providence, and since that time has been engaged in the work of a general practitioner. He was formerly connected with the out-patient department of the Rhode Island Hospital, first on the medical and then on the surgical side. In 1880 he retired from the Hospital, and in 1884 was appointed first member of the staff of the Lying-in Hospital, in which institution, since 1890, he has been president of staff.

Dr. Walker has published in different medical journals a number of articles, treating, for the greater part, of pediatrics and obstetrics. He is a member of the Rhode Island Medical Society and the New York County Medical Society. He finds his chief source of recreation in general literature. Dr. Walker married, in September, 1869, in Malden, New York, Caroline E. Bigelow. They had two children, both of whom are now deceased. In 1876 Mrs. Walker died, and in 1879 Dr. Walker married Katherine Bigelow. They have two children: Caroline L. and Edward F., Jr.

OGILVIE DE VILLE BALL, M. D.—1867.

Dr. Ogilvie De Ville Ball, a highly esteemed and long established physician of Albany, New York, is a representative of the family which traces its descent from Edward Ball, who settled on Block Island, Rhode Island, in the latter part of the seventeenth century. Ogilvie De Ville Ball, son of Joseph S. and Janet F. (Mitchell) Ball, of Block Island, Rhode Island, was born February 4, 1840, at Schuyler Lake, Otsego county, New York, where he passed his boyhood, receiving his primary education in Hartwich Seminary, where he remained seven years. After making choice of the practice of medicine as a life calling, he entered upon a course of preparatory study under Dr. T. B. Smith, which was interrupted by the outbreak of the Civil war. Dr. Ball, notwithstanding his youth, responded to the call for troops, enlisting as a private in the Third New York Artillery Volunteers, receiving later the commission of first lieutenant and regimental quartermaster, and afterward serving with the rank of acting assistant adjutant general to the chief of artillery, department of North Carolina. After being mustered out in 1865, he resumed the study of medicine, graduating at the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York in the class of 1867.

Returning to his birthplace, Dr. Ball entered upon the active practice of his profession, where in the course of seven years he obtained gratifying recognition as a skillful and successful medical practitioner. In 1874 he removed to Albany, where during a residence of more than a quarter of a century he has established the reputation of one of the most enlightened and progressive members of the profession. In 1876 Dr. Ball received from Union College the degree of Master of Arts. He takes an active interest in all matters pertaining to the welfare of the community in which he resides, and during his residence in Otsego county was elected coroner of that county. From 1874 to 1878 he filled the position of demonstrator of and adjunct lecturer on anatomy in the Albany County Medical College, and was appointed in 1885 United States examining surgeon for pensions.

Dr. Ball is a member of the Albany County Medical Society, in which he at one time filled the office of president, and is also treasurer of the New York State Medical Society. He married, in 1871, Miss Addie Van Derzee, of New York, and they have one daughter. Dr. Ball is still in the active practice of his profession.

JOHN ANDREW CALNANE, M. D.—1894.

This well known St. Louis physician is a descendant of Irish stock on the paternal side, his father having settled in the state of Maine from Ireland. Jeremiah Calnane married Miss Mary Muldoon, and while they were residing in Ellsworth, Maine, their son John Andrew was born to them, on August 25, 1865. He attended the public and high schools of his native town, and having decided to make a profession of medicine, entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York and received the degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1894. Three years later he began his general practice in St. Louis and has been here ever since, steadily growing in favor and patronage. Dr. Calnane is not interested in politics. He was married at St. Louis on January 24, 1899, to Mrs. Mary Curby, but they have no children.

CHURCHILL CARMALT, M. D.—1891.

Dr. Churchill Carmalt, of New York city, at 600 Madison avenue, was born in Montrose, Pennsylvania, January 15, 1866, and is the son of James Edward and Charlotte (Churchill) Carmalt. He is descended on the paternal side from James Carmalt, who settled near Philadelphia in 1640, and traces his pedigree, through his mother, from Josiah Churchill, who settled at Wethersfield, Connecticut, in 1636.

Dr. Carmalt received his early education in the public schools of Utica, New York, and at Mr. Cann's preparatory school in Scranton, Pennsylvania. He studied at Haverford College, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and at Harvard University, from which he graduated in 1887 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. He entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he graduated in 1891 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. He served for a time in the New York Hospital, the Chambers Street House of Relief, and the Society of the Lying-in Hospital. From 1894 to 1896 he was connected with the outdoor department of the Hudson Street House of Relief, and from 1896 to 1899 was assistant surgeon to St. Mary's Free Hospital for Children. From 1898 to 1901 he was attending physician to the Nursery and Child's Hospital. Since 1895 he has been assistant surgeon to the Lying-in Hospital, and has held the position of assistant demonstrator of anatomy in Columbia University.

Dr. Carmalt is a member of the Academy of Medicine, the Association of American Anatomists, and the American and State Medical associations. The following are among his contributions to medical literature: "Fracture in New-Born;" "Lipoma of Vulva;" and "Case of Cyclopia." Dr. Carmalt married, December 4, 1902, Miss Alice Kidd.

GEORGE HENRY CODDING, M. D.—1881.

Dr. George Henry Coddington, general practitioner of Amenia, Dutchess county, New York, was born in Egremont, Berkshire county, Massachusetts, August 1, 1857, a son of Henry E. and Emeline (Edgerley) Coddington. He spent the early years of his life upon the home farm and acquired his literary education in the Egremont Academy, after which he was engaged for a number of years in teaching school. Desiring to become a member of the medical profession, he commenced the study of medicine in 1878 under the instruction of Dr. Henry M. Knight, of Lakeville, Connecticut, and subsequently studied with Dr. John C. Shaw, who at that time acted in the capacity of superintendent of Kings County Insane Asylum. Later he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, where he secured his degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1881. Dr. Coddington then accepted the position of assistant in Kings County Hospital, and later was appointed second assistant of Kings County Insane Asylum, where he remained for a short period of time.

In January, 1882, Dr. Coddington entered into partnership with Dr. Desautel Guernsey at Amenia, Dutchess county, New York, and for three years they conducted a general practice of medicine and surgery. At the expiration of that period they dissolved their connection, and Dr. Coddington has since devoted his attention to the practice of his profession. He is a close, earnest and discriminating student of the science of medicine, and he now ranks as one of the able physicians of Amenia. He was one of the organizers of the New York State Medical Association. On March 28, 1883, Dr. Coddington married Miss Irene Hinman Warner, of Southbury, Connecticut, and they have one son, Joel Hinman Coddington, who is connected with the Produce Exchange Bank of New York.

WILLIAM DENISON MORGAN, M. D.—1876.

Dr. William Denison Morgan was born November 20, 1850, in Hartford, Connecticut, and is the son of Henry K. and Emily Malbone (Brinley) Morgan. The former was a merchant and an influential citizen of Hartford, who retired from business about 1860. He was descended from James Morgan, who came from Wales in 1636 and settled first in the neighborhood of New London. Dr. Morgan is a lineal descendant on the maternal side of Francis Brinley, who was registrar general for Charles the First, and came to America during Cromwell's protectorate. The Brinleys were allied with the Malbone family, of which Godfrey Malbone was a prominent member. Dr. Morgan also numbers among his ancestors on the maternal side General Israel Putnam, his mother having been a great-granddaughter of the Revolutionary patriot.

Dr. Morgan received his early education at the Episcopal Academy of Connecticut, and at St. Paul's School in Concord. He then entered Trinity College, Hartford, from which he graduated in 1872 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts, receiving in 1875 the degree of Master of Arts from the same institution. He matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, graduating in 1876 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. After a post-graduate course at the University of Leipsic, Germany, he began practice in 1878 in Hartford, where he has since remained. He served one year as interne in the New Haven Hospital, and for the last eight years has been one of the trustees of the Hartford County Hospital for the Insane at Middletown. Since January 1, 1896, he has filled the position of medical director to the Phoenix Mutual Life Insurance Company of Hartford, and the same year was appointed lecturer on anatomy and physiology in Trinity College, an office which he still holds.

Dr. Morgan's contributions to the literature of his profession have consisted mainly of occasional papers which have been read before the various medical societies of which he is a member, and before associations of medical directors of insurance companies. He is a member of the Connecticut State Medical Society, the Hartford County Medical Society, the Hartford City Medical Society, and the Association of Medical Directors of Insurance Companies. He also belongs to the Hartford Club and the Farmington Country Club. He is a member of the Protestant Episcopal church.

GEORGE STARK PEARCE, M. D.—1895.

Dr. George Stark Pearce, physician and surgeon of Dover Plains, Dutchess county, New York, was born in Pawling, Dutchess county, New York, October 28, 1872, a son of Dr. Henry and Augusta M. (Stark) Pearce, both of whom were born in Pawling, New York. Dr. Henry Pearce acquired his early education in the common schools of his native city, and after selecting the practice of medicine as a profession he attended the lectures and was graduated from the medical department of the Michigan State University at Ann Arbor. For years he has conducted a successful practice of his profession at Pawling. During the Spanish-American war he was appointed assistant surgeon of the One Hundred and Fiftieth Regiment, New York Volunteers.

Dr. George Stark Pearce spent the early years of his life in his native town, and obtained his literary education in the public school and Chapman Seminary of Pawling, New York. After his graduation from the latter named institution he naturally selected the science of medicine for his life work, and commenced his preparatory studies under the guidance of his father. Subsequently he matriculated in the College of Physician and Surgeons of New York city, from which he was graduated in the class of 1895 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. For several months he substituted in Bellevue Hospital, and during seven months of the time he was assigned to ambulance duty, thus having unusual opportunities for observing and studying physical ailments and injuries of every conceivable class and in profusion of number.

With this ample preparation Dr. Pearce, in January, 1896, entered upon the practice of his profession in Dover Plains, New York, and has since carried on the work for which he is so well adapted by disposition, and in which he has achieved such well deserved distinction. Dr. Pearce has never ceased to be a student, and he is constantly adding to his knowledge through the discoveries and innovations which are being made from time to time, by means of the best literature, and through contact with the most eminent men of his profession.

JOHN McEWEN WETMORE, M. D.—1855.

Dr. John McEwen Wetmore, 43 West Fifty-fourth street, New York city, is a descendant of an old and honored English, Scotch and early New England ancestry. He was born in New York city, April 15, 1832, a son of William Courtney and Eliza (Lovejoy) Wetmore. The preliminary educational advantages enjoyed by him were acquired in a school at White Plains, New York, which was under the personal supervision of Mr. John Swinburne. He then entered Williams College, and after pursuing a four years' course he was graduated from that institution in 1852, after which he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, receiving his degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1855.

For one year he acted in the capacity of interne in Bellevue Hospital, New York, and since then has been continuously engaged in the active practice of medicine and surgery in the city of New York. From 1891 to 1899 he served as state medical examiner, and he also assumed the responsibilities of manager of the Middletown State Homeopathic Insane Hospital from March, 1893, to April, 1902, when he was legislated out of the office. He is a member of the New York Medical Club, the American Institute of Homeopathy, the Homeopathic Medical Society of the State of New York, and the Homeopathic Medical Society of the County of New York. He is also affiliated with the Church Club.

GEORGE ATHERTON SPALDING, M. D.—1875.

Dr. George Atherton Spalding was born January 14, 1849, in Greenup, Kentucky, and is the son of Alfred and Rebecca (Seaton) Spalding. On both sides he traces his descent from old colonial stock. He received his early education at Maysville, Kentucky, and at Nashua, New Hampshire. He was fitted for college at Phillips Andover Academy, graduating from Yale University in 1872 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. He then attended the Harvard medical school for one year, after which he entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, receiving from that institution, in 1875, the degree of Doctor of Medicine. For eighteen months he served as interne at St. Luke's Hospital. In 1876 he entered upon a career of general practice in New York city, in which he is still actively engaged, his address being 248 Lenox avenue. For fifteen years he had charge of the House of Refuge on Randall's Island, and now holds the position of attending physician at St. Luke's Hospital.

Dr. Spalding is a member of the New York County Medical Society, the Academy of Medicine, the Clinical Society, and the Physicians' Mutual Aid Association. He also belongs to the Alumni Association of College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia, in which, for two years, from 1901 to 1903, he held the office of president. In politics he is a Republican. Dr. Spalding married, in September, 1878, Rebecca Atherton Davis. They had two children, Honora and Mary Seaton, the latter of whom died in 1898.

JACOB FRANK HOWE, M. D.—1871.

For more than twenty-seven years the above named has been engaged in the practice of medicine in Brooklyn. He was born in the city of New York, April 20, 1848, and acquired his early education in New York and suburban schools. He studied medicine under the personal supervision of Dr. H. B. Sands as preceptor, and after the usual three years' course graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York city, in 1871. He spent a short term as interne in the Lunatic Asylum, Blackwell's Island; then removed to New York and was connected with the New York Dispensary. He held a position on the health board as vaccinator, and was assistant under Professor F. N. Otis at the clinics held in the College of Physicians and Surgeons. He removed to Brooklyn in 1875, where he has since continued in practice.

FIELDING TECUMSEH ROBESON, M. D.—1895.

Dr. Fielding T. Robeson is a member of a family of Danish extraction, the name being originally spelled Robethon. They settled near Carlisle, Scotland, in the sixteenth century, and in 1700 emigrated to Pennsylvania, one of the members of the family acting in the capacity of William Penn's comptroller. Archibald Robeson settled near Charlotte, Mecklenburg county, North Carolina, while Robeson county, South Carolina, was named in honor of James Robeson, who was prominently connected with the war of the Rebellion. Part of the family took up their residence in Tennessee.

Dr. Fielding T. Robeson was born in Edinburg, Scotland, November 9, 1873, the son of Colonel John Terrell and Elizabeth (Hall) Robeson. His preliminary education was acquired in the Jesuit College and American College at Beirut, Syria, where he was prepared to enter the College of the City of New York; later he was a student in the department of arts of Columbia College, from which he was graduated in 1893, and in 1895 he received the degree of Doctor of Medicine from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city. He supplemented his medical course by service for eighteen months as interne in the J. Hood Wright Memorial Hospital, and later served as surgeon to the dispensary attached to the same institution. Dr. Robeson is a member of the County Medical Society, Riverside Practitioners' Club, Society of Alumni of the J. Hood Wright Hospital, and he is also connected with the Society of the Sons of American Revolution, Society of the War of 1812, and the Loyal Legion. On June 5, 1900, Dr. Robeson married Miss Mabel Frances Leaman. His present address is 325 Central Park West, New York.

JOSEPH F. BLOODGOOD, M. D.—1884.

There is more than usual significance and interest attached to the professional status of Dr. Bloodgood, of Flushing, of the borough of Queens of Greater New York, for his paternal grandfather was the first physician to engage in practice in this place, and also had a son who was one of the leading physicians of Flushing in his day, three generations of the family having been thus represented in the same profession in the same place. Still more noteworthy, perhaps, is the fact that the original American progenitor of the family located in Flushing as early as 1665, so that Dr. Bloodgood is a representative of one of the oldest families of Long Island. The Bloodgood family is of French Huguenot derivation and representatives fled from France to Holland to escape religious persecutions prior to the issuance of the Edict of Nantes, which was later revoked and led to renewed atrocities. The name was originally "Sangpur," and this was translated into the Dutch "Bloetgoet," and finally into the equivalent in English as now used by the American descendants. The original American ancestor, Franz Jansen Bloetgoet, or Bloodgood, came here about the middle of the seventeenth century, and in 1665 settled at Flushing, becoming an officer under the Dutch government and a member of the privy council. The governor appointed him chief of the Dutch inhabitants of Long Island, and in 1676, while leading his men in a skirmish with the English colonists from Connecticut, he fell and died on the battlefield, making his will shortly before he expired. Following him in direct line of descent were William, Francis, Abram, Dr. Joseph, Isaac and Dr. Joseph F.

As the family records were unfortunately destroyed, much detail in regard to the history is veiled in obscurity. It is known, however, that Francis removed to Albany about 1760 and that his son Abram at one time served as mayor of that city, while he also assisted in the organization of the Democratic party. Dr. Joseph Bloodgood was graduated in Union College with the degree of Master of Arts, later entering the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania, where he completed a course of study and thereafter practiced for a short time in New York city. He then located in Flushing as its first physician, and here he continued in practice for a long term of years, his death occurring in 1857. He was interested in the old Kings Medical College and was prominent in medical society work in New York city, while his religious faith was that of the Episcopal church. His son Abram was engaged in the practice of medicine in Flushing, where he died in 1880. Isaac, the son of Dr. Joseph Bloodgood, was born and reared in Flushing and was for more than forty years engaged in business here. He married Mary Cary, a representative of an old New England family, and she died in 1893, her husband surviving until 1899, when he passed away at the venerable age of eighty-four years, both having been communicants of the Episcopal church.

Dr. Joseph F. Bloodgood was the son of these parents and was born in Flushing on the 4th of August, 1859, and after attending the Flushing Institute he passed two years in the School of Mines of Columbia University. He then began the work of preparing himself for the profession which he has honored and dignified by his services. He matriculated in the College of Physicians, where he was graduated as a member of the class of 1884, receiving his degree of Doctor of Medicine. By competitive examination he received the appointment of assistant physician at St. Catherine's Hospital in Brooklyn, and he remained there in that capacity and as house physician and surgeon for a period of eighteen months, after which he continued his medical studies and investigation by passing six months in the hospitals of Berlin and Vienna.

On his return from Europe Dr. Bloodgood became associated in practice with Dr. H. D. Chapin in New York city, and in 1886 he came to Flushing, where he has built up a large and representative general practice, devoting special attention to surgery, in which branch of his profession he takes great interest and is exceptionally skillful. He is a member of the Queens County Medical Society, the Medical Association of Greater New York, and was formerly president of the medical board of Flushing Hospital, while he is the local surgeon of the Long Island Railroad Company. He is independent in politics, is a communicant of St. George's church, Protestant Episcopal, and fraternally is identified with the Holland Society, the Order of Foresters and the St. Nicholas Club, Niantic Club, and Reform Club of New York.

PHINEAS HENRY INGALLS, M. D.—1880.

Phineas Henry Ingalls, son of Dr. Phineas and Ruth H. (Elder) Ingalls, was born at Gorham, Maine, April 18, 1856. On his father's side he was descended from Edmund Ingalls, of whom we hear as early as 1629. His mother was directly descended from Josias Cooke, who came over in the Mayflower. His father, Dr. Phineas Ingalls, was a graduate of the Maine Medical School in 1820, and practiced medicine in Gorham until his death, which occurred in 1858, when his son Phineas H. was two years of age.

Dr. Ingalls received his early education in the public schools of Portland, preparatory to a college course at Bowdoin College, from which he graduated in 1877, receiving the degree of A. M. from the same college in 1885. In 1877, after he had completed the regular college course, he took a preparatory course of medicine with S. H. Tewksbury, M. D., and Charles W. Bray, M. D. Then, desiring to thoroughly equip himself for a medical life, he entered the Maine Medical School at Brunswick, and after completing a course there took a second course at the New York College of Physicians and Surgeons, from which he graduated in 1880. He immediately took the position of house surgeon at the Woman's Hospital in New York, and remained there for a year and a half, when he removed to Portland.

Maine. After a brief stay, he finally fixed upon Hartford, Connecticut, as a permanent home, where he is still located.

In connection with the duties of a special practitioner, Dr. Ingalls has been closely connected with hospital work and has been very successful in performing various and difficult surgical operations. In 1879 he was house surgeon at the Maine General Hospital, has served as consulting surgeon at the Litchfield County Hospital since its organization, and has been gynecologist to the Hartford Hospital since 1884. He is a member of the Hartford City Medical Society, the Hartford County Medical Society, the Connecticut State Medical Society, the Alumni Association of the Woman's Hospital, State of New York, and of the American Gynecological Society. He was appointed assistant surgeon of the First Regiment of the Connecticut National Guard in 1883, and became adjutant in 1884, also was brigade inspector from 1890 to 1892, when he resigned. He is best known as a gynecologist and has been a specialist in that line of surgery since his graduation.

He has written various medical papers which have been regarded as having an important bearing on the subjects which he has treated. Among these should be mentioned the article on "Non-Surgical Treatment of Ante-flexion," which was published in the New York Medical Journal, March 27, 1886; the essay "Damages of Parturition and Their Repair," in Proceedings of Connecticut Medical Society, 1886; "Uterine Cancer," in Proceedings of Connecticut Medical Society, 1889; "Sloughing Fibroids of the Uterus," in Proceedings of American Gynecological Society, 1891; "Successful Case of Caesarian Section," published in American Journal of Obstetrics, August, 1892.

Dr. Ingalls is interested in current events and in all matters relating to New England progress. Tracing, as he does, his descent from the Puritans, he naturally is an enthusiastic member of the Sons of American Revolution and the Society of Colonial Wars. He is a member of the Episcopal church and belongs to the Church Club of America. He was married in 1885 to Mary Helen, daughter of J. Watson Beach, of Hartford, Connecticut. They had one child, which died in infancy.

THEODORE DELOS RUPERT, M. D.—1880.

Dr. Theodore Delos Rupert, an able and highly respected physician of Geneva, New York, was born April 23, 1855, in the town of Seneca, Ontario county, New York, the son of William P. and Catharine (Bell) Rupert. He received his education in the schools of Geneva, and after completing his studies, took into careful consideration the question of choosing a life work.

Having decided to devote himself to the practice of medicine, he began his preparatory studies under the direction of Dr. D. S. Allen, of Seneca, after which he matriculated in the medical department of the Buffalo University, where he remained for one year. At the end of that time he entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he graduated in the class of 1880, and after a few months' experience in the outdoor department of Bellevue Hospital, entered upon the active practice of his profession in Monroe county, near Rochester, where he remained for ten years, building up for himself in that time the reputation of a skillful and conscientious medical practitioner. He then went to Geneva, Ontario county, where he has since remained, and where the reputation acquired in his former place of abode has been strengthened and extended. He has been for many years in the enjoyment of a large and constantly increasing circle of patrons, and possesses the esteem and confidence of his professional brethren and of the community in which he resides. He is a member of the Ontario County Medical Society and of the Rochester Pathological Society. Dr. Rupert married, in 1880, Miss Clara Bond, of Seneca. Their family consists of four children: Lucy Belle, A. Mead, Theodore Jay and F. Everet Rupert.

WILLIAM HENRY WELCH, M. D.—1875.

Dr. William Henry Welch, professor of pathology, Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, Maryland, was born April 8, 1850, in Norfolk, Litchfield county, Connecticut, and is the son of Dr. William Wickham and Emeline (Collin) Welch. His paternal grandfather was Dr. Benjamin Welch, also of Norfolk, Connecticut, whose five sons were all physicians residing in the northwestern part of Connecticut and the adjacent part of Massachusetts.

Dr. Welch received his early education in the private and public schools of his native town, and at a private preparatory school in Winchester Center, Connecticut. In 1870 he graduated from Yale College with the degree of Bachelor of Arts, and in that and the following year was principal of a private school in Norwich, New York. In 1871 and 1872 he studied chemistry in the Sheffield Scientific School of New Haven, Connecticut, and in 1875 was graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. From 1874 to 1876 he served as interne on the first medical division of Bellevue Hospital, and from 1876 to 1878 studied in the universities of Strassburg, Leipsic, Breslau and Vienna, applying himself chiefly to pathology. From 1878 to 1884 he was demonstrator of anatomy and professor of pathological anatomy and general pathology in Bellevue Hospital Medical College, New York; also pathologist to Bellevue Hospital and the Woman's Hospital, and curator of the Wood Museum. Since 1884 he has occupied the chair of professor of pathology in Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore. The years 1884 and 1885 were spent in Germany, chiefly in the study of bacteriology, under Professors Koch, Flügge and others. Since 1889 he has been pathologist to the Johns Hopkins Hospital, and upon the opening of the Johns Hopkins Medical School in 1893 he became dean of the faculty, resigning this office in 1898. In 1894 the University of Pennsylvania conferred upon him the honorary degree of Doctor of Medicine, and the same year he received from the Western Reserve University the degree of LL.D., Yale University conferring the same degree upon him in 1896, and Harvard University in 1900.

Dr. Welch has been president of the Medical and Chirurgical Faculty of Maryland (1891-2), president of the Congress of American Physicians and Surgeons (1897), president of the Association of American Physicians (1901), president of the Society of American Bacteriologists (1901), vice president of the American Association for the Advancement of Science (1902-3), since 1899 president of the state board of health of Maryland, and, since its organization in 1901, president of the board of directors of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research. He founded in 1896 and is editor of The Journal of Experimental Medicine. He is an honorary member of the Pathological Society of London, and belongs to various other medical bodies. He is also a member of the National Academy of Sciences, the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, the American Philosophical Society, corresponding member of the Schlesische Gesellschaft für vaterländische Cultur, etc. He holds membership in the Maryland Club and the University Clubs of Baltimore and of New York. In politics he is independent.

Dr. Welch delivered the Cartwright lectures in 1888 on the "General Pathology of Fever," the Shattuck lecture in 1900 on "Morbid Conditions Caused by Bacillus Aërogenes Capsulatus," the address on "Yale and Its Relation to Medicine" at the Yale Bicentennial Anniversary in 1901, and in 1902 the Huxley lecture in London on "Recent Studies of Immunity, with Special Reference to their Bearing on Pathology." He is the author of the pathological sections in the fifth and sixth editions of Flint's "Theory and Practice of Medicine," of the articles on "Organic Diseases of the Stomach" in Pepper's "System of Medicine" (1885), on "Bacteria, Infection and Immunity" in "Text-Book of the Theory and Practice of Medicine by American Teachers" (1894), on "Surgical Bacteriology" in Dennis' "System of Surgery" (1895), on "Parasitology of Malaria" in Loomis and Thompson's "American System of Practical Medicine" (1897), and on "Thrombosis and Embolism" in Allbutt's "System of Medicine" (1899). He has also contributed to medical journals many papers on pathological and bacteriological subjects.

ARTHUR FRANCIS HOAG, M. D.—1879.

Dr. Arthur Francis Hoag, physician and surgeon of Millerton, Dutchess county, New York, was born in the town of Northeast, Dutchess county, New York, November 11, 1856, a son of William P. and Mary J. (Simmons) Hoag; the former was born in Dutchess county and the latter in Chatham, Columbia county, New York. They are descendants of an old and respected English ancestry, whose religious beliefs were those of the Quakers.

Dr. Hoag was reared in his native county, where his early education was acquired; he then entered the private school conducted by the Rev. Dr. A. H. Seely, of Smithfield, Dutchess county, New York, where he pursued a course of study in the higher English branches and classics. When he attained the age of seventeen years he became a student of medicine in the office of Dr. Sidney Stillman, of Millerton, New York, and in 1876 matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which he was graduated in the class of 1879 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. While pursuing his collegiate course he was actively connected with Dr. H. B. Sands in clinical work. On August 16, 1879, he commenced the practice of his profession in Millerton in company with his preceptor, Dr. Stillman. This connection continued for three years, and since then Dr. Hoag has succeeded in establishing one of the largest surgical and medical practices in the city; his professional ability is of a high order and has gained for him an enviable reputation among the medical practitioners of his chosen calling. Although greatly interested in surgery, to the study of which he devoted extra time while a student, and for which he seems to possess a natural aptitude, his practice is of a general nature; his professional career is a good illustration of what can be accomplished by the exercise of will, energy and perseverance.

In addition to his private practice Dr. Hoag acts in the capacity of district examiner of several leading life insurance companies, among them being the New York Life Insurance Company, the Equitable, the Northwestern of Milwaukee, the Union, the Central and the Travellers of Hartford. He has also served as health officer for a number of years in the town of Northeast, New York. Dr. Hoag is a member of the Dutchess County Medical Society, and the Medical Society of the State of New York; he is also affiliated with Webotuck Lodge No. 480, A. F. & A. M., and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows No. 383. Dr. Hoag was united in marriage in 1881 to Miss Jessie L. Wheeler, who was born in Dutchess county, New York. Their children are Arthur E. and William H. Hoag.

EDGAR DAVID COONLEY, M. D.—1877.

Dr. Coonley is a native of the old Empire state of the Union, having been born in Greenville, Greene county, New York, on the 12th of July, 1844.

John Coonley, the ancestor of this family, came from Germany about 1760; he settled in Dutchess county and died there in 1810. Jacob Coonley, son of John, was born July 30, 1763, and married, first, Elizabeth Brill, in 1792, and second, Elizabeth Harn, February 20, 1798. His son Frederick, born October 31, 1802, came to Greenville in April, 1827. He married Anna Maria Haight and had two children. On April 2, 1835, he married Eliza Griffin, by whom he had seven children, of whom Dr. Coonley is the fifth.

Dr. Coonley pursued his studies in the academy of his native town and later in the Hudson River Institute at Claverack, Columbia county, where he was prepared for entrance into Yale University. In that institution he was graduated as a member of the class of 1871, receiving the degree of Bachelor of Arts. Dr. Coonley enlisted in the fall of 1864 in the Ninety-first New York Volunteer Infantry as private and served till the end of the war, being mustered out in 1865. Soon after leaving the university he began his work of technical study, taking up the reading of medicine and surgery, until he was duly matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, where he was graduated as a member of the class of 1877. Dr. Coonley, now thoroughly reinforced for the practice of his chosen profession, opened an office at Mariner Harbor, Staten Island, where he built up an excellent business, and where he continued his residence until 1890, when he took up his abode in Port Richmond, where his success as a physician and surgeon has been most gratifying and well merited.

Dr. Coonley is a close and constant student and keeps in close touch with the advances made in his profession, while he is deservedly popular both as a physician and a man, his ability commanding confidence, and his personality respect and esteem. He is a member of the Richmond County Medical Society and of the surgical staff of the Smith Infirmary, while his practice is of representative character. He was married, in 1873, to Amelia Durland, of Orange county, New York, and three children were born: Frederick, M. D., a graduate of Yale College and Yale Medical School, now connected with the Presbyterian Hospital, New York; Mary Ellen, and Carl.

DAVID FITCH ARMSTRONG, A. B., M. D.,—1895.

Dr. David F. Armstrong, general practitioner of the city of Auburn, New York, was born in that town February 12, 1869, the son of David H. and Mary (Fitch) Armstrong of Cayuga county, New York. Dr. Armstrong pursued his preliminary education in the grammar and high schools of Auburn and afterward continued his studies at Williams College, class of 1892, from which he obtained the degree of Bachelor of Arts. When his literary course was completed, he decided to enter upon the study of medicine, and matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, from which he was graduated with the degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1895. He was not regularly appointed to an internship, but performed substitute work for a period of about eighteen months in the Polyclinic and Charity Hospital in order to acquire the experience that he thought was necessary for his professional career.

After thus gaining a varied knowledge of the basic principles of the calling to which he had consecrated his time and attention, Dr. Armstrong entered upon the active practice of his profession in Auburn, where he has since continued, and his devotion to his work, combined with ability, both natural and acquired, has gained for him a large and steadily increasing patronage. Although one of the younger members of the medical profession in the city of Auburn, Dr. Armstrong was appointed on the staff of the Auburn City Hospital. He is also a member of the Cayuga County Medical Society.

WILLIAM SANDERSON CHEESMAN, M. D.—1879.

Dr. William S. Cheesman, a general practitioner of Auburn, New York, was born in Brooklyn, New York, February 10, 1853. He attended the Brooklyn Polytechnic School, from which he was graduated in the class of 1871. He then entered Princeton University, was graduated with the class of 1875 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts, and three years later received the degree of Master of Arts from the same institution.

He subsequently became a student of the late Dr. H. B. Sands of New York, entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, and graduated in the class of 1879. Shortly after receiving his diploma, Dr. Cheesman was appointed interne at Bellevue Hospital, where he served during the years 1879 and 1880. He then entered upon the active practice of his profession in Auburn, New York, where he serves in the capacity of surgeon to the City Hospital. He is a member of the Medical Society of the State of New York, the Cayuga County Medical Society, the Central New York Medical Association, the Syracuse Academy of Medicine, and a fellow of the New York Academy of Medicine. In 1882 Dr. Cheesman married Miss Mary Cuyler, of Brooklyn, New York.

SAMUEL ST. JOHN.

Professor Samuel St. John, deceased, was born in New Canaan, Connecticut, March 29, 1813, a descendant of an ancestry who were noted for their services during the Revolutionary period. His preliminary education was acquired in the common schools of his birthplace, and subsequently he became a student of Yale University, from which institution he was graduated in 1834 as valedictorian of his class. Four years later he accepted the appointment of professor of chemistry, mineralogy and geology in the Western Reserve College at Hudson, Ohio, in which capacity he served until 1851. He then became professor of chemistry, mineralogy and medical jurisprudence in Cleveland Medical College. In 1856 he was appointed professor of chemistry in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, which position he held up to the time of his death, which occurred September 6, 1876.

In 1835 Dr. St. John visited Europe in company with Dr. Willard Parker, in 1856 he sought recreation and rest abroad, and in 1873 he again went abroad and visited Vienna in company with his son and daughter. In the later years of his life his residence was in New Canaan, Connecticut; he wrote a history of the town, which he delivered at the centennial celebration. In 1840 Dr. St. John married Amelia P. C. Curtis, and their children were: Walter, who died in infancy; Eliza C., Samuel B., and George St. John.

SAMUEL BENEDICT ST. JOHN, A. B., M. D.—1870.

Dr. Samuel B. St. John, son of Samuel and Amelia Palmer Cranch (Curtis) St. John, was born in Hudson, Ohio, July 24, 1845, and is a direct descendant on the maternal side of Brigadier General Joseph Pease Palmer, one of the "Indians" of the famous Boston tea-party, who was a son of Major General Joseph Palmer, a Revolutionary patriot who was born in Massachusetts in 1718 and died in Roxbury, Massachusetts, in 1788. On the paternal side Dr. St. John is descended from Mathias St. John, who was an officer during the Revolutionary period and for a short space of time was imprisoned on the British prison ships at Brooklyn. Samuel St. John, father of Dr. Samuel B. St. John, was prominently identified with early collegiate education as professor in the Western Reserve College of Ohio and also served as professor in the Cleveland Medical College, and subsequently in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city as professor of chemistry for twenty years.

Dr. Samuel B. St. John prepared for college in the common schools of Cleveland, Ohio, and at New Canaan, Connecticut, and pursued the regular course in Yale University, from which he was graduated in 1866 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. He then took up the study of medicine in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which institution he received his medical diploma in 1870. He was then appointed interne at Bellevue Hospital, remaining for the full term of eighteen months, was assistant demonstrator of anatomy and instructor in the faculty quiz for one year, and from 1872 to 1874 pursued his medical studies in the universities of Berlin and Vienna, also in the eye hospitals of Paris and London. After his return he became successively first house surgeon in the Manhattan Eye and Ear Hospital, throat surgeon to the New York Dispensary, eye and ear surgeon to the Northwestern Dispensary, assistant surgeon and afterward surgeon to the New York Eye and Ear Infirmary. In 1896 he was appointed ophthalmic and aural surgeon to the Hartford Hospital, and one year later received the appointment of consulting surgeon to St. Francis Hospital in Hartford, Connecticut.

Dr. St. John has been the president and secretary of the Connecticut State Medical Society, filling the latter position from 1883 to 1888; secretary of the American Ophthalmological Society since 1888; president of the New York Ophthalmological Society from 1890 to 1891; and president of the New England Ophthalmological Society from 1890 to 1891. He is also a member of the Hartford County Medical Society, the Hartford Medical Society, the American Otological Society, and fellow of the New York Academy of Medicine. He is a member of the Hartford Club and has served as a member of the board of directors and was the first president of the Hartford public library, being for fifteen years one of the directors of its predecessor, the subscription library. Dr. St. John has written a number of monographs on the eye which have been published in the various medical journals, the most extended article being "The Treatment of Fractures by Plastic Apparatus," published in the American Journal of Medical Sciences in July, 1872. On October 10, 1882, Dr. St. John was united in marriage to Miss Mary Harris Morgan, and their children are Elsa M. and Helen C. St. John.

LOUIS JULIUS LADINSKI, A. B., M. D.— 1887.

Dr. Louis Julius Ladinski, specialist in gynecology, was born October 15, 1862, in Russia, and is the son of Aaron Harris and Rachael (Peiser) Ladinski. He comes of Russian Hebrew ancestry. He received his early education in the public schools of New York, and in 1884 graduated from the College of the City of New York with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. In 1887 he received from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University the degree of Doctor of Medicine. After serving for two years as surgical interne in Mount Sinai Hospital, he began practice in the spring of 1889 in New York city. Since 1899 he has resided at his present address, 1289 Madison avenue, and has devoted himself exclusively to gynecology. In 1890 he was appointed surgeon to Mount Sinai Dispensary, and also assistant in gynecology to Dr. Mudé in the New York Polyclinic, where he now occupies the chair of adjunct professor of gynecology. In 1895 he was appointed visiting surgeon to Beth-Israel Hospital, which position he held until 1902, when he became visiting gynecologist to that institution, which position he still holds. Since 1898 he has been visiting surgeon to Gouverneur Hospital.

Dr. Ladinski has been a contributor to various medical journals, and the author of a number of papers which have been read before the different professional societies of which he is a member. He has published a work entitled, "Deciduoma Malignum," which was read before the section of obstetrics and gynecology of the New York Academy of Medicine, January 23, 1902, and afterward issued by William Wood & Company.

Dr. Ladinski is president of the Eastern Medical Society, and chairman of the section of obstetrics and gynecology of the New York Academy of Medicine. He is a member of the Metropolitan Medical Society, the Harlem Medical Association, the New York County and State and the American Medical associations, the New York County and State Medical societies, the Alumni of Mount Sinai Hospital, and the New York Physicians' Mutual Aid Association. He affiliates with Centennial Lodge, F. and A. M., and belongs to the Democratic Club, being an adherent of the independent section of that party. Dr. Ladinski married, February 16, 1893, Evelyn Louise Adler. They have two children, Edward Seligman and Paul Mundé.

LEWIS SLOCOMB HORTON, M. D.—1862.

Dr. Lewis Slocumb Horton, an able and experienced physician, of Brooklyn, New York, is of New England and also of professional ancestry, his father and grandfather, the former of whom was a native of Rehoboth, Massachusetts, having both been dentists. His mother was born in Bellingham, Massachusetts. Dr. Horton, son of Manley Padelford and Vesta (Slocumb) Horton, was born April 3, 1837, in Woonsocket, Rhode Island, but passed his boyhood chiefly in New Hampshire, his mother having died when he was but fourteen months old. Between fifteen and sixteen years of age he became an apprentice of Edward Harris, a woolen manufacturer of Woonsocket, Rhode Island, and at the expiration of two years was made foreman of the same department in a woolen factory at Templeton, Massachusetts. While very attentive to his duties in this business, he had become extremely desirous of obtaining a liberal education, and had taken up the study of Latin under the guidance of the Rev. Dr. Meredith, of Winchendon, Massachusetts, five miles distant, whither he was accustomed to go at night, twice a week, for the purpose of reciting. One severe night in the winter of 1857 Theodore Parker, then at the height of his popularity as a lecturer, was in Templeton, on his way to Winchendon to lecture before an association, but found difficulty in getting any one to take him there until Dr. Horton stated to him that he was going and volunteered his escort. The proposition was accepted, and on the way Dr. Parker, by his kindly interest in the young man, drew from him some account of his plans and endeavors. The result was that Dr. Parker's sympathies were enlisted for the struggling youth, and he introduced him to Dr. Henry Barnard, the well-known educator and friend of young men, who, in return for some assistance in his office, offered him a home while attending the Hopkins grammar school and the Hartford high school. After remaining with Dr. Barnard for some time, Dr. Horton was informed by his benefactor that Dr. Zina Pitcher, of the United States Marine Hospital at Detroit, knowing that the young man had selected the science of medicine as a life calling, offered him the position of apothecary in the hospital. The offer was gratefully accepted, and after availing himself for three years of the many advantages afforded by the position, Dr. Horton matriculated in the medical department of the Michigan State University, and subsequently in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he graduated in the class of 1862.

Dr. Satterlee, a warm friend of Dr. Pitcher, had been interested by the latter in behalf of his protégé and offered Dr. Horton a position as contract surgeon in the army during the Civil war, which was then in progress. Dr. Horton was sent first to Hilton Head to report to General Hunter, with whom he remained five months, when he was transferred to Paducah, Kentucky, where he remained in charge of General Hospital No. 3 for twenty-two months. He was next sent to Jeffersonville, Indiana, for a few months, and thence to Vicksburg, where he remained in charge of General Hospital No. 2 until the close of the war. After staying for a while in New Orleans, Dr. Horton settled, in 1866, in New York, where he entered upon the active practice of his profession, which he followed for more than thirty years with marked success, building up the reputation of a thoroughly skillful and scientific medical practitioner. In 1898 Dr. Horton purchased his present home on Macon street, Brooklyn, and removed to that city, where he has since resided.

Since 1871 Dr. Horton has been connected with the New York Medico-Historical Society, filling the position of diarist, an office for which he is singularly well adapted by reason of the deep interest which he has always taken in the preservation of records or items pertaining to medical science or medical men, and his systematic arrangement of these documents. He is a member of the New York Physicians' Mutual Aid Association. Dr. Horton married, in 1862, Maggie McNab, a native of Detroit, of Scotch-Irish ancestry, who died in 1879. He has two sons, Dexter Barnard, now living in New York, and Lewis F., a resident of Las Animas, Colorado.

ELIAS LESTER, M. D.—1863.

Dr. Elias Lester, of Seneca Falls, New York, where he holds a foremost place in the ranks of the medical profession, was born May 23, 1836, in Genoa, Cayuga county, New York, and is the son of Elihu Avery and Lucy (Bacon) Lester. His boyhood was passed on his father's farm, his early education being received in the public schools and at the Genoa Academy. Having made choice of the profession of medicine as a life calling, he entered upon a course of preliminary study under the direction of Dr. Lansing Briggs, of Auburn, subsequently having as preceptor Dr. Cyrus Powers, of Moravia. On completing his period of preparation, he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, and after attending one course of lectures was appointed, September 23, 1861, a medical cadet in the United States service. In September, 1862, his term of enlistment having expired, he resumed his medical studies and was graduated in the class of 1863.

He was then made first assistant surgeon to the Fourteenth New York Volunteer Cavalry, and subsequently surgeon to the Third Engineers. In 1864 he was appointed brigade surgeon to the Engineer's Brigade in Louisiana, filling his position until October, 1864, when he resigned. He then entered upon the active practice of his profession in Corinth, Saratoga county, where he remained eleven months, and then came to Seneca Falls, where he has since practiced, and where both as a physician and a citizen he is held in honor by all. For seven years he filled the office of president of the board of United States examining surgeons for pensions, and in 1890 was appointed a delegate to the International Medical Congress in Berlin. He has recently been elected a delegate for two years to the American Medical Association.

Dr. Lester is a member of the Seneca County Medical Association, the New York State Medical Association, and the American Medical Association. In all these organizations his high professional standing and attractive personality render him a prominent figure. Dr. Lester married, December 22, 1864, Miss Caroline Foote, of Cayuga county. Their family consists of three children: Caroline F., who is a student in the teachers' college connected with Columbia University; Frederick William, mentioned below; and George Bacon, a prominent and rising attorney of New York.

Frederick William Lester, son of Dr. Elias and Caroline (Foote) Lester, was born July 14, 1870, in Seneca Falls, New York, and received his primary education in the grammar and high schools of his native city, after which he was engaged in teaching for three years. At the end of that time, having decided to take up the profession of his father, he was, under the latter's careful guidance, prepared to enter the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he graduated in the class of 1894. He entered upon the active practice of his calling in Seneca Falls, where he has worthily sustained the reputation of his father by the enthusiasm which he manifests for his profession, and his close attention to the duties it involves. He is a member of the Seneca County Medical Association. He married, June 9, 1897, Miss Elizabeth Campbell, of New York. Three children have been born to them: Laura, John and Caroline.

JOHN TAYLOR HOWELL, M. D.—1884.

Dr. John Taylor Howell, for many years actively engaged in the practice of medicine and surgery in the city of Newburgh, Orange county, New York, was born near Middletown, in the same county, April 23, 1862, and the early part of his life was spent there. He prepared for college in the Walkill Academy, where he manifested a predilection for the science of medicine, and after completing the course he devoted a year to the reading of medicine under the preceptorship of Dr. T. D. Mills, of Middletown, New York. He then matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, class of 1885, from which he was graduated in 1884. He afterwards spent an internship of two years in Bellevue Hospital, New York, where he became house surgeon of the second surgical division.

Dr. Howell then entered upon active practice of his profession in the city of Newburgh, where he is recognized as a reliable and successful medical practitioner. He devotes much of his time to surgery, which branch of the profession he has made a specialty. In addition to his extensive private practice, Dr. Howell acts in the capacity of attending surgeon at St. Luke's Hospital, Newburgh, New York, which appointment he has held since 1887. He is a close, careful student and has contributed a number of original papers to different medical societies and journals. He is a member of the Medical Society of the State of New York, the Alumni Society of Bellevue Hospital of New York, and a fellow of the New York Academy of Medicine. He is also an ex-president of the Orange County and the Newburgh Bay Medical societies. On May 15, 1889, Dr. Howell was united in marriage to Miss Sarah T. Steele, a native of Newburgh, New York, and they are the parents of three children: Mary T., John T., Jr., and Josephine C. Howell.

ROBERT STEVENSON, M. D.—1899.

Robert Stevenson, M. D., was born in Brooklyn, July 18, 1877. His parents were John and Elsbeth Ritchie (Glasgow) Stevenson, whose ancestors originally came from Scotland. They sent their son Robert to the public schools at an early age, and in 1895 he was graduated from the high school, having a good general education. As soon as he decided to enter the medical profession, he prepared for the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York, and four years later, in 1899, he had gained the degree of Doctor of Medicine.

He obtained the requisite hospital experience by serving one year as interne, during which he successfully performed the various professional duties required of him, and in 1900 he was able to establish a private practice in Brooklyn, his native city, where he at present resides, his address being 99 India street. His work lies principally in Williamsburg, now known as the Eastern District of Brooklyn, and there is a good opening in this location for an extensive and increasing general practice. Dr. Stevenson has already secured membership in the Kings County Medical Society and in the Brooklyn Medical Society. He is also identified with hospital practice, and is one of the physicians attached to the Bushwick and East Brooklyn Dispensary.

PHILO WINCHELL CLARK, M. D.—1867.

Dr. Philo Winchell Clark, recognized a quarter of a century ago as holding an honorable place among the physicians of Dutchess county, belonged to one of the old families of that county, his grandfather Douglas Clark, who was one of the early settlers of Rhode Island, having removed to New York and settled on a farm in North East township, Dutchess county, where his descendants still reside. Douglas Clark was the father of a son, Perry

J W Clark

Raymond Clark

Clark, born May 7, 1801, who married Caroline Winchell, born April 21, 1804.

Philo Winchell Clark, son of Perry and Caroline (Winchell) Clark, was born, December 18, 1831, at Millerton, Dutchess county, New York, on the farm which had been the birthplace of his father. His early education was received in the public schools, and on reaching manhood he decided to devote himself to the medical profession. With this end in view he entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which institution he received the degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1867. After graduation he served for a time as interne in Bellevue Hospital, and during this period contracted typhoid fever, which resulted in heart trouble, thus rendering it impossible for him to enter upon the active professional career to which he had intended to devote himself. He accordingly retired to the ancestral farm, where he spent the remainder of his life.

Although Dr. Clark was unable, owing to the state of his health, to engage in practice to any considerable extent, his professional ability was never questioned, and it was regretted by those who knew him that he was prevented from devoting himself to a calling the duties of which he was so eminently fitted to discharge. Dr. Clark married, November 4, 1869, at Poughkeepsie, New York, Mary Elizabeth Parker. They were the parents of two children: Raymond, born November 26, 1870; and Mary Louisa, born July 1, 1872. Dr. Clark died of pneumonia, November 23, 1880.

RAYMOND CLARK, M. D.—1895.

Dr. Raymond Clark, a successful practicing physician of Brooklyn, New York, was born November 26, 1870, in Dutchess county, New York. His early boyhood was passed on the old homestead farm and in attending the district school. At the age of twelve years he entered Reid's Private School of Lakeville, Connecticut, and three years later the Riverview Military Academy of Poughkeepsie; after leaving there he served for a time as clerk in a drug store. It is not improbable that the acquaintance here made with medical preparations and medical matters had an influence in turning his thoughts to the practice of medicine and in causing him to adopt it as a life work.

He took the medical preparatory course at Cornell University, after which he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which institution he graduated in the class of 1895 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. By way of a post-graduate course, Dr. Clark then went to Europe and continued his studies for some time in Berlin, Germany. On his return he formed a connection with the staff of the Methodist Episcopal Hospital of Brooklyn, where he remained two years, and in January, 1898, engaged in general practice in Brooklyn, where he has made for himself an honorable place in the ranks of his profession.

Dr. Clark's success and ability are attested not only by the extensive patronage which he enjoys, but by the number and importance of his hospital appointments. He is adjunct attending physician at the Brooklyn Hospital, pathologist to the Bushwick Central Hospital, physician to the Polhemus

Memorial Clinic, instructor in histology and assistant to chair of clinical medicine to the Long Island College Hospital, and assistant pathologist to the Methodist Episcopal Hospital of Brooklyn. Dr. Clark is a member of the Medical Society of the County of Kings, the Brooklyn Pathological Society, and the Methodist Episcopal Hospital Alumni Association. On January 6, 1898, he married Miss Mary Ella Tyler, of Westfield, New Jersey, and has one daughter, Mary Wells Clark.

CLARENCE ALBERT GREENLEAF, M. D.—1896.

Dr. Clarence Albert Greenleaf, a well known specialist of Rochester, New York, was born September 17, 1873, in Seneca county, New York, and is the son of Albert R. and Frances E. (Stratton) Greenleaf. His boyhood was passed in his native county, and he received an academic education in Seneca Falls. Having made choice of the practice of medicine as a life calling, he entered the office of Dr. Elias Lester, of Seneca Falls, under whose direction he applied himself to a course of preparatory study, after which he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which institution he graduated in the class of 1896. He then accepted service in the Rochester City Hospital, where he remained one year, and then, being thoroughly equipped for his future work, he entered upon the active practice of his profession in Rochester, giving his attention to orthopedic surgery and X-ray work, of both of which branches of medical science he has made a special study. He is in the enjoyment of a good practice, being favorably known as a close student and skillful operator. He holds the position of radiographer in St. Mary's Hospital and belongs to the junior staff of the Rochester City Hospital.

Dr. Greenleaf is a member of the Monroe County Medical Society, in which he holds the office of treasurer. He is secretary of the Central New York Medical Association, a member of the Rochester Pathological Society, the Hospital Medical Society, and a fellow of Rochester Academy of Medicine. Dr. Greenleaf married, in 1900, Ella Devereaux, a native of Rochester, and a daughter of Nicholas and Frances Devereaux.

FREDERICK D. VANDERHOOF, M. D.—1864.

Dr. Frederick D. Vanderhoof, for nearly forty years identified with the medical profession of Ontario county, where he was born April 28, 1843, is the son of Peter and Margaret (Dockstater) Vanderhoof. The family is of the old Holland stock which first settled New York city and state, on both of which the period of Dutch domination, though of not more than fifty years' duration, has left traces which have not been obliterated through the changes of two centuries and a half.

The boyhood of Dr. Vanderhoof was passed in his native county, where his primary education was received in the schools of the neighborhood. Deciding early in life to devote himself to the practice of medicine, he pursued a course of preparatory study under the guidance of Dr. C. G. Pomeroy, of Newark, and attended his first course of lectures at the Albany Medical College, subsequently matriculating in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he graduated in the class of 1864, having entered the institution during the preceding year. The Civil war being then in progress, he entered the service of the United States army as assistant surgeon of the Fifty-first New York Volunteer Infantry, in which capacity he served until the close of the war. He then entered upon a career of private practice in Phelps, in his native county, where he has long been one of the recognized leaders in the medical profession.

Dr. Vanderhoof is a member of the Ontario County Medical Society, of which he is ex-secretary and also ex-president, having filled the latter office for two terms. He belongs to the New York State Medical Association and the Central New York Medical Association. He has twice acted as a delegate to the American Medical Association. He married, in 1864, Miss Armeda Hyde, of Newark, New York. Their family consists of four children: Ina V., who graduated from Woman's College, New York city, in 1885, and she was prepared, under the careful guidance of Dr. Vanderhoof, to enter the Medical College of New York, where she graduated in the class of 1895; she became the wife of Charles Burt; Neva, who married Walter A. Clark; Frederick C.; and Bertrand G.

ALBERT OSBORN BOGERT, M. D.—1875.

Dr. Albert O. Bogert, for more than a quarter of a century engaged in the practice of medicine and surgery in Rockland county, was born at Pearl River, Rockland county, New York, July 19, 1851, the fourth son of David A. and Phebe Ann (Osborn) Bogert, the former having been born in Rockland county, New York, and the latter a native of Sussex county, New Jersey. He was reared in the town of his birth, and received his primary education in the district schools; later this was supplemented by a thorough course of study at the Albany Normal School, which he attended during the years 1869 and 1870. The following three years he was engaged in the occupation of teaching, and during this period he decided to take up the study of medicine, being the youngest of three brothers to follow that profession; the others were Dr. Ryckman D. Bogert, deceased, and Dr. Sylvester S. Bogert, of Pearl River.

Dr. Bogert commenced his medical studies under the preceptorship of his brother, Dr. Sylvester S. Bogert, and subsequently matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which he was graduated in the class of 1875. He at once entered upon the active practice of his profession in his native county, and for several years acted in the capacity of physician and surgeon to the county almshouse, as well as visiting surgeon to St. Agatha's Home at Nanuet, New York. He is a member of the Rockland County Medical Society, having held the office of president for a number of years. Dr. Bogert has always taken an active interest in every movement that has tended to permanently benefit his community, his influence ever being on the side of the right and morality. In educational matters he has labored zealously and efficiently, serving for thirteen years as a member of the school board of Spring Valley, New York.

EDWARD JAMES WARE, M. D.—1885.

Dr. Edward James Ware was born June 16, 1859, in New York city, and is the son of Enoch Richmond and Mary Coutant (Peck) Ware, the former a native of Winterport, Maine, and the latter of New York. On the paternal side Dr. Ware is descended from Robert Ware, of Dedham, and traces his maternal ancestry from the French Huguenot family of Coutant, and from the Dutch family of Varian.

Dr. Ware received his early education at the Peekskill (New York) Military Academy, and the Irving Institute, Tarrytown, New York. He then entered Harvard University, from which he graduated in 1881 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts, receiving in 1885 the degree of Doctor of Medicine from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York. From June, 1885, to December, 1886, he was on the medical staff of Mount Sinai Hospital. His practice from the beginning has been on the upper west side of New York city, his address being 121 West Ninety-third street. For several years he was instructor and lecturer in the department of diseases of the chest and general medicine of the New York Polyclinic, and assistant attending physician to the out-patient department of the Roosevelt Hospital. He is now attending physician to St. Luke's Home.

Dr. Ware is a member of the New York Academy of Medicine, the New York State and County Medical associations, the New York County Medical Society, the Mount Sinai Alumni Association, and the West End Medical Society; of the last named organization he was the second president. He belongs to the Harvard Club of New York, and during his college course was a member of the historic Hasty Pudding Club. He is a vestryman of St. Michael's Protestant Episcopal church. Dr. Ware married, October 4, 1888, Caroline L. Barlow, of Sing Sing, New York. They have three children: Edward Richmond, born March 25, 1892; William Barlow, born March 20, 1895; and Catherine, born May 27, 1902.

NEWELL EGBERT LANDON, M. D.—1876.

Dr. Newell Egbert Landon, the leading physician of Newark, Wayne county, New York, where he has been for a quarter of a century engaged in the active practice of his profession, was born March 3, 1852, in the city in which he is now a resident, and is the son of Zera N. and Sarah (Adams) Landon, both natives of New York state. His boyhood was passed in his native village, in the schools of which he received his primary education.

After making choice of the practice of medicine as a life calling, he applied himself to a course of preparatory study under the preceptorship of Dr. C. G. Pomeroy, and at its conclusion matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he graduated in the class of 1876. He entered upon the active practice of his profession in his native village, where his able and conscientious discharge of his duties of a medical practitioner has long placed him in the front rank of the profession. He holds the office of visiting physician to the New York State Custodian Asylum for Feeble-minded Women, and is surgeon to the New York Central, the West Shore, and the Northern Central railroads. Notwithstanding Dr. Landon's devotion to his profession and his strict attention to the duties it involves, he takes a keen interest in everything pertaining to the permanent welfare of the community in which he resides, and is ever ready to assume, as far as is compatible with the fulfillment of other claims, the responsibilities of a citizen. His faithful and efficient service as president of the village and as a member of the health board fully demonstrates this fact.

J. W. May

Dr. Landon is a member of the American Medical Association, the New York State Medical Association, the Central New York Medical Association, the Wayne County Medical Society, the American Association of Railway Surgeons, and New York State Railway Surgeons. He is a member of Newark Lodge No. 83, F. & A. M., Newark Chapter No. 117, Zenobia Commandery No. 41, K. T., and of Palmyra and Damascus Temple of Rochester. He is serving a second term as worshipful master of Newark Lodge.

Dr. Landon married, in 1886, Miss Alice Russell, a native of Port Gibson, New York. They have no children.

THEODORE ERSKINE HAMILTON, M. D.—1861.

Dr. Theodore Erskine Hamilton was born in Somers, Tolland county, Connecticut, and is the son of Erasmus Erskine and Ursula Emeline (Kibbe) Hamilton. The former was a well known physician and was descended from a Scottish family, one branch of which emigrated from Edinburgh early in the eighteenth century. His paternal ancestors have been physicians for seven generations, and his great-grandfather was surgeon's mate in the war of the Revolution.

Dr. Hamilton received his early education in the Somers (Connecticut) Suffield Literary Institution and at Wilbraham Academy, Massachusetts. In 1858 and 1859 he was a student in the medical department of Harvard University, and in 1860 entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he graduated in 1861 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. During the following year he practiced medicine and surgery in Chicago, after which he removed to Somers, Connecticut, where he continued in practice for two years. He served during the Civil war in the years 1864 and 1865, holding the rank of surgeon in the Eighth Connecticut Volunteer Infantry, army of the James. He served in the hospital at Bermuda Hundred, Virginia, in the Flying Hospital of the Twenty-fourth Army Corps, in Chimborazoo and Camp Lee Hospitals, Richmond, Virginia, and in Camp Davie Hospital, Lynchburg, Virginia. On his return to professional life, Dr. Hamilton resumed practice in Somers, and in 1871 removed to Springfield, where he has since been engaged in the practice of medicine and surgery, serving for a time on the surgical staff of the Springfield Hospital. It is a remarkable fact, and one which has, no doubt, contributed largely to Dr. Hamilton's professional success, that since the age of ten years he has been in the enjoyment of uninterrupted health.

He was a member of De Soto Lodge, I. O. O. F., and a member of the Winthrop Club of Springfield. Dr. Hamilton married December 24, 1863, Susan Louisa Chapin. The children born to them were: Josephine Eliza, born February 5, 1865, is the wife of Charles Allen Stone; Erskine Erasmus, who was born December 25, 1866, graduated in 1892 from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, married Hope Wardell Cornell February 20, 1894, and died January 24, 1901; Elizabeth Miranda, born May 22, 1869, died September 23, 1887; and Horatio Arnold.

WILLIAM AUGUSTUS HOWE, M. D.—1888.

Dr. William Augustus Howe, a well known physician of Phelps, Ontario county, New York, was born September 11, 1862, in the town of which he is now a resident, and is the son of the late Dr. John Q. and Nancy A. (Griffith) Howe. His father was for forty-nine years a practicing physician of Phelps. William Augustus Howe received his primary education in the schools of his native village, and afterward became a student at Hobart College, from which he was graduated in the class of 1885 with the degree of Bachelor of Science. When the time came for him to choose a profession, he decided to adopt that of his father, under whose careful guidance he entered upon his course of preparation, subsequently matriculating in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York. At his graduation, which took place in 1888, he was honored with the position of president of his class. He entered upon the active practice of his profession in his native town, where he has fully sustained the high reputation enjoyed by his father for the space of well-nigh half a century.

Dr. Howe is a member of the board of pension examiners of his district. He is no less notable for his public spirit as a citizen than for his skill and zeal as a physician, and is health officer of the village, in addition to having filled for six years the position of coroner of Ontario county. He is particularly interested in the cause of education, having served for years as a member of the board of education of the Phelps high school.

Dr. Howe is a member of the Lake Keuka Medical and Surgical Society, the Central New York Medical Association, and is a member and ex-president of the Ontario County Medical Society. He is a fellow of the Rochester Academy of Medicine and president of the National Association of United States Pension Examining Surgeons. Dr. Howe married, in 1892, Elizabeth M., daughter of the Hon. S. S. and Frances (Bellamy) Partridge, of Phelps, New York. To them have been born four children: Margaret, Elizabeth, Frances and John Q. Howe.

JOHN FRANKLIN MYERS, M. D.—1887.

Dr. John Franklin Myers, a skillful and experienced physician of Sodus, Wayne county, New York, was born March 20, 1862, in the county of which he is now a resident, and is the son of John W. and Frances A. (Hallett) Myers. His early life was spent on a farm, and his education was received at the Sodus Academy. After graduating he followed for two or three years the profession of a teacher, and later became a student of Dr. L. M. Gaylord, under whose guidance he completed his course of preliminary instruction, after which he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he graduated in the class of 1887.

The following autumn Dr. Myers opened an office in Sodus, where he speedily earned for himself the reputation of a skillful and successful medical practitioner. Dr. Myers' spirit of progress and aspiration for further attainment in the science to which he had devoted himself, were such that although engaged in the active duties of a practitioner, he found time to become once more a student, and in 1898 took a post-graduate course. In May, 1900, he opened a private hospital in Sodus, and as proprietor of this institution has shown himself to be possessed not only of the professional skill to which his title had been for many years unquestioned, but of no small degree of executive ability. The success of the enterprise has been most gratifying. His assiduous attention to the duties of his profession does not make him unmindful of the obligations of a citizen, as was made manifest by his acceptance of the position of health officer at Sodus, in which capacity he rendered valuable service.

He is a member of the Central New York Medical Society, the County, State and American Medical associations, and the Wayne County Medical Society, of which he is ex-president. Dr. Myers married, April, 1893, Miss Jennie Buerman, to whose good sense, business ability and faithfulness he attributes a large part of his success. They have a son and a daughter, Linwood and Nanna.

WILBUR FISK NUTTEN, M. D.—1863.

Dr. Wilbur Fisk Nutten, who for forty years has been engaged in the active practice of his profession in Newark, Wayne county, New York, was born December 2, 1839, in Churchville, New York, and is the son of the Rev. David and Esther M. (Stowen) Nutten, both natives of New York, and the former a clergyman of the Methodist Episcopal church. In accordance with the rules of that church, the Rev. Mr. Nutten was transferred from one charge to another, and the boyhood of the son was thus passed in various places, his early education being largely received at the Genesee Wesleyan Seminary and College at Lima, New York.

Having made choice of the practice of medicine as a life calling, he placed himself for a course of preparatory study under the preceptorship of Dr. Charles Robinson, of Hornellsville, later receiving the instructions of Dr. C. G. Pomeroy, of Newark, New York. He attended his first course of lectures in Buffalo, New York, and his second at the medical department of the Michigan University at Ann Arbor, after which he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he graduated in the class of 1863. He entered upon the active practice of his profession in Newark, and for four years was in partnership with his former preceptor, Dr. Pomeroy. His many years' experience and his acknowledged skill have placed him in the front rank of his profession. Dr. Nutten has served both as a member and president of the village board of trustees, and the services which he has rendered in these offices have been such as materially to advance the best interests of the village.

Dr. Nutton is a member of the Wayne County Medical Society, the Central New York Medical Association, the New York State Medical Association, and the American Medical Association. In all these organizations, by reason of his professional enthusiasm and his long experience, he is an active and influential member. He married, in 1867, Mary E., daughter of the Rev. Orrin E. Trobridge, a prominent clergyman of the state of New York. Mrs. Nutton died in 1885, and in September, 1888, Dr. Nutton married Mrs. Addie Jewell, a native of Vermont, but a resident of California.

DARWIN EVERETT, M. D.—1864.

Dr. Darwin Everett, deceased, will be long remembered by the members of the medical profession of Middletown, New York, as a physician whose career proved to be a useful and worthy one. He was born in Middletown, Orange county, New York, March 6, 1843, the son of Harvey and Sarah A. Everett, both natives of Orange county. Harvey Everett, father of Dr. Darwin Everett, was born December 19, 1811, and obtained his literary education in the public and private schools of Middletown, this being supplemented by a course in the Montgomery Academy. After his graduation from the latter named institution, he began the study of medicine under the able preceptorship of Dr. John T. Jansen, of Minisink, Orange county, New York, and later matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, attending two courses, and subsequently he attended one course at the Vermont Academy of Medicine at Woodstock, from which he was graduated in the class of 1834. He immediately entered upon the practice of his profession in Middletown, where he remained until his retirement in 1884, owing to ill health. He thus rounded out a complete half century of successful practice and gained an enviable reputation. In 1839 he became a member of the Orange County Medical Society. Dr. Everett was prominent in educational matters, having served on the board of education from 1868 to 1872, and acted as president for the years 1871 and 1872; was supervisor of the town of Middletown, and served in the capacity of trustee of Walkill Academy from 1841 to 1868. His death occurred April 11, 1899, after a residence in Middletown of eighty-seven years; he was survived by one daughter, Genevieve, wife of Frank B. Denton.

Darwin Everett, son of Dr. Harvey and Sarah Everett, was reared in his native town and acquired his education in the Walkill Academy. Early in life he decided to become a physician and his preparatory studies were pursued under the careful guidance of his father; he then entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he was graduated with the degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1864. He had as classmates Drs. Janeway and Janvrin, two of the most celebrated physicians of the city of New York. Dr. Everett received the appointment on the medical staff of Bellevue Hospital, after a competitive examination, and served from 1864

Harvey Emmett

Harmon Everett

to 1866 inclusive. Flattering inducements were offered him to open an office in New York and practice his profession, but he decided to locate in Middletown, thus gratifying his father's cherished wish. From the beginning he enjoyed a large and constantly growing patronage, owing to the fact that he applied himself diligently and earnestly to the mastery of great scientific principles, and was accurate and exact in applying them to the practical affairs of life. Dr. Everett possessed many admirable social qualities, a marked courtesy, a kindness of disposition and a consideration for the opinions of others which won for him the confidence and good will of his fellow men. His death occurred September 18, 1884.

THEODORE ANDREWS MCGRAW, M. D.—1863.

Dr. Theodore Andrews McGraw was born November 11, 1839, in Detroit, Michigan, and is the son of Alexander C. and Susannah (Walker) McGraw. On the paternal side he comes of Scotch-Irish stock, and traces his descent through his mother from New England (originally English) ancestors. Dr. McGraw received his preparatory education at John Gregory's School in Detroit, and in 1859 graduated from the University of Michigan with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. In 1863 he received from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York the degree of Doctor of Medicine, and the same year entered the United States army as contract surgeon. March 30, 1864, he was commissioned assistant surgeon of United States Volunteers, and served in that capacity until he resigned, in May, 1865, since which time he has been engaged in the practice of his profession in Detroit. He is professor of surgery in the Detroit College of Medicine, in which institution he also holds the office of president of the faculty. He is attending surgeon to St. Mary's Hospital, and consulting surgeon to the Harper Hospital.

Dr. McGraw has contributed to the literature of his profession a number of articles and papers, among which the following may be specially mentioned: "Use of Elastic Ligature in the Surgery of the Intestines," "A New Method of Reducing Chronic Dislocations of the Jaw." Dr. McGraw is a member of the Michigan State Medical Society, the Detroit Medical and Library Association, the Wayne County Medical Society, American Medical Association, and American Surgical Association. He married, July 10, 1866, Alice E. Simpson. They have two children: Theodore Alexander and Frances, who became the wife of Clarence A. Lightner.

MAURICE LOUIS GOODKIND, A. B.; M. D.—1889.

Dr. Maurice L. Goodkind was born in Chicago, Illinois, November 14, 1867, a son of Louis and Mina Goodkind, and it was from his maternal ancestors that he inherited his taste for the medical profession, as his great-grandfather, grandfather, great-uncles and uncles were all prominent physicians in Bavaria, Germany. He obtained his early education at St. Paul's high school in Chicago, from which he was graduated in 1883; he later entered Williams College and after a three years' course matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which institution he was graduated in the class of 1889. Shortly after receiving his medical degree Dr. Goodkind was appointed to the Vanderbilt Clinic, where he remained one year; he then received the appointment of interne at the Michael Reese Hospital in Chicago, remaining one and one-half years, after which he pursued a three years' post-graduate course of study in Vienna, Austria. Returning from Europe in 1894 Dr. Goodkind engaged in general medical practice in Chicago, Illinois, where he has ever since resided.

Dr. Goodkind has acted in the capacity of attending physician to the Michael Reese Hospital since 1894, professor of clinical medicine at the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Chicago since 1896, attending physician of Cook County Hospital, medical inspector of the Chicago board of health for the years 1894 and 1895. His private practice is limited to internal medicine and neurology, in which branches of the profession he has met with gratifying success. He is a member of the Quadrangle Club of the University of Chicago, the American Medical Association, the Chicago Medical Society, the Neurological Society, the Chicago Society of Internal Medicine, of which he has been treasurer since 1898; the Medico-Legal Society and the Physicians' Club. On October 20, 1896, Dr. Goodkind was united in marriage to Rose Suydacker, and two children have been born to them, Godfrey and Ruth Goodkind.

CHARLES LIVINGSTON SQUIRE, M. D.—1874.

Dr. Charles Livingston Squire, a long established physician of Elmira, New York, belongs to a family which for three generations has been honorably represented in the ranks of the medical profession. Dr. Truman Hoffman Squire, the father of the present bearer of the name, was born in the town of Russia, Herkimer county, New York, and his early years were passed in the neighborhood of his birthplace, where he obtained a liberal education. After a short period of teaching he entered upon the study of medicine, attending his first course of lectures at the Albany Medical College, and his second at the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which institution he took his degree in medicine in 1848. After graduation he went to reside in Elmira, where he practiced his profession for forty years. During the Civil war he served as surgeon of one of the New York volunteer regiments, and later as division field surgeon, in which position he so distinguished himself as to elicit from the surgeon general of the army high praise for his zeal, intelligence and fidelity, as one of the most efficient and useful surgeons of the army of the Potomac. Possessing a talent for invention, Dr. Squire was led by his experiments to devise the vertebrated catheter, the introduction of which instrument to the profession exercised great influence upon the methods of practice in urethral surgery. In 1876 the prize of fifteen hundred francs offered by the Academy of Medicine of Paris was awarded Dr. Squire for his contribution to surgical methods in connection with diseases of the genito-urinary organs. He was prominently identified with numerous medical organizations, local, state and national, among the latter being the American Surgical Association, of which he was elected a fellow in 1882. Besides the contributions made to the transactions of some of these organizations, he also contributed to the literature of all branches of medical science both at home and abroad, and in the community in which he lived was esteemed no less highly as citizen than as a physician. He married Grace A., daughter of Dr. Nathaniel Smith, who was a graduate of one of the New England medical colleges. The death of Dr. Squire occurred in Elmira in 1889.

Charles Livingston Squire, son of Dr. Truman Hoffman and Grace A. (Smith) Squire, was born May 24, 1852, in Elmira, Chemung county, New York, and received his primary education in the schools of that city and at Fairfield Seminary, New York. When the time arrived for him to choose a profession, he naturally selected the one which might be said to be hereditary in his family, and pursued his preparatory studies under the careful guidance of his father, and later under Dr. Thomas M. Markoe, of New York, after which he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, and was graduated in the class of 1874.

Immediately thereafter he returned to Elmira, and entered upon the active practice of his calling, which he has pursued with a success which proves conclusively that the professional renown of the family will suffer no diminution while intrusted to his keeping. He filled at one time the position of attending physician on the staff of the Arnot-Ogden Memorial Hospital. Dr. Squire is a member of the Chemung County Medical Society and a fellow of the Elmira Academy of Medicine.

DAVID EUGENE ENGLISH, M. D.—1882.

Dr. David Eugene English, a physician and surgeon, and well known as the author of papers on professional topics, was born in Liberty Corner, New Jersey, May 17, 1857. His parents were the Rev. James Theodore and Mary Elizabeth (Jobs) English, natives of New Jersey. From 1838 to the time of his death, which occurred in 1872, the Rev. James Theodore English ministered to the spiritual needs of the people of the Presbyterian church at Liberty Corner.

The English family is one of note in the history of the country. Dr. English is the great-great-grandson of one of the first settlers, who were James, his wife Margaret (Rhea) English, and his brother; they immigrated to this country from the north of Ireland about 1700, and under a grant from the king, settled the town which bears their name, Englishtown. He is a great-grandson of David and Jane (Robinson) English and a grandson of James Robinson and Alice (Conover) English, all of Englishtown, New Jersey. His maternal great-grandparents were Adam and Caty (Cowenhoven) Jobs, natives of Holland, and his grandparents were Nicholas Conover and Margaret (Castner) Jobs.

Dr. English was educated in the public schools of Liberty Corner, and in Professor John Young's academy at Elizabeth, New Jersey. He was graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons in 1882, but ill health prevented his assuming the duties of a regular practitioner until 1883, and after three years of professional work ill health again compelled him to seek rest. He abandoned his profession temporarily and sought health in a long sea voyage; after a period of nine months he settled in Millburn and resumed practice. One form of disease that particularly appealed to Dr. English was typhoid, and he has made this a special study. His form of treatment is original with him. He has presented numerous papers on typhoid and kindred diseases to medical societies at different times, and these have been much discussed and extensively published through the medical journals of the country. He is a member of the American Medical Association, the New Jersey State Medical Society, the Essex County District Medical Society and the Orange Mountain Medical Society. He is also a member of the Society for the Relief of Widows and Orphans of Medical Men, the New Jersey Sanitary Association, and was a member of the Essex County board of chosen freeholders from 1894 to 1898.

He is a member of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics and the Independent Order of Foresters, the Essex County Republican committees, and the Republican Club. The Literary and Social Society also counts him one of its members. He was health physician of Millburn for six years. He has been a member of the Presbyterian church at Liberty Corner for more than thirty years. On May 27, 1890, Dr. English was married to Miss Margaret Jane Caparn, of East Orange, and formerly of England.

ARTHUR BACON BREESE, M. D.—1881.

Dr. Arthur B. Breese, for almost twenty years actively engaged in the practice of medicine and surgery in the city of Syracuse, New York, was born in Madison county, New York, March 26, 1858, the son of Samuel and Orpha J. (Bacon) Breese. Dr. Breese secured his early mental training under private tuition, and at the age of twelve years entered the private school of Rev. Charles E. Abbott, at Hartford, Connecticut. At the age of eighteen he went to Europe, and upon his return in 1878, he began the study of medicine under the personal supervision of Dr. Charles Perry, of Oneida, and later with Dr. Charles B. Kelsey, of New York. Subsequently he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which he was graduated in the class of 1881. He then received the appointment of interne in the Charity Hospital of New York, where he remained the full term of eighteen months, and this was followed by a course of about two years' duration in special clinic and hospital work in New York, in order to perfect himself in his professional equipment.

Dr. Breese chose the city of Syracuse for his future field of work, and in 1883 entered upon the active practice of his profession; he was well informed in all departments of his profession and his ability was marked, and this soon brought to him a liberal share of public patronage. He confines his practice largely to gynecology and abdominal surgery, in which he has attained a well merited reputation, not only among his patients, but among the members of the medical fraternity in the city of Syracuse. He acts in the capacity of surgeon to the Syracuse Hospital for Women and Children.

Arthur B. Breese

of which he was one of the founders, and in which he has rendered valuable service ever since its organization. He is a member of the Medical Society of the State of New York, the Onondaga County Medical Society, the Central New York Medical Society, and the Syracuse Academy of Medicine. On June 25, 1884, Dr. Breese was united in marriage to Miss Rebecca P. Merriman, of Syracuse, New York, and her death occurred December 22, 1901.

WILLARD DOOLITTLE BECKER, M. D.—1890.

Dr. Willard Doolittle Becker, one of the leading physicians of Rochester, New York, was born December 16, 1866, in Richmond, Ontario county, New York, and is the son of Willard and Lucretia (Adams) Becker. His early life was spent on a farm, his education being received at home and in the Geneseo Normal School, in which he took the classical course, graduating in the the class of 1887.

Having decided to devote himself for life to the practice of medicine, he began his preparatory studies under the direction of Dr. C. H. Richmond, of Livonia, New York, and on the completion of this course of preliminary instruction, matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he graduated in the class of 1890. He then received the appointment of interne in the General Memorial Hospital of New York (formerly known as the Cancer Hospital), where he enjoyed the opportunity of gaining much experience which proved of value to him in his future career. He entered upon the active practice of his profession in Rochester and has earned for himself a high standing in the ranks of the medical profession. While giving his attention to general practice, Dr. Becker has a natural aptitude and preference for surgery, in which he has achieved marked success.

Dr. Becker is a member of the Monroe County Medical Society, the Rochester Pathological Society, the Medical Association of Central New York, and the Medical Society of the State of New York. While taking an active part in the proceedings of these professional organizations, the absorbing nature of his duties leave him little time to devote to fraternal orders or to social obligations. Dr. Becker married, in 1890, Miss Flora Coykendall, of Ontario county, New York. Two children have been born to them, one son and one daughter.

MARTIN JOHN SYNNOTT, M. D.—1894.

Dr. Martin John Synnott was born in Great Neck, Long Island, July 12, 1869. His father was a farmer on Long Island, but removed to Montclair in 1870, and is now a successful contractor in that place. His parents, Joseph and Mary Synnott, are both living and are highly esteemed.

Dr. Synnott graduated from the Montclair high school in 1887 and then entered Yale College. He studied at Yale for three years, and one year later matriculated at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, from which institution he was graduated in 1894. After a year spent in Paterson, New Jersey, as house physician and surgeon to St. Joseph's Hospital, he began private practice in Little Falls, New Jersey, in partnership with Dr. E. A. Keeler, an old and established practitioner of that place.

He remained in Little Falls five years, and then came to his old home, Montclair, where he is now located. He is successful in his work and a very busy man. He is attending physician to St. Vincent's Foundling Hospital, and secretary of the out-patient department of the Mountinside Hospital in Montclair. He is a member of the Passaic County Medical Society, the Essex County Medical Society, and the New York Academy of Medicine. He is also a member of the Montclair Club, the Montclair Camera Club, the Montclair Athletic Club, and the New York Yale Club. He is president of the Alumni Association of the Montclair high school. He is a trustee of St. Mary's church. Dr. Synnott was married January 5, 1898, to Miss Jane Agnew, of Paterson, New Jersey, and two children, Jane Marie and Paul Agnew, have been born to them.

ALBERT PITTIS, M. D.—1893.

Dr. Albert Pittis was born March 13, 1873, in Plainfield, New Jersey, and is the second son of Thomas Hearn and Henrietta (Collins) Pittis. The former, who is now deceased, was a native of New York city, where he was engaged in the East India trade. He was a son of Thomas and Eleanor (Hearn) Pittis, the former being a cousin of Sir Francis Pittis, knight, of Newport, Isle of Wight, where the family settled in the year 1555. The Rev. Thomas Pittis, M. A., D. D., of Niton, Isle of Wight, was chaplain in ordinary to King Charles the Second. The arms of the Pittis (as the name was originally spelled) families, as given in Berry's "General Heraldry," are: "Ermine, a chevron gules between three peacocks' heads, erased azure, beaked or. Crest: A swan's neck argent, and wings expanded gules, between two branches vert, holding in the beak a trefoil slipped or." The mother of Dr. Pittis, Henrietta Collins, was a daughter of the late Rev. William F. Collins, of the Eastern Methodist Episcopal conference.

Up to the age of twelve years Dr. Pittis was educated under the personal supervision of a governess, after which he was a student for five years at the Leal's School for Boys of Plainfield, New Jersey. He passed the entrance examination to the Columbia College School of Mines, but did not enter upon the course of study, subsequently matriculating in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, which he entered in 1890, and from which he received, on the 13th of June, 1893, the degree of Doctor of Medicine. For one year he served as interne in the Gouverneur Hospital, Gouverneur Slip, New York city, and for two and one-half years acted as surgeon to the out-patient department of the Roosevelt Hospital, attending, in the meantime, for one year, the evening sessions of the New York Law School. On July 7, 1897, Dr. Pittis began practice at his present address in Plainfield, New Jersey, where he has since remained. He is clinical assistant to the Muhlenberg Hospital of Plainfield.

Dr. Pittis is a member of the Plainfield Medical Society and the Union County Medical Association. He affiliates with Anchor Lodge No. 149, F. & A. M., of Plainfield, and belongs to the Park Club of that city. Shooting and fishing are his favorite recreations. He is a member of Grace Protestant Episcopal church at Plainfield. He is unmarried. He has eight brothers and one sister, as follows: Thomas Pittis, M. D., 1894, Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia; Godfrey Pittis, M. D., 1896, Dartmouth Medical College; Harold Pittis, M. D., 1901, McGill University, Montreal; Bertram Pittis, LL. B., 1899, New York Law School; William Pittis, Sergeant United States Signal Corps; Frederick Pittis, Claude Pittis, deceased; Cecil Pittis, Grace Constance Iseult Pittis.

STAATS VAN DEURSEN CLARK, M. D.—1870.

Dr. Staats Van Deursen Clark, general practitioner of New Brunswick, New Jersey, was born in that town April 3, 1847. His grandparents were George and Ellen (Schuyler) Clark, the former being a son of a Scotchman, who was one of the early settlers of New Jersey, and the latter was a member of the well known Schuyler family, which makes Dr. Clark, in a greater or less degree, related to many of the leading Dutch families of the country. Ira C. Clark, father of Dr. Clark, was a prominent business man of New Brunswick, New Jersey, being engaged for many years in the lumber trade. He was united in marriage to Miss Joanna Van Deursen, daughter of the late Staats Van Deursen, and sister of the late Dr. William Van Deursen, who was born in New Brunswick, where he practiced his profession for many years and was one of the first resident physicians of the New York Hospital. Staats Van Deursen was a civil engineer and one of the active men of his day: he was one of the leading members of the Dutch church and a trustee of Rutgers College.

Dr. Clark prepared for college in the Peekskill (New York) Military Institute, and his father's death occurring just at that time, it was necessary for him to immediately enter the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he graduated in 1870 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. His medical studies were pursued under the direction of Dr. H. R. Baldwin, of New Brunswick, one of the most eminent and skillful surgeons in the state of New Jersey. Shortly after his graduation Dr. Clark located in Perth Amboy, New Jersey, where his practice covered all departments of general medicine, in which he has proved eminently successful. He remained there until 1875, when he removed to New Brunswick, and within a short time he had established a large and select patronage, which has continued for over a quarter of a century. He has been a member of the staff of the John Wells Memorial Hospital since its organization, and in addition to these various duties is the author of a number of scientific papers which have been presented before the medical societies. Outside of his professional interests Dr. Clark is the owner of a fine farm, to which he devotes much time and attention; it is well stocked with fine cattle and horses.

Dr. Clark is a member of the Middlesex County District Medical Society and the New Jersey State Medical Society. He was formerly a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and at the present time (1902) is a member and acts in the capacity of medical examiner for the Junior Order of United American Mechanics. Politically he is a Republican, and is actively interested in the welfare and success of that party. He has held the positions of city physician, inspector of health, member of the board of health, and freeholder. On June 14, 1870, Dr. Clark was united in marriage to Miss Anna M. Tanner, daughter of Frederick Tanner, of Tanners, New Jersey, and granddaughter of General Morgan. Two children have been born to them: Arthur Morgan, who left Rutgers College in his sophomore year and is now an attorney at law in Perth Amboy, New Jersey; and Willard P., who was graduated from Rutgers College and pursued a course of reading in law in the office of Judge Rice; he is now a member of the board of aldermen of New Brunswick, being the youngest man ever to hold the office in that city.

JAMES L. NEW, M. D.—1892.

Dr. James L. New was born in the city where he now maintains his home, on the 29th of December, 1870, being the son of James L. and Eliza M. (Gibson) New, the former of whom was born in Newtown, Long Island, and the latter on Ward's Island, where her father, Alexander Gibson, who was of Scotch lineage, was for many years identified with the fishing industry. The paternal grandfather of Dr. New was James L. New, who was born and reared in England, and after his marriage emigrated to the United States and located at Greenpoint, Long Island, and in this locality made his home until 1857, when he went to California by way of the Isthmus of Panama; he remained there until 1876, when he removed to Montana and there became a prominent ranchman. He is now located in Long Island City. The father of Dr. New has been for many years engaged in the grocery business at Hunters Point, where he still maintains his home.

Dr. New, who is the eldest of the four living children of James L. and Eliza M. New, secured his early educational discipline in the public schools of Greenpoint and Brooklyn, being graduated in the latter city in 1886. He then became a student in the Fort Edward Institute, at Fort Edward, New York, where he was graduated as a member of the class of 1887. For some time thereafter he was associated with his father in business, but he had determined to adopt the medical profession as his vocation, and finally began his technical reading under the preceptorship of Dr. W. J. Burnett. After this course of preliminary study Dr. New entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons, where he was graduated with the degree of Doctor of Medicine in June, 1892. By competitive examination he was appointed assistant physician at the Charity Hospital on Blackwell's Island, retaining this incumbency one year, after which he was for seven months assistant physician at the New York Lying-in Hospital. He then went to Montana for a period of rest and recuperation, but devoted considerable attention to the practice of his profession while there; he is a member of the Montana State Medical Association. In 1894 he returned to the east and located in Antrim,

James L. New

Tioga county, Pennsylvania, where he was employed by the Fallbrook Coal Company as resident physician until the following year, when he resigned his position and located in Long Island City, where he has succeeded in attaining a noteworthy precedence as an able and successful practitioner of medicine and surgery.

Dr. New is a member of the Queens-Nassau Medical Society and keeps in close touch with all that pertains to his profession, while he is known as a progressive and public-spirited citizen. He is medical examiner for prominent insurance companies and has attained high standing in his profession, to which he is devoted and in which he has been a zealous and self-sacrificing worker. He is a Republican in politics, and his religious faith is indicated by his membership in Grace Methodist Episcopal church. He was married August 29, 1900, to Isabel L. Wright, of Flushing, Long Island.

BENJAMIN VAN DOREN HEDGES, A. M., M. D.—1891.

Benjamin van Doren Hedges, M. D., of Plainfield, New Jersey, is a descendant on the paternal side from an old English family that settled on Long Island about 1660. The family is noted on account of so many of its members having chosen the medical profession. Dr. Hedges' great-great-grandfather, whose name was Joseph Hedges, was a physician; the great-grandfather was also Dr. Joseph Hedges; the grandfather was William Woodhull Hedges, M. D.; and the father was Dr. Smith English Hedges. The last named graduated from the University of New York and later attended the College of Physicians and Surgeons, from which he was graduated in 1853. He then located in Chester, New Jersey, where he soon built up a large practice, and where he remained all his life. His wife was Miss Ann van Doren of New Germantown, New Jersey.

Dr. Benjamin van Doren Hedges was born in Chester, New Jersey, May 19, 1866. He attended the public schools of his native town, and subsequently entered Princeton University, from which he was graduated in 1888 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts; three years later the same institution conferred on him the degree of Master of Arts, and it was also the year in which he completed the course at the College of Physicians and Surgeons. He has made a specialty of diseases of children, and is the author of a number of papers on infant feeding, treatment of diphtheria and general pediatrics. He located in Plainfield, New Jersey, where he has devoted himself to a general practice, being associated with his brother, Ellis W. Hedges, M. D., a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania. For two years Dr. Hedges was connected with the medical staff of the Presbyterian Hospital of New York and for one year with the New York Foundling Hospital. For four years he was the pathologist and bacteriologist in the Muhlenburg Hospital of Plainfield, and is now acting in the capacity of attending surgeon to the same institution. In addition to these various duties he is a member and acts as secretary of the Plainfield board of health.

Dr. Hedges is a member of the Union County District Medical Society, the Plainfield Clinical Society, the Plainfield Medical Society, the American Medical Association, the Alumni Association of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, and the Alumni Association of the Presbyterian Hospital at New York. Fraternally he is a member of the Royal Arcanum, and socially belongs to the Princeton and University clubs of New York. He is an enthusiastic golfer and takes an active interest in the Hillside Golf Club, of which he is a member. In his political affiliations he is a Republican, and in his religious views is a Presbyterian, being a member of the Crescent Avenue church of Plainfield.

FREDERICK BRADLEY DOWNS, M. D.—1878.

Dr. Frederick B. Downs is a descendant of an old New England ancestry antedating the Revolutionary war, in which many of its members participated. Bradley Downs, paternal grandfather of Dr. Downs, in whose honor Frederick Bradley received his name, was the captain of a company of men during the Revolutionary war, and he supported the company at his own expense; later he was reimbursed with continental scrip, paper and money, which Congress subsequently voted to redeem but never fulfilled its promise. Dr. Frederick B. Downs was the son of George and Flora. (Crowfut) Downs, and was born January 3, 1856, at Danbury, Connecticut.

The early educational advantages enjoyed by Dr. Downs were obtained in the Moores Mills Institute, Poughkeepsie, New York, after which he pursued the regular course of medical study in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he received his degree of Doctor of Medicine in the class of 1878. He was immediately appointed assistant physician to the New York Hospital, where he remained until 1880, when he entered upon active practice in Bridgeport, Connecticut, which he has continued up to the present time. He conducts a general practice, but is deeply interested in orthopedic surgery, serving in the capacity of attending orthopedic surgeon to the Bridgeport Hospital, and he has also written a number of valuable articles on the subject. Dr. Downs has been the medical examiner for the coroner of the city of Bridgeport ever since the office was created some fifteen years ago. He is a prominent member of the State Medical Society, and the County and City Medical Society; socially he affiliates with the Algonquin Club, the Brooklyn Golf Club, the Outing Club of Bridgeport and the Lotus Club of New York.

EDWARD HAMILTON PERSHING, B. S., M. D.—1892.

Dr. Edward H. Pershing, of Lawrence, Nassau county, New York, was born in Johnstown, Pennsylvania, January 23, 1865, where he resided until he attained the age of eight years. His primary education was acquired in the public schools of Pottsville, Pennsylvania, where he secured a good fundamental knowledge which well qualified him to enter Princeton University, and after pursuing the regular course there he was graduated in the class of 1886 with the degree of Bachelor of Science. The following three years were spent in the occupation of teaching school at Englewood, New Jersey.

and while engaged in this vocation he conceived the idea of becoming a member of the medical profession. He then commenced the reading of medicine with Dr. A. H. Halberstadt, of Pottsville, Pennsylvania, as preceptor, and in 1889 matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which institution he was graduated in 1892.

Immediately after receiving his degree of Doctor of Medicine, Dr. Pershing was appointed to serve an internship in the surgical side of the Presbyterian Hospital of New York; after remaining in this capacity for two years he entered upon the active practice of his profession in Lawrence, Long Island, where he has since conducted an increasing practice, which has come to him as the result of acknowledged skill and ability, and he has the well deserved confidence and esteem of the people among whom he has labored. In addition to his extensive private practice, he acts in the capacity of visiting surgeon to the Nassau Hospital at Hempstead, Long Island. Dr. Pershing is admirably adapted both by natural gifts and training for a successful professional career, and he keeps well informed upon the latest discoveries in the science of medicine.

DAVID POST JACKSON, M. D.—1865.

David Post Jackson, M. D., son of Thomas and Fannie M. (Post) Jackson, was born in Montrose, Pennsylvania, November 10, 1841. His father, Thomas Jackson, was born and educated in Pennsylvania, graduating from the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania in 1832. For ten years he practiced in Montrose, with the exception of three years which he spent in Mississippi. In 1842 he came to Binghamton with his wife and child David, and soon acquired a medical practice which terminated only with his death. Professionally, his opinions had great weight, and his manner impressed one instinctively with a feeling of confidence in his skill and judgment. He was at one time president of the Broome County Medical Society, and one of the founders of the Binghamton Academy of Medicine.

Nathan Jackson, father of Thomas Jackson, was also a physician, and settled in the Wyoming valley shortly after the Wyoming massacre of 1778. This part of the country was just recovering from the devastation consequent upon its invasion by the Tories and their Indian allies under Butler, and was in a most primitive state at that time. Whenever he wished to replenish his medical supplies, he was forced to make a journey on horseback across country to Philadelphia, as that was the only mode of conveyance at that time, and Philadelphia the nearest place accessible.

Brought to Binghamton, New York, by his father when only a year old, David Post Jackson has naturally grown up with the feeling that his interests are centered there. Through his boyhood he attended the Binghamton Academy, the Susquehanna Seminary and Hobart College, but did not graduate from the latter. His choice of a profession seemed almost decided for him by the natural aptitude which he showed for medical study. He entered upon a systematic course of training under the personal supervision of his father, afterwards studying with Dr. Willard Parker of New York. Then he entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, and graduated in 1865. Instead of commencing his medical practice at a distance from his early home, he established himself at Binghamton and began a career of usefulness. As the son of a popular physician he at once fell heir to the general esteem and confidence of the community.

Dr. Jackson is a member and ex-president of the Broome County Medical Society and a fellow of the Binghamton Academy of Medicine. He has been connected with the board of health of the city, and was coroner of Broome county for one term. He was at one time member of the board of pension examiners and for twenty-seven years was medical examiner of the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York city and the Travellers Life and Accident Insurance Company of Hartford, Connecticut.

In 1863 he married Miss Mary McKean, a daughter of Admiral McKean of the United States navy. She died in 1864. His second wife was Miss Elizabeth Maidment, of New York city, and the marriage took place in 1876. By this union there was one daughter, Clara F., who died aged five years.

HENRY FREDERICK EICHACKER, M. D.—1890.

Dr. Henry Frederick Eichacker, an experienced physician of Brooklyn, New York, was born March 22, 1858, in Mahlstadt, Prussia, and received his primary education in the gymnasium of Saarbrücken. After completing his studies, in compliance with the law of conscription which prevails in the fatherland, he served for some time in the First Guard regiment at Potsdam in the German army. This is the elite regiment of the German army, always has the Emperor for its chief and all imperial princes receive their first military education in that regiment; the present Emperor held at that time the commission of first lieutenant. At the conclusion of his period of military service he came, in 1881, to the United States.

Dr. Eichacker's first intention on landing in this country was to make himself master of the drug business, and with this end in view he became a student at the New York College of Pharmacy, from which he graduated in the class of 1887. The knowledge of medicine and the acquaintance with the medical profession which he acquired while pursuing his studies in pharmacy led him ultimately to adopt that profession for his own. His period of preparation was passed under the direction of Dr. Henry Meyer, and subsequently under that of Dr. Thomas Hillis, and on its termination he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he graduated in the class of 1890.

He entered at once upon the active practice of his calling in New York city, in 1895 removed to Setauket, Long Island, and in the following year came to Brooklyn, where he has since remained. In the different places in which Dr. Eichacker has practiced his profession he has established the reputation of an able, learned and scientific physician, faithful to every duty of his calling, and animated by a spirit of progress and enlightenment. He is in the enjoyment of a large and profitable practice, and is no less esteemed as a citizen than as a physician.

Henry J. Echaatz M.D.

JOHN HAMMOND BRADSHAW, M. D.—1884.

Dr. John Hammond Bradshaw, of Orange, New Jersey, a general practitioner of long standing, and actively interested in the Orange Memorial Hospital, is a native of Boston, Massachusetts, and was born October 6, 1860. His parents were Franklin E. and Ann Louisa (Hammond) Bradshaw. The father was related on the maternal side to Benjamin Franklin, and the mother was the granddaughter of Thomas Hammond, of Vermont.

John H. Bradshaw made most excellent preparation for his professional studies. He began his education in private schools in Orange, and then passed four years in Ripon College, at Ripon, Wisconsin. In 1880 he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York city; he was graduated from that institution in 1884, taking the Harsen prize. He afterward took a course in the Polyclinic Post-Graduate School. In October 1884, he located in Orange, New Jersey, and engaged in the general practice which now claims his attention, and which for many years past has been gratifyingly large and useful. A fine tribute to his ample professional knowledge was paid him in the year that he began his practice, when he was called to the position of house physician to the Orange Memorial Hospital. He served acceptably in that position until 1888, when he became attending surgeon to the same institution, and has served in that capacity to the present time.

He is a member of various leading professional societies, the Essex District Medical Society, the Orange Mountain Medical Society, of which he has been president; the William Pierson Medical Library Association, of which he is treasurer; the Society for the Relief of the Widows and Orphans of the Medical Men of New Jersey, the New Jersey State Medical Society, and the American Medical Association; also of the New England Society of Orange, and of the Orange Camera Club. Dr. Bradshaw was married September 3, 1894, to Miss Lena Swazey, a daughter of Dr. Isaac Swazey, formerly of Yonkers, New York. A son, John Hammond, Jr., was born of this marriage, October 21, 1900.

DOUGLAS AYMAR CATER, M. D.—1896.

Douglas Aymar Cater, M. D., was born on Staten Island, August 26, 1869. His father was Aymar Cater, second son of John White Cater, of London, England, and was in business at the time of his death with the firm of Aymar & Company, tea merchants of New York city. His mother, Mary Cater, was the eldest daughter of Jeremiah Leaycraft, a well known commission merchant of New York city, doing business for many years at 140 Pearl street, with the West Indies and South America.

Douglas Aymar Cater was educated at Miss DuVernet's private school in New York city, Cornwall Heights School in Cornwall-on-the-Hudson, Gramercy Park School, New York city, and was graduated from the mechanical department of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1892, with the degree of Bachelor of Science.

He was engaged in engineering for a short time, but abandoned that profession to take up the study of medicine. After his graduation from the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Columbia, in 1896, he secured an appointment on the house staff of the New York Post-Graduate Hospital, and spent two years there, passing through the several grades of interne. In January, 1899, he settled in East Orange, New Jersey, and became associated in the practice of his profession with Dr. John H. Bradshaw, of Orange. He has been connected with the Dispensary of the Orange Memorial Hospital since 1899, and is a member of the Essex County District Medical Society, New Jersey State Medical Society, Orange Practitioners' Club, the William Pierson Medical Library Association, the Civics Club of Orange, and the Alumni Association of the Post-Graduate Hospital of New York. On June 29, 1899, Dr. Cater married Miss Meriel W. Hutchins, of Boston. Two children have been born to them: Berkeley Aymar and Mary Reed Cater.

DAVID LITTLE, M. D.—1857.

Dr. David Little, for over forty years actively engaged in the practice of medicine and surgery in the city of Rochester, New York, was born in Cherry Valley, Otsego county, New York, February 9, 1834, the son of David H. and Julia (Seelye) Little. He was reared to manhood in his native county, where his elementary education was acquired in the common schools, and he was prepared to enter Union College, where after pursuing the regular course of study he was graduated in the class of 1855. Being desirous of entering the medical profession, he began his preparatory studies under the efficient preceptorship of Dr. Willard Parker, one of the eminent physicians and surgeons of New York, after which he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which institution he secured his degree of Doctor of Medicine in the class of 1857. He was then appointed to the position of interne in Bellevue Hospital, and after serving the usual term of eighteen months he entered upon the active practice of his profession in Rochester, where, with the exception of two years, he has continued ever since.

At the outbreak of the Civil war Dr. Little enlisted with the Thirteenth New York Volunteer Infantry, and for two years faithfully performed the duties of a soldier in defense of his country. After being honorably discharged from the service of the United States, Dr. Little again resumed his practice in Rochester, where he soon became widely recognized as a distinguished physician, his marked ability gaining for him a large and select patronage, which he enjoys up to the present time (1902). For thirty years Dr. Little was actively connected with the City Hospital of Rochester, and at the present time is acting in the capacity of consulting surgeon of the same institution. He has also been one of the United States pension examiners of the district since 1870, having served all that time with the exception of one term. Dr. Little is a member of the Monroe County Medical Society, the Rochester Pathological Society, and the Medical Society of the State of New York. In 1865 Dr. Little was united in marriage to Miss Catherine Livingston, who was born in Indianapolis, Indiana, and five children have been born to them, four sons and one daughter.

Seelye W. Little, son of Dr. David and Catherine Little, was born in Rochester, New York, March 10, 1867, and the education necessary for his admission to Union College was secured in the common schools of his native city. After his graduation from Union College in 1888, he began the study of medicine under the competent preceptorship of his father, and subsequently matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which he was graduated in the class of 1891. He then passed an internship of eighteen months in the Rochester City Hospital, after which he established an office in Rochester, and by proving his professional ability and skill soon built up a large and constantly increasing patronage. Although he is one of the younger members of the medical profession in the city of Rochester, yet he occupies a high position and is regarded as an eminent and efficient practitioner. He is an assistant to the staff of the Rochester City Hospital and a prominent member of the Monroe County Medical Society, Rochester Pathological Society, and the Hospital Medical Society. In 1901 Dr. Little was united in marriage to Miss Mary Dodds, who was born in Cincinnati, Ohio.

LEROY DWIGHT FARNHAM, M. D.—1878.

Dr. LeRoy Dwight Farnham, son of Enos S. and Clarissa V. (Dwight) Farnham, was born in Tioga county, New York, July 24, 1850. During his boyhood he lived at Dryden, New York, and attended the Dryden Academy, afterwards taking a course at the Owego Academy, where he prepared for the Oswego State Normal School. In 1872 he was graduated from the classical department of the normal school, and at once took up the profession of teaching. For five years he was principal of the Candor Free Academy. At this time he decided to become a student again, and after a special course of reading with Dr. George W. Metcalf, of Owego, he took the regular course of medical instruction at the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York, and graduated in 1878.

He began the work of a general practitioner in Candor, New York, remaining there about six years. In 1884 he took a post-graduate course in New York, and soon after this went abroad. For two years he pursued his medical studies in Berlin and Vienna, obtaining all the experience afforded by the finest hospitals in Europe. He was fortunate in securing instruction from some of the most noted German specialists of the day, and the knowledge he gained was of that solid and enduring nature that German instructors know so well how to impart. Returning to America in 1886, after completing the special course he had undertaken, he settled in Binghamton, New York, and rapidly acquired a large practice, which he has retained up to the present time. He is a leading physician of this part of the state, and is often consulted in important cases.

Dr. Farnham is a member of the Broome County Medical Association, the Binghamton Academy of Medicine, the Medical Association of New York, and Broome County Medical Society. He was a member of the Tenth International Medical Congress at Berlin, in 1890. In 1878 he married Miss Cora P. Thompson, of Candor, New York, and they have one son, Dwight T., now a junior in Yale University.

THOMAS DE WITT PINCKNEY, M. D.—1888.

Dr. Thomas De Witt Pinckney, for many years a successful physician and surgeon of Williams Bridge, New York, was born in Putnam county, New York, March 9, 1856. His preliminary education was acquired in the common schools of his native town and this was supplemented by a course of study at the Albany Normal College, from which he was graduated in the class of 1875. For several years after his graduation he was engaged in the occupation of teaching school, being well qualified for that vocation both by natural aptitude and excellent preparation; four years of that time was passed in Charleston, South Carolina, where he filled the responsible position of instructor in physics and chemistry. Having decided to become a medical practitioner, he pursued a course of study in medicine and surgery under the tuition of Dr. Purdy L. Hitchcock, of Croton Falls, New York, and matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, and received his degree of Doctor of Medicine from that institution in the year 1888.

He entered upon the active practice of his profession in Pasadena, California, and for the two years that he remained there conducted a practice that was steadily increasing. Subsequently he returned to Westchester county and settled in Williams Bridge, where his career affords a most interesting example of the achievements of one who is regarded as a worthy representative of the medical profession. In addition to the duties of his private practice he holds the position of sanitary inspector in the health department of Greater New York, in the borough of Bronx. He is a prominent member of the Westchester Medical Association. Dr. Pinckney recognizes the fact that continual progress is being made by the medical fraternity and that he must pursue his studies energetically in order to keep in touch with the onward movement.

CHARLES OLIVER SAHLER, M. D.—1878.

Dr. Charles Oliver Sahler, of Kingston, New York, is a descendant of Abraham von Sahler, who came to this country in 1736 from Saxony, where his immediate family were in the diplomatic service, and his ancestry one of the oldest in Saxon nobility; having participated in the great German tournaments of the Tenth century.

In tracing the genealogy of Dr. Sahler, we find some facts which are of rare interest, and although genealogy is usually of but little import, save to those who are in the line of descendants, we believe these items will be of interest to our readers, especially those who know Dr. Sahler personally, as they cannot fail to see in him the symmetrical combination of those characteristics which we find in his ancestry. In the genealogy we find some of his ancestors among the Normans who in the tenth century went to England with William the Conqueror, and later some participated in the crusades. Coming back to American ancestry, we find the same spirit of patriotism showing itself in active service, in both the first and second Esopus war of Ulster county, New York, and also in the Revolutionary war of 1776:

C. V. Tuhler

Solomon Sahler, whose antecedents were large land and slave owners until New York state manumitted her slaves in 1826, and Mrs. Caroline Winfield Sahler, of noble English ancestry, are the parents of the subject of this biography.

Dr. Sahler was born June 23, 1854, at Ulster Park, in the town of Esopus. When but a few months old his parents made their home on a farm, with its old Dutch stone mansion, which was formerly his grandfather's home, in Kyserike, in the Rondout valley. His elementary education was acquired in the district school, where it was his good fortune to have a teacher of wide experience, John H. Van Wagenen, formerly principal of the Pennsylvania State Normal School. At the age of fourteen young Sahler decided to study medicine, and was aided and inspired in this decision by their family physician under whose supervision he began his work.

In order to obtain funds for his college education he commenced teaching school at the age of seventeen and continued this work until twenty years old. He then entered the medical department of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, and after taking the usual three years' course graduated with the degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1878. He began the practice of medicine in Kyserike, where, his ability as a physician being quickly recognized, he soon had a large and lucrative practice.

In 1880 he married Miss Jennie, daughter of James and Sarah Alliger Sahler. Their home is brightened by the presence of a beautiful daughter. After thirteen years of experience in medical work Dr. Sahler formed a co-partnership with a neighboring physician, opening an office in Kingston, one of the most historic cities in the United States. This co-partnership lasted but two years. The following year Dr. Sahler purchased a beautiful, spacious mansion with ample grounds in the outskirts of the city, and converted it into a sanitarium for the treatment of nervous diseases. It was about this time that he began to devote much time and thought to psycho-therapy. After attending a lecture given by Dr. Pratt, the noted official surgeon of Chicago, Dr. Sahler decided to introduce the subject to the home physicians. This was done at a meeting of the Kingston City Medical Association.

During the last few years Dr. Sahler's fame and skill in this branch of therapeutics have spread in all directions. There are several prominent American physicians who are exponents of psycho-therapy, but this sanitarium is unique in its remedial methods, it being the only one in the United States where psycho-therapy is principally used. The sanitarium, although twice enlarged, is inadequate to contain the number of patients, and several cottages are required for the overflow. Many of the patients are sent to Dr. Sahler by their family physicians, and hundreds of these bear grateful testimony to not only their physical, but their spiritual healing as well.

In Dr. Sahler we find that rare combination of masculine power and feminine tenderness which, though so rare, is, nevertheless, the great essential in the character of the ideal physician. A man of keen perception and of exceptional self-poise, the alertness of whose brain is equalled only by the greatness of his heart, actuated by the spirit of true philanthropy, thoroughly equipped for the work of his profession, it is not difficult to see in such a combination of characteristics the secret of his success; or to know why he so soon secures and so permanently holds the love and confidence of his patients.

Although so absorbed in professional work as to have time for little else, still we find his name among contributors to several magazines. And he has just given to the public a valuable work, "Psychic Life and Laws," a book of value to both physicians and the laity. In this work he clearly shows the power of mind over matter, and as clearly points out the harmony existing in the triune nature of man, when he lives in accord with God's laws. The book cannot fail to prove a boon to humanity, awakening in dormant minds a new consciousness of what it means to be. Dr. Sahler is an exception to the New Testament statement, "a prophet is not without honor save in his own country," for where he is best known he is most loved and honored.

FREDERIC CHAUNCEY PAFFARD, M. D.—1896.

Dr. Frederic Chauncey Paffard, of Brooklyn, New York, who, although not yet in the prime of life, has already made for himself an honorable place in the ranks of the profession, was born in the city of which he is now a resident, on June 21, 1876. He was educated in the Polytechnic Institute, and, having decided early in life to devote himself to the practice of medicine, matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, graduating in the class of 1896. He then served for eighteen months as interne in the Gouverneur Hospital, New York, and for six months in the Seton Hospital. Being fully equipped, by the experience thus gained, for the active practice of his profession, Dr. Paffard established himself in his native city, where he is recognized by a large circle of patrons as well as by his professional brethren as a skillful and progressive physician. He holds the place of assistant visiting surgeon on the staff of St. Peter's Hospital.

Dr. Paffard is a member of the Kings County Medical Society, the Kings County Medical Association, the Brooklyn Surgical Society, the Brooklyn Pathological Society, the Society of Physicians of Greater New York, and the Gouverneur Hospital Alumni Association.

MATTHEW DERBYSHIRE MANN, M. D.—1871.

Dr. Matthew Derbyshire Mann, of Buffalo, New York, is descended from an old New England family, and on his mother's side directly from old English stock. He was born July 12, 1845, in Utica, Oneida county, New York, and is the son of Charles A. and Emma (Bagg) Mann, the former a prominent lawyer of Utica. Dr. Mann was educated in the common schools of his native city until he reached the age of sixteen, when he went abroad, spending nearly two years in Europe under the care of a private tutor. Returning in 1863 he entered Yale University, graduating in the class of 1867 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts, and receiving in 1871 the degree of Master of Arts.

After a few months spent in western travel, he decided to devote himself to the practice of medicine and began his preparation in the office of his uncle, Dr. M. M. Bagg, of Utica, New York. He attended his first course of lectures in the spring of 1868 in the Long Island Hospital Medical College, and then matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he graduated in the class of 1871. This class is notable in the annals of the college for the large number of its members who have attained distinction in their chosen calling. The thesis presented by Dr. Mann on the occasion of his graduation received honorable mention. While still in college he had served on the first staff of the new Stranger Hospital as interne, and during his connection with this institution he was brought under the influence of Dr. T. G. Thomas, a fact which, no doubt, had a large share in determining his future career. He remained in the hospital for one year, and after graduating went to Europe, where he studied for a time in Paris and London, spending several months with Simon and Arnold in Heidelberg, and seven months in Vienna, studying obstetrics under Carl Braun, and pathology under Kundrat. He also traveled extensively, visiting not only Germany, Switzerland, and Italy, but passing some time in Constantinople and the east.

In 1873 he returned to New York, where he entered upon the active practice of his profession, soon receiving several dispensary appointments, and also being made examiner in materia medica in Columbia College, which position he held for five years. In this institution he was also appointed lecturer on clinical microscopy, and later on gynecology. After a residence of six years in New York, during which he devoted himself largely to the study of pathology and gynecology, he removed in 1879 to Hartford, Connecticut, where he devoted himself solely to the diseases of women. In 1880 he was appointed clinical lecturer on gynecology in the medical department of Yale College, which position he held for two years. In 1882, on the death of Dr. James P. White, he was called to the chair of obstetrics and gynecology in the medical department of the University of Buffalo, being also appointed gynecologist to the Buffalo General Hospital, and later obstetrician to the same institution. In 1888 he was chosen dean of the medical faculty, a position he has held ever since. Since taking up his residence in Buffalo, Dr. Mann has limited himself in his practice to gynecology, abdominal surgery and consultation in obstetrics. In abdominal surgery he has performed over two thousand operations.

On September 6, 1901, when President McKinley was shot at the Temple of Music at the Pan-American Exposition, Dr. Mann was one of the physicians immediately summoned, and it was he who, when it was found that a surgical operation would be necessary, was unanimously selected for the performance of this duty. To the skilful, efficient and conscientious manner in which he fulfilled this extremely difficult and onerous task, all the physicians associated with him bore ample testimony. In his remarks on the operation, published soon after the death of the President, Dr. Mann gave a very full and clear account of the operation, and paid a deserved tribute to the skill and devotion of those who had assisted him.

Dr. Mann is the author of several valuable contributions to medical literature. His paper, published in 1874, on "The Immediate Treatment of Rupture of the Perineum," was, perhaps, the first publication on this subject in this country. He has been a frequent contributor to medical periodicals, and is the author of a "Manual of Prescription Writing," which has met with a very favorable reception. Dr. Mann has also edited the "American System of Gynecology," in two volumes, which ranks as his principal literary work. He has also originated several gynecological operations, some of which have been generally adopted.

While in New York, Dr. Mann was an active member of the New York Academy of Medicine and of the New York Obstetrical Society, in which he filled the offices of secretary and pathologist. He is also an active member of the American Gynecological Society, having been elected president in 1895, to the Transactions of which he has contributed many papers. He has also been president of the Buffalo Academy of Medicine.

Outside of professional affairs, Dr. Mann has greatly interested himself in other matters. He is one of the directors of the Buffalo Academy of Fine Arts; has been very prominent in the organization and management of St. Margaret's School, and was at one time one of the park commissioners of the city of Buffalo. He is also a member and has served as president of other societies, such as the Society for Beautifying Buffalo and the Laymen's Missionary League. In a word, Dr. Mann occupies himself with all questions pertaining to the public welfare, education, religion and art. Dr. Mann married, in 1869, Miss Elizabeth Pope, of St. Paul, Minnesota. Their family consists of seven children.

JOHN ORLANDO ROE, M. D.—1871.

Dr. John O. Roe, a specialist in diseases of the nose and throat, was born in Patchogue, Suffolk county, New York, February 3, 1848, the son of Stephen S. and Huldah S. (Randall) Roe, whose ancestors were of English origin. They were among the early settlers of the county, and took an active part in the Revolutionary war. Dr. Roe first attended the public schools of his native town, after which he was a student in the Hudson River Institute, the Wilbraham Academy of Massachusetts, and the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor. Deciding to take up a profession, he began the study of medicine under the guidance of Dr. Oliver Rice, of Patchogue, and later entered the medical department of the University of Michigan, from which he was graduated with the degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1870. He then matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which institution he received his diploma in the class of 1871, having received a prize for his graduation thesis. This class has been prominent for the number of graduates that have attained both national and international reputation.

After taking post-graduate courses in New York, Dr. Roe, in 1872, entered upon the active practice of his profession in Rochester, New York, devoting special attention to diseases of the nose and throat. He had a natural preference and aptitude for this branch of the profession, to which he gave special study, having been a private student of Dr. Antoine Ruppner of New York. After pursuing his practice for a short time Dr. Roe went abroad and continued his studies in Vienna, Berlin and London, in London being under the personal supervision of the late Sir Morill Mackenzie. After his return Dr. Roe resumed his practice in Rochester, devoting himself entirely to diseases of the nose and throat, in which department he has gained an enviable prominence.

Dr. Roe stands as a representative of the more advanced knowledge concerning the science of medicine and surgery, and his investigations have been carried out along original lines. His contributions to medical literature, and particularly that pertaining to his department, have been numerous and valuable. He is a member of the New York Academy of Medicine, the American Climatological Association, the American Laryngological, Rhinological and Otological Society, and is the president of the Rochester Academy of Medicine. He is also an ex-president of the American Laryngological Association, of the Medical Society of the State of New York, of the Central New York Medical Association, of the Monroe County Medical Society, and was chairman of the section of Laryngology and Otology of the American Medical Association in 1890. He was a member of the Seventh International Medical Congress, London, England, of the Eighth International Medical Congress, Copenhagen, of the Ninth International Medical Congress, Washington, D. C., of the Tenth International Medical Congress, Berlin, Germany, and of the Pan-American Congress, Washington. He is a corresponding member of the Société Française D'Otologie, de Laryngologie, et de Rhinologie, and a member of the British Medical Association, his name being proposed for membership in the latter society by the late Sir Morill Mackenzie, his former preceptor. Dr. Roe has devised and published many new instruments pertaining to his special line of work, and is the originator of a method for the correction of deviations of the nasal septum and of the method for "The Correction of Nasal Deformities by Subcutaneous Operations." One of his articles on the latter subject he read before the sixty-fifth annual meeting of the British Medical Association, held in Montreal, Canada, in 1897. In 1894 Dr. Roe was united in marriage to Miss Jennie Pomeroy, whose family are old and prominent residents of Troy, Pennsylvania. By this union has been born one child, a daughter, Janet Pomeroy Roe.

ARTHUR ELMORE SMYLIE, M. D.—1883.

Dr. Arthur Elmore Smylie, an able and experienced physician of Brooklyn, New York, was born in that city March 4, 1862, and received his primary education in the public schools of his native city, subsequently supplementing this elementary training by an academic course. After serious reflection Dr. Smylie formed the resolution of devoting himself for life to the practice of medicine, and with that end in view pursued a course of preparatory study under the guidance of Dr. Gideon B. Perry, after which he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which institution he graduated in the class of 1883. He then continued his studies in Europe, spending fourteen months in Heidelberg, six months in Wurzburg, Bavaria, and six months in Vienna.

After completing this exceptionally thorough preparation for his chosen calling, Dr. Smylie returned to his native land, and engaged in the practice of his profession in Brooklyn, where he is now in the enjoyment of a large and flourishing connection. He stands high in the esteem of his professional brethren, and possesses in the fullest degree the confidence of his patrons. Since 1886 Dr. Smylie has held the position of chief attending physician of the medical division of the Eastern District Hospital. He has also been surgeon to the Brooklyn Throat Hospital.

Dr. Smylie is a member of the Kings County Medical Society, and of many others; also Marsh Lodge No. 188, F. and A. M. He is active in the professional and social circles of Brooklyn, where he is deservedly popular alike as a scientific and conscientious practitioner and an honorable and public-spirited citizen.

ALEXANDER KING WINTER, M. D.—1892.

Dr. Alexander K. Winter, actively engaged for the past six years in the practice of medicine and surgery, at 740 Flushing avenue, Brooklyn, was born in Brooklyn, New York, January 27, 1869, where he acquired an excellent practical education in the public schools and in the Polytechnic Institute, after which he pursued a course in technology in Stevens Institute. He subsequently took up the study of medicine under the efficient tuition of Dr. Alpheus Freeman, of New York, and after pursuing the regular course of reading in his office he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which institution he was graduated with the degree of Doctor of Medicine in the class of 1892. He then spent an internship in the Cancer Hospital, the Hospital for Ruptured and Crippled Children, and the Providence Lying-In Hospital, in which he put to a practical test the theoretical knowledge he had obtained in the college. Dr. Winter then commenced the active practice of his profession in Brooklyn, where he soon built up a good patronage. He keeps in touch with all advances made in the science of medicine and surgery, and has achieved success in the profession of his choice.

WILLIAM COUGHLIN BRAISLIN, M. D.—1890.

Dr. William Coughlin Braislin, a long established physician of Brooklyn, New York, is descended on the paternal side from Scotch-Irish ancestry, and through his mother from a long line of English progenitors, members of the Society of Friends. He traces his descent from Samuel Jennings, the first proprietary governor of the colony of New Jersey, and a personal friend of the founder of the neighboring colony of Pennsylvania. The maternal grandmother of Dr. Braislin, Tamar Gibbs, the tradition of whose loveliness is still preserved, was a lineal descendant of this colonial ancestor. The home of the family, for many generations, was in Burlington, New Jersey. The paternal grandfather of Dr. Braislin was born in the north of Ireland, whence may be seen the coast of Scotland, the original home of the family. For twenty-two years from the founding of Vassar College, in 1865, a professor's chair in the department of mathematics was filled by Dr. Braislin's aunt, Priscilla Braislin, who for the first twelve years of her connection with the college taught chemistry as well, her proficiency in that branch of science being as great as her attainments as a mathematician. The Priscilla Braislin School at Bordentown, New Jersey, is a memorial to this gifted woman, of whom it was said that "her gifts were as much of the heart as of the intellect."

William Coughlin Braislin was born July 1, 1865, on the homestead in Burlington, New Jersey, where he received his education at the high school, afterward attending successively a school in Crosswicks and the Peddie Institute, in Hightstown, both in his native state. Later Dr. Braislin became a student at Princeton College, from which he graduated in the class of 1889, and deciding to devote himself to the practice of medicine, he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which institution he was graduated in the class of 1890. He immediately entered upon the active practice of his profession in Brooklyn, where the family name was already well known, the Rev. Edward Braislin, D. D., being then the pastor of one of the leading churches of that city, and there in the course of years Dr. Braislin has built up for himself an individual and deserved reputation.

The department of medicine to which Dr. Braislin specially devotes himself is the treatment of diseases of the ear, nose and throat. His contributions to medical literature have been numerous, consisting in part of the following named articles: "Arestol in the Treatment of Atropic Rheusta," Brooklyn Medical Journal, June, 1891; "Otitis Media Purulenta Following Amputation of the Uvula," New York Medical Journal, March 4, 1893; "On the Ethnological Characteristics of the Human Nasal Canals, Considered as an Economic Adaptation," Science, March 31, 1893; "The Rheumatic Throat, a Contribution to the Etiology of Catarrh of the Nasopharynx," New York Medical Journal, 1893; "The Degenerate Ear," editorial in the American Medical Review, September, 1896; "Ear Diseases Coexistent with Adenoids of the Nasopharynx," Brooklyn Medical Journal; "A Case of Living Larvae in the Ear Without Previous Suppuration," Archives of Otolaryngology, Vol. 25, No. 1, 1896; "Effects of Adenoids on the Ear," Brooklyn Medical Journal, July, 1900; "Empyema of Frontal Sinus," Brooklyn Medical Journal, May, 1900; "Neurosis of Ossicles," Brooklyn Medical Journal, July, 1900; "Traumatic Rupture of the Tympanic Membrane," Brooklyn Medical Journal, January, 1898; "A Tumor of the Middle Ear, Springing from the Inner and Posterior Tympanic Walls, Simulating Exostosis, but Consisting of Calcareous Laminae," Archives of Otolaryngology, Vol. 30, No. 6, December, 1901; "Indication for the Mastoid Operation," Brooklyn Medical Journal. In addition to the preparation of these articles, Dr. Braislin was for one year, 1896, editor of the American Medical Review of Reviews. He is a member of the Linnæan Society of New York, and also a member of the American Ornithologists' Union. Dr. Braislin is at present editor in chief of the Brooklyn Medical Journal.

For a number of years Dr. Braislin has filled the position of assistant surgeon in the aural department of the Brooklyn Eye and Ear Hospital, and is also aural surgeon to the Williamsburg Hospital. He is a member of the Medical Society of the County of Kings, in which he is the secretary of the section on laryngology, rhinology and otology; of the Associated Physicians of Long Island, the Long Island Medical Society, the Brooklyn Pathological Society, the New York State Medical Society, and the American Laryngological, Rhinological and Otological Society.

In politics Dr. Braislin is a Republican, and an active member of the party, holding membership in the Seventh Ward Republican Association. He is identified with the Masonic Order, affiliating with Burlington Lodge, F. and A. M., one of the oldest organizations of the order in the state of New Jersey, and is a member of DeWitt Clinton Council of the Royal Arcanum. He and his family are members of St. Luke's Protestant Episcopal church. Dr. Braislin married, October 19, 1892, Alice, daughter of the late Donald Cameron, of the clan Lochiel. Mr. Cameron's paternal grandmother was Catherine Stuart, and his maternal grandfather was a Van Batenburg, of Holland, who served as governor of the colony of Berbice, under both Dutch and English rule. Dr. and Mrs. Braislin are the parents of three children, William Donald, John Cameron, and Gordon Stuart.

HORATIO NELSON SPENCER, LL. D., M. D.—1868.

Dr. Horatio Nelson Spencer, of St. Louis, Missouri, was the sixth son of Horatio Nelson Spencer and Sarah Marshall Spencer. His mother was the daughter of Samuel Marshall, of Pine Ridge, Mississippi, sprung from a common ancestor with Chief Justice John Marshall. His father, a man of note in his day, was a graduate of Yale in the class of 1821; afterwards studied law and settled at Port Gibson, Mississippi, where for several years and until he retired to his plantation near by, he engaged in the successful practice of his profession. He was the first president of the Port Gibson and Grand Gulf Railroad Company, and at one time was president of the Port Gibson Bank.

Dr. Spencer was born July 17, 1842, at Almont, his father's country seat, near Port Gibson. He received his early education in private schools taught by the graduates of Yale College. He subsequently entered Oakland College, Mississippi, where he was graduated valedictorian of his class in 1861. In September of the same year he was admitted to the senior class of the University of Alabama, a military school, where he remained for six months; when the corps of cadets was ordered to the front as drill masters in the various camps of instruction. After two months of such service at Greenville, Alabama, he resigned his commission and enlisted as private in the Confederate ranks, Cowan's battery, Loring's division, and served in that capacity till the war was over. In 1865 he entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons and in 1868 received the degree of M. D.;

Yours truly

he had one year of general practice as physician in the Charities and Corrections Board, at the same time doing microscopic work in the private office of Dr. Alonzo Clark; he studied otology at Berlin, 1869-70. Since 1870 he has practiced at St. Louis. In 1870 he became a member of the American Otological Society; in 1879, associated with Dr. Clarence J. Blake of Boston, Dr. Buck of New York and Dr. Burnett of Philadelphia, he organized and edited the American Journal of Otology; in the same year, in association with prominent members of the local profession, he established the St. Louis Courier of Medicine. In 1881 he aided in founding a school for post-graduate work in medicine, which school was subsequently merged into the Missouri Medical College; in both of these schools he held the chair of diseases of the ear. The Missouri Medical College and the St. Louis Medical College were consolidated in 1900 and became the medical department of Washington University, Dr. Spencer retaining the chair of otology. In 1897 the board of trustees of Westminster College conferred on him the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws.

Dr. Spencer is a leader in his special practice and a recognized authority on all questions related to his special work. He has contributed to various journals and books articles directly connected with his department of medicine. He has a mind of broad general culture, and for the gratification of his versatile taste he has collected an extensive and rare library, and has imparted to his household the charm and refinement that springs from love of literature and the intellectual life. In politics he is an independent; in religious faith a Presbyterian. He is a loyal friend, a man of warm and pure affections, cheerful, generous and honorable; a gentleman of the highest integrity and purest Christian character.

Dr. Spencer is descended from the Northampton branch of the Spencer family; he is a lineal descendant of Gerard Spencer, of Haddam, Connecticut; of John Wilson, the first pastor of the first church of Boston, and of the Rev. Thomas Hooker, "the father of American democracy." He is now, and for several years has been, governor of the Society of Colonial Wars in the state of Missouri, and is a member of the Society of the Sons of the Revolution and of various historical societies.

On September 28, 1868, Dr. Spencer married Anna E. Kirtland, of New York, descended from Lieutenant William Pratt. She died November 24, 1885. Of this marriage there are five children, three daughters, all of whom are married, and two sons, both of whom are graduates of Princeton. The eldest daughter, Laura H., is the wife of B. C. Edmunds, of St. Louis; Dean married the Rev. William H. DuBose, of the University of the South, Sewanee, Tennessee; and Anna married W. Scott Hancock, of St. Louis. Selden, the elder son, an M. D. of the Missouri Medical College and a student at Edinburg, Paris and Berlin of the diseases of the ear, is associated in practice with his father. Horatio Nelson, Jr., the younger son, is in business in St. Louis. On July 6, 1887, Dr. Spencer married Elizabeth Porcher Dwight of South Carolina, a descendant of Sir Nathaniel Johnson and of Governor Broughton, colonial governors of South Carolina.

WILLIAM H. B. PRATT, M. D.—1867.

Dr. Pratt was born in Brooklyn, New York, October 16, 1842, and is a son of Henry Z. and Lucy E. (Brace) Pratt, the latter a daughter of Thomas K. Brace, the originator and first president of the Aetna Fire Insurance Company, of Hartford, Connecticut. On the paternal side Dr. Pratt is of English lineage and traces his ancestry back to the Rev. William Pratt, of Herefordshire, England. His son, John Pratt, was born in England in 1620, and after coming to the new world removed from Massachusetts to Hartford, Connecticut, in the year 1636. His son and grandson, the direct ancestors of Dr. Pratt, were also named John, and the line of descent is continued on down through William, Zachariah and Captain James Pratt, the last named the great-grandfather of our subject, and a Revolutionary hero who loyally aided the colonies in their struggle for independence. His son, Harry Pratt, married Susan Cleveland, a sister of William Cleveland, the grandfather of ex-President Cleveland. Harry Pratt passed the Psalmist's span of threescore years and ten, dying at the advanced age of seventy-five, and his wife reached the extreme old age of ninety-eight years. Their son, Henry Z. Pratt, was a book publisher in New York city, where he carried on business for a number of years. He died in 1864, at the age of fifty-one years. In his family were nine children, four of whom are living, and of these William is the eldest. The others are: Lucy, who married E. R. Kennedy, of the insurance firm of Weed & Kennedy of New York; Emily, the wife of Edward T. Owen, professor of French in the University of Wisconsin; and Susan C., who married Dr. Henry B. Favill, of Chicago, Illinois.

When he was five years of age Dr. Pratt's parents removed to Hartford, Connecticut, where he attended the public schools and continued the course through the high school. He entered Yale College, from which he was graduated in 1864 with the degree of A. B. He then entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he received the degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1867.

Dr. Pratt became interne in Bellevue Hospital, and after a service of eighteen months in that institution he went to Vienna, where he continued his medical studies for two years and a half. In 1871 he located in the section of Brooklyn in which he now lives, and engaged in the practice of his profession. He has a large general practice, and never content with mediocrity, he has so equipped himself by study, research and experience that he has long since left the ranks of the many to stand among the successful few. In 1890 he became visiting physician to the Methodist Episcopal Hospital, and since 1895 has been consulting physician to that institution. He is also a member of the Medical Society of the County of Kings, and is deeply interested in every subject that bears upon the problem of life and that will advance proficiency in his profession.

On the 28th of December, 1876, Dr. Pratt was united in marriage to Miss Mary Houghton, daughter of Albert G. Houghton, a brother of H. O. Houghton, of the well-known publishing house of Houghton, Mifflin & Company, of New York. To this union have been born four children, Albert, who is a member of the class of 1901 in Cornell University; Lucy, a student in the Packer Collegiate Institute; William, who is pursuing his education in the Polytechnic Institute; and Marilla. The doctor is past master of Orion Lodge No. 717, F. and A. M., and also belongs to the Brooklyn Riding and Driving Club and the Carleton Club. He and his family attend services in the Grace Methodist Episcopal church. His is a well rounded character, and from him professional duties, the obligations of citizenship and the pleasures of social life each receive an adequate degree of attention. Wherever known—and his acquaintance is a wide one—he receives the regard and esteem of all with whom he is associated.

ALGERNON SIDNEY LEONARD, M. D.—1866.

Dr. Algernon S. Leonard, deceased, for many years actively engaged in the practice of medicine and surgery in Brooklyn, New York, was born in New York city April 4, 1842, the son of Moses Gage and Catherine (Barmore) Leonard, the former being a native of Stafford, Connecticut, the latter of Rockland county, New York. Moses Gage Leonard in his early life was prominently identified with public affairs in the city of New York. In 1840 he was elected on the Democratic ticket as alderman from the ninth ward, New York, and six years later received the appointment of almshouse commissioner for a term of three years; he was also a member of the first common council of New York, in 1850. After the Republican party was organized in 1856 Mr. Leonard joined that body, and remained a staunch supporter of its principles during the remainder of his life; he was also an active advocate of abolition. During the Civil war he was instrumental in the organization of the Sixth Regiment, New York Artillery, and he was appointed by President Lincoln to the office of provost of the tenth congressional district. Mr. Leonard married Miss Catherine Barmore, and their children were: Charles H., Augusta, wife of John B. Pomeroy, of Nyack, New York; Emma, wife of William Chauncey Kibbe, of Brooklyn, New York; Algernon Sidney, Cassie, wife of Dr. A. J. Steele, of St. Louis, and who died in 1880; and Josephine, wife of Frank Kellogg, of New York. Mr. Leonard died March 20, 1899, at the advanced age of eighty-nine years, survived by his wife, who was eighty-seven years of age, their married life having extended over a period of sixty-seven years.

Dr. Leonard attended a private school in New York city until between the age of ten and twelve years, when his parents removed to Rockland county, New York, and he became a pupil in Dr. Fitch's Boys' Seminary in Windham county, Connecticut. After deciding to become a physician he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which he was graduated in the class of 1866. He then spent an interneship of one year in the Charity Hospital on Randall's Island, after which he established an office in Woodstock, Connecticut, where he successfully conducted a select practice until 1883. He then removed to Brooklyn, New York, and from the beginning up to the time of his death, which occurred June 14, 1902, his efforts were attended with a high degree of success, his practice steadily growing in volume and importance as the public came to recognize his splendid professional ability. For a number of years he was in complete charge of the Home for Aged Colored People; he was a member of the Medical Society of the County of Kings and of the Windham County (Connecticut) Medical Society.

On January 10, 1868, Dr. Leonard married Miss Harriett Phillips, of Woodstock, Connecticut, and five children were born to them, two of whom died in infancy. Those living are: Maude L., Effie B., wife of Louis G. Leverich, of Brooklyn (and their child is named Leonard Phillips Leverich), and Clara K. Leonard. Dr. Leonard was a prominent member of the Tompkins Avenue Congregational church, of which his family are active members at the present time.

JAMES G. CLARK, M. D.—1845.

More than half a century has elapsed since this venerable and honored physician of West New Brighton, Staten Island, passed forth from the portals of the College of Physicians and Surgeons with his newly acquired degree of Doctor of Medicine, and in the long intervening years he ably exercised his professional functions, gaining a high reputation as a skillful physician and surgeon, and commanding the utmost confidence and esteem in the locality which figured as the scene of his indefatigable and well directed labors. He has now practically retired from the active duties of his profession, being succeeded by his son Frederick E. Clark, who is of the third generation of the family to have engaged in the practice of medicine on Staten Island.

Dr. James G. Clark was born on Staten Island in the year 1825, being the son of Dr. Ephraim Clark, who was born in the town of Rahway, New Jersey, in which state the family had its foundation in the colonial epoch of our national history. For thirty years Dr. Ephraim Clark was known as one of the prominent and successful physicians of this section of the Union, and his high reputation was ably maintained by his son, the subject of this review, while the honors professionally upheld in the family are safely entrusted to the hands of the latter's son.

James G. Clark received his early educational training under the Rev. James Brownlee, D. D., and in choosing his field of endeavor in connection with the practical activities of life he determined to prepare himself for the profession which had enlisted the able services of his father, under whose direction he began his technical study. He then became a student with Professor Willard Parker, M. D., in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, where he was graduated as a member of the class of 1845, being twenty years of age at the time. He was thereafter an interne in Bellevue Hospital, in New York city, where he remained about one year, gaining much practical experience in clinical work. After leaving the hospital Dr. Clark returned to West Brighton, his native place, and as the days passed he gained most gratifying recognition as a skillful, reliable and successful medical practitioner. Few men have been more devoted to their calling or have given it more of their time, while few have attained more satisfactory results, or a larger measure of affection and esteem on the part of those to whom they have ministered during the long years of an active and laborious professional career. His practice far transcended local limitations, for his services were in demand among that representative class of summer residents of the large resort hotels and also across the Kill von Kull, in New Jersey, where he gained the staunchest of patrons and admirers. While in active practice he kept fully abreast of the advances made in the methods of his profession, and even now, when he has passed the Psalmist's allotted span of threescore years and ten, he does not abate his interest in all that pertains to the broader general sphere of scientific progress in medical science. Dr. Clark is well known and most highly honored in this locality. He has traveled extensively throughout Europe, Egypt and the Holy Land, and while on these journeys has frequently ministered professionally to the American courts at various points abroad. He is a member of the Richmond County Medical Society and the New York Academy of Medicine.

JOSEPH DE VERE BARBER, M. D.—1893.

Dr. Joseph DeVere Barber was born March 3, 1871, in the town of Hopkinton, Rhode Island, and is the son of Thomas A. and Sarah J. (Kenyon) Barber. The former was the son of Jared Barber, of Hopkinton, Rhode Island, and the grandson of Hosea Barber, a native of Scotland. The mother of Dr. Barber was a granddaughter of John Stanton Kenyon, who was born in England, and a daughter of Joseph Denison Kenyon, a graduate of Dartmouth Medical College, who practiced medicine in Hopkinton, Rhode Island.

Dr. Barber graduated in 1890 from the Westerly high school, and in 1893 received from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University the degree of Doctor of Medicine. On June 1, 1895, he completed nineteen months' service in the Norwegian Hospital of Brooklyn, New York, and since that time has been engaged in private practice in Westerly, Rhode Island. Dr. Barber is a member of the Washington County Medical Society, the Pawtucket Medical Society, and the Business Men's Association of Pawtucket. He married, June 12, 1901, Mary, daughter of the Rev. John Evans, of Westerly, formerly of Brooklyn.

FRANK OVERTON, M. D.—1893.

Dr. Frank Overton, a descendant of Robert Overton, a colonel in Cromwell's army, and the name of whose son, Isaac, appears on the records of Southold township in 1654, was born December 29, 1867, in Bellport, Suffolk county, Long Island. He received his primary education in the public schools and in the Southold Academy; he entered Lafayette College, and was graduated in the class of 1890; he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, and was graduated in the class of 1893. He then received an appointment as house surgeon to the City Charity Hospital, Blackwell's Island, where he remained eighteen months, after which he engaged in practice in Patchogue, near his native village. He is a member of the Suffolk County Medical Society, the Associated Physicians of Long Island, the New York State Medical Association and the Alumni Society of the Charity Hospital.

Dr. Overton has made a valuable contribution to educational literature in his "Overton's Applied Physiology," a series of text books (primary, intermediate and advanced) which have been adopted for use in many schools and academies. In these volumes the author pursues original methods of teaching physiology, and gives the results of the latest research in biological, medical and chemical science. The effects of alcohol and narcotics are treated with special fullness and clearness, and these subjects are illustrated by numerous plates drawn by the author from actual specimens, and adapted for reproduction on the blackboard. Dr. Overton has also on frequent occasions delivered addresses on these and kindred topics before teachers' institutes and other educational bodies.

On November 2, 1896, Dr. Overton was married to Miss Alena Conklin, daughter of David F. and Angelina (Rogers) Conklin, the former named being a native of East Hampton, and the latter named of Speonk, Suffolk county. They have one daughter, Mary Conklin Overton. Dr. and Mrs. Overton are members of the Congregational church of Patchogue, Long Island.

BARTON W. BRUSH, M. D.—1894.

Dr. Brush was born at Franklin, Delaware county, New York, on the 23rd of January, 1869, being a son of Rev. Wilbur Fisk Brush, a clergyman of the Methodist Episcopal church. As the itinerant system of the church implied various removals of the family during his early years, the subject of this sketch received his preliminary educational training in the public schools of the various towns where his father was called to pastoral charge, and in Pennington Seminary, New Jersey. Upon formulating his plans for a future life work, Dr. Brush determined to prepare himself for the medical profession, with which object in view he entered upon a course of technical reading in the office of Dr. Samuel A. Wood, of Elmhurst, Long Island. Under this preceptor he prepared himself for matriculation in the medical department of Dartmouth College, and was there graduated in 1893, receiving the degree of Doctor of Medicine. Dr. Brush then took a post-graduate course in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, being duly graduated in 1894, and then gave his attention for a time to work in the Harlem Hospital, where he gained valuable clinical experience. Finally he opened an office at 1718 Madison avenue, New York city, where he was engaged in practice for three years, at the expiration of which he removed to Woodside, Long Island, where he has succeeded in building up an excellent and gratifying business, gaining unqualified confidence by reason of his thorough professional knowledge and discriminating methods, and holding the regard of all with whom he comes in contact by reason of his genial presence and unvarying courtesy. No advances made in the line of his profession fail to secure his attention, and he stands ready to utilize those remedial agents and adopt those methods which meet the approval of his judgment.

Dr. Brush is a member of the Queens County Medical Association, the Queens-Nassau Medical Society, and the New York County Medical Association, while for five years he served as lecturer on the subject of giving first aid to the injured, in connection with the Bureau of United Charities. He was married in New York city in December, 1898, to Miss Mabel Foster, of New York city.

NATHANIEL R. NORTON, M. D.—1894.

Dr. Nathaniel Read Norton, 107 East Seventieth street, New York city, was born in Elizabeth, New Jersey, July 16, 1871, son of Nathaniel and Emma Sylvia (Read) Norton. The father was a son of Nathaniel, who was son of Herman, who traced his ancestry to Sir Robert de Norville, who crossed from Normandy to England with William the Conqueror in 1066. Nathaniel R. Norton was graduated from the Brooklyn high school in 1887, was tutored for one year by Dr. William T. Vlymen, was graduated from the scientific department of Yale University in 1891, and completed his professional studies in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which he received his diploma as Doctor of Medicine in 1894. He was an interne in the Presbyterian Hospital from 1895 to 1897, and in the New York Foundling Hospital from 1897 to 1898.

While now caring for his personal practice, he is chief of the medical clinic of the Presbyterian Hospital, out-patient department, and visiting physician to the London and Seton hospitals. His contributions to professional literature include "Whooping Cough," in volume 6, O'Dwyer & Norton's "Twentieth Century Practice," and "Report of Sixty-two Cases of Insolation" in Presbyterian Hospital Medical and Surgical Report, 1897. Dr. Norton is a member of the Society of the Alumni of the Presbyterian Hospital, the Society of Internal Medicine, the Lenox Medical and Surgical Society, the New York County Medical Society, the Medical Society of Greater New York, the Yale Club and the Sachem's Head Yacht Club.

JOHN FRANCIS McCUSKER, M. D.—1889.

Dr. John Francis McCusker was born November 19, 1865, in Providence, Rhode Island, and is the son of Thomas and Honor McCusker. He comes of Irish ancestry. He was educated in the public schools of his native place, and in the Providence high school. He then entered Manhattan College, taking the scientific course, and graduating as Bachelor of Science, with a medal for mathematics, in 1886; in 1892 the college conferred upon him the degree of Master of Science. He studied medicine at the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, graduating in 1889, and immediately entered the Rhode Island Hospital at Providence as house officer, serving in this capacity for one year. Since July, 1890, he has been engaged in the practice of his profession in Providence.

From 1891 to 1893 he was assistant surgeon in the out-patient department of the Rhode Island Hospital, and is now connected with its ophthalmological department. In 1892 he was house physician to the Providence Lying-in Hospital, and from 1892 to 1895 visiting physician to St. Joseph's Hospital, now being secretary of the staff of the institution. In 1895 he was house physician to the Metropolitan Ear, Nose and Throat Hospital of New York, and in 1896 and 1897 held the same position in the Massachusetts Charitable Eye and Ear Infirmary of Boston. During 1892 and 1893 he was city physician of Providence, and from 1897 to 1899 held the position of assistant surgeon in the Rhode Island Hospital. From 1897 to 1900 he was assistant surgeon in the eye, ear, nose and throat departments of St. Joseph's Hospital of Providence.

JAMES R. BIRD, A. M., M. D.—1858.

James R. Bird, M. D., the son of William E. and Maria B. (Cocks) Bird, is a native of New York city. His ancestors took part in all the great wars of the country in their time. His father participated in the war of 1812, his grandfather was an officer in the continental army, while his great-grandfather, who had come from England and settled in Boston, was a British officer during the Revolutionary war.

James R. Bird was educated in the private schools of New York, and at the Middletown Preparatory School, where he was fitted for Trinity College, Hartford, Connecticut, from which he was graduated in 1854 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts, receiving the degree of Master of Arts three years later. Commencing medical study with Dr. James R. Wood, who was one of the founders of the college connected with Bellevue Hospital, and professor of operative surgery and surgical pathology in that institution, he gained a thorough knowledge of anatomy previous to his matriculation in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, where he received his medical degree in 1858. He was house physician at Bellevue Hospital for eighteen months, and during the next three years, in connection with private practice in New York, he devoted considerable time to diseases of the stomach in the Demilt Dispensary, also to work in the New York Eye and Ear Infirmary.

In 1865 he changed his professional headquarters from New York to Brooklyn, where he has since conducted a large general practice of medicine and surgery, being now at 247 Gates avenue. He served three years in the Atlantic Avenue Dispensary, ten years as attending physician to St. John's Hospital in Brooklyn, to which he is now consulting physician. During the last cholera epidemic in Brooklyn Dr. Bird had charge of the temporary hospital. He is a member of the Medical Society of the County of Kings, and was formerly a member of the Lincoln Club, but resigned on account of pressure of professional duties. In 1862 Dr. Bird was married to Miss Marie L. Hoge, daughter of Thomas L. Hoge of New York city, and has two living children: Edgar C. and William L., both of whom are successful Wall street brokers.

WILLIAM W. WENDOVER, M. D.—1874.

Dr. William W. Wendover, of Warwick, Orange county, New York, who has been for many years recognized as holding a leading position in his town and county was born January 28, 1851, in Kinderhook, Columbia county, New York, and after receiving his elementary education, became a student at Rutgers College, New Brunswick, New Jersey, where he completed his course in the class of 1871 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts of the alumnus. Dr. Wendover selected as his vocation for life the practice of medicine, and his preparatory studies were conducted in the beginning under the supervision of Dr. P. V. Pruyn, and afterward under the direction of the late Dr. H. B. Sands. At the conclusion of his period of preparation Dr. Wendover matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which institution he graduated in the class of 1874.

After his graduation Dr. Wendover received an appointment in the Roosevelt Hospital, where he served for eighteen months on the surgical staff, and in 1875 was made house surgeon in the same hospital, and visiting physician to the New York and Northern Dispensary, and also acted as assistant to Dr. Lefferts. In 1884 Dr. Wendover went to Warwick, where he is now in the enjoyment of a large and lucrative practice, having a high standing both as a physician and as a citizen. Dr. Wendover is a member of the Orange County Medical Society and the Columbia County Medical Society.

CHARLES H. GLIDDEN, M. D.—1881.

Dr. Charles H. Glidden was born near Holley, Orleans county, New York, January 28, 1856, the son of Smith and Cordelia (Wheeler) Glidden, who were the parents of eleven children, all of whom attained years of maturity. Dr. Glidden is a descendant of one of three brothers who came from England, landing at Plymouth, Massachusetts, in 1640, where they settled and reared families, and many citizens of different states of the Union trace their origin to them. Jacob Glidden, grandfather of Dr. Glidden, was for a number of years a resident of New Hampshire, whence he removed to western New York, where he pursued the occupation of his forefathers, that of farming.

Dr. Glidden acquired his early education in the district schools of Orleans county, New York, after which he attended the Academy at Holley, and subsequently was a pupil in the State Normal School at Brockport, New York, graduating from that institution after a four years' classical course. Afterwards he was principal, for three years, of the graded schools at Avon and Caledonia, New York. Being desirous of leading a professional life, he began to read medicine in the office of Dr. Edward M. Moore, an eminent surgeon of Rochester, New York. In 1878 he entered the Jefferson Medical College of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, attended his first course of lectures during the latter part of that year and the beginning of 1879, and in the fall of the latter year matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which institution he was graduated in May, 1881. He at once entered upon a general practice of his profession at Little Falls, New York, where he has continued to the present time (1903). Dr. Glidden is a member of the Herkimer County Medical Society, president of the Herkimer County Medical Association, member of the New York State Medical Society, member and ex-vice president of the New York State Medical Association, and the American Medical Association. He is also treasurer of the recently formed National Association of United States Pension Examining Surgeons.

On November 30, 1881, Dr. Glidden was united in marriage to Miss Margaret C. Milne of Holley, Orleans county, New York. During most of the past twenty years Dr. Glidden has been connected with the board of health of the city of Little Falls, either as member or health officer. Though not seeking political office at any time, he was the unanimous choice of his party for mayor of the city in the fall of 1899, and though defeated at the polls, his vote was a flattering one.

FREDERIC BIERHOFF, M. D.—1889.

Dr. Frederic Bierhoff, specialist in genito-urinary diseases, was born March 6, 1868, in New York city, and is the son of Joseph and Julia (Lilienfeld) Bierhoff, the former a native of Westphalia, Prussia, and the latter of Hanover. Dr. Bierhoff received his rudimentary education in the public schools of New York city, and at a private school kept by the Misses Ford, in Monroe, New Jersey. He also received private tuition in languages and other subjects from Mr. S. Stern and Mr. David Cherbuliez. From 1883 to 1886 he was a student in the College of the City of New York. In the latter year he entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he graduated in the class of 1889 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. He served for one year on the resident staff of the Manhattan Dispensary and Hospital, and from 1890 to 1898 was connected with the department of pediatrics, Vanderbilt Clinic. In 1892 and 1893 he was resident physician in the Sanitarium for Hebrew Children. In 1894 he took a post-graduate course in the Physiologischen Institut, in Berlin, and from 1898 to 1900 was a student in the University of Berlin, where he gained much clinical experience. From 1890 to 1898 he was engaged in private practice; he held the position of assistant in the department of pediatrics, Vanderbilt Clinic, from 1894 to 1898. He was connected with the department of genito-urinary diseases in the Berliner Allgemeine Poliklinik from 1899 to 1900, during his residence in Berlin, where he also filled the position of assistant in the Poliklinik of Dr. R. Knorr from 1899 to 1900. Since 1900 he has devoted himself to special practice in the treatment of genito-urinary diseases in New York city; his residence is at 717 Madison avenue.

In 1889 Dr. Bierhoff enlisted in the Eighth Regiment, National Guard of the state of New York, as a private, and was promoted to the positions of general guide, sergeant major, first lieutenant and battalion quartermaster.

While holding the last mentioned office, he resigned, in September, 1898, on account of protracted illness. In politics he is an independent.

Dr. Bierhoff is a member of the New York Academy of Medicine, the New York County Medical Society, the German Medical Society, the Harlem Medical Association, the Society of Dermatology and Genito-urinary Surgery, and the Physicians' Mutual Aid Association. He is a corresponding member of l'Association Francaise d'Urologie. The following are among the contributions of Dr. Bierhoff to the literature of his profession: "A Study of the Modern Views on Gonorrhoea and Its Treatment," "Enuresis and Incontinence of Urine in Children," "On the Irritable Bladder of the Female," "On Cystitis Papillomatosa," "Report of a Case of Renal Hematuria," "Bericht ueber einen Fall von Balken-Blase, mit Divertikel-Bildung, bei der Frau," "Bericht ueber einen Fall von Cystitis Gonorrhoeica," "On Gonorrhoeal Cystitis in the Female," "Oedema Bullosum Vesicae," "On the intra-vesical Evidences of Perivesical Inflammatory Processes in the Female," "Cystoscopic Lithotrite and Foreign Body Forceps," "On the Role of the Prostate in Gonorrhoea," "On the Technique of Cystoscopy in the Female," "Further Notes on Vesical Hyperaesthesia in the Female," "A Cystoscope for the Simultaneous Catheterization of Both Ureters and for Double Current Irrigation," "On Cystoscopy, its Value and Dangers," "Contribution to the Diagnosis of Renal Calculus," "Glandular Urethritis."

ROBERT FRANKLIN IVES, M. D.—1895.

Dr. Robert F. Ives, practicing physician and surgeon of Bensonhurst, New York, was born in Brooklyn, New York, March 21, 1870, the son of Jonathan E. Ives, a native of London, England, and a descendant of a noble English family. Jonathan E. Ives came to this country when a mere child, and after acquiring his education in the public schools he learned the trade of a bookbinder; later he established a business on his own account, and, owing to his reliable methods of transacting business, he is now the head of one of the largest bookbinding establishments in the country. He was united in marriage to Miss Phoebe Saddington, and six children were born to them, four of whom are now living. Their home is in Montclair, New Jersey, and the family are prominent and leading members of the Baptist church, Mr. Ives being a licensed preacher of that denomination.

Dr. Ives attended the public schools of Brooklyn and later was a student of Cornell University, taking his medical preparatory work at that institution. Subsequently he matriculated in the College of Physicians and surgeons of New York city, from which he was graduated in 1895. Dr. Ives then accepted the position of house surgeon in the Newark City Hospital, of Newark, New Jersey, where he remained for one year and gained a vast amount of experience which proved very useful to him in his professional career. In 1896 Dr. Ives located in Bensonhurst, where he has since continued, attaining that success concomitant with and a result of a high order of mentality, perseverance, ability, and a complete knowledge of the various branches of the profession he follows. He is a member of the Kings County Medical Society, and through his connection with this organization and his perusal of the leading medical journals he keeps well informed on all matters that tend toward perfection in the line of medical science.

On April 24, 1897, Dr. Ives married Miss Mildred F. Card, a daughter of Benjamin F. Card, and one child has been born to them, Robert Millard Ives. Both Dr. Ives and his wife are faithful and consistent members of the Baptist church. Dr. Ives is very popular in social circles, and has endeared himself to his many friends by his unfailing courtesy and cordial disposition.

THEODORE DENTON MILLS, M. D.—1876.

Dr. Theodore Denton Mills was born June 9, 1852, in Bloomingburg, Sullivan county, New York, and is the son of Dr. Samuel Wickham and Almeda Jane (Bailey) Mills. The former, who was a clergyman, was descended in a direct line from George Mills, who was born about 1605 and came from Yorkshire, England, in 1665, and died in Jamaica, Long Island, in 1694, at the age of eighty-nine. His son Samuel was born in 1631, and died in Jamaica, Long Island, in 1726, at the age of ninety-five; he was the father of Jonathan, who was born in Jamaica, Long Island, and had four sons, Timothy, Samuel, Isaac and Jonathan. Timothy, who was born at Jamaica in 1677, left that place and settled at Mills Pond, Long Island, in 1693; he died March 30, 1751, aged seventy-four. His son Jonathan, who was born in 1710, at Mills Pond, Long Island, and died in 1798, at the age of eighty-eight, was the father of Jacob, who was born in 1746 at Mills Pond, Long Island (near St. James); he moved to New Windsor, Orange county, New York, in 1768 or 1770, and soon after to the town of Walkill, Orange county; he died in 1841, aged ninety-five years. His son Samuel, who was born in 1776 and died in 1860, at the age of eighty-five, was the father of the Rev. Samuel Wickham, mentioned above, who was born in 1820 and died in 1902, aged eighty-two. The maternal ancestors of Dr. Mills were old residents of Orange county, New York, his grandfather, Nathaniel Bailey, having been the son of Captain Daniel Bailey, a soldier in the Revolutionary army.

Dr. Mills was prepared for college at the private school of Professor A. B. Wilbur, of Port Jervis, New York, and in 1874 graduated as Bachelor of Arts from Rutgers College, New Brunswick, New Jersey, being junior orator and commencement orator, and receiving, in 1877, from the same institution, the degree of Master of Arts. He was a member of the Phi Beta Kappa and Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternities. He studied medicine with Dr. Henry R. Baldwin, of New Brunswick, New Jersey, and Dr. Henry Hardenbergh, of Port Jervis, New York. In 1876 he graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University with the degree of Doctor of Medicine, and from April of that year to October, 1877, was house surgeon in the first surgical division of Bellevue Hospital. He practiced medicine at Port Jervis, New York, from October, 1877, to January, 1881, when he removed to Middletown, New York, where he has been located since. He is attending surgeon to the Thrall Hospital, and surgeon to the New York, Ontario and Western Railroad Company. He is a trustee of the Middletown Savings Bank, and of the Orange County Trust and Safe Deposit Company, and was for six years president of the Orange County Telephone Company.

Dr. Mills is a member of the Medical Society of the State of New York, the Medical Society of the County of Orange, the New York State Association of Railroad Surgeons, and the International Association of Railroad Surgeons. He belongs to the University Club of the city of Middletown and the Middletown Reform Club. He is an independent in politics. Dr. Mills married, October 20, 1887, Christina Stivers, daughter of Hon. M. D. Stivers, of Middletown, New York. They are the parents of the following children: Theodore Denton, Jr., born November 10, 1888, died January 14, 1889; Samuel Wickham, born January 4, 1892; and Elizabeth Stivers, born August 29, 1893.

HAVENS BREWSTER BAYLES, M. D.—1879.

Dr. Havens Brewster Bayles was born March 13, 1857, in Port Jefferson, Long Island, and is the son of James M. and Desire A. (Hawkins) Bayles. He graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University in 1879, as Doctor of Medicine, and served for eighteen months as interne in the Brooklyn Hospital. He is a member of the Medical Society of the County of Kings, the Kings County Medical Association, the Brooklyn Pathological Society, the Physicians' Mutual Aid Association, and the Society for the Relief of the Widows and Orphans of Medical Men. In 1883 he married Mrs. Eva A. Potter, widow of the late Dr. Charles H. Potter. Dr. Bayles has practiced medicine in the city of Brooklyn since 1881.

HENRY CUSHMAN TURNER, M. D.—1867.

Henry Cushman Turner, M. D., the son of Joseph Mott and Sophia Bingham (Cushman) Turner, was born in Manlius, Onondaga county, New York, December 30, 1844. On his father's side he was descended from John Turner, who came to Roxbury, Massachusetts, in 1646, three years after the union of the colonies of Massachusetts Bay, Plymouth, New Haven and Connecticut, known in colonial times as the United Colonies of New England; he was also one of the original three settlers of Medfield, Massachusetts, in 1649. Dr. Turner's ancestor on his mother's side was Robert Cushman, who was born in Canterbury, England, about 1580, and who became a leader of the Pilgrims in Leyden, Holland; he afterwards advocated their settling in America, and as an agent for the Pilgrim church, collected funds in London, and chartered the Mayflower, which sailed for America in 1620; he followed on the Fortune in 1621, arriving at Plymouth, Massachusetts, and later obtained a grant of the territory of Cape Ann, where the first permanent settlement of the Massachusetts Bay colony was made. He returned to England, and died in 1625. His son remained in America, and his descendants settled in different parts of the United States.

One of these descendants, Sophia Bingham Cushman, married Dr. Joseph Mott Turner, who was born in Cazenovia, Madison county, New York, and who was a student at Hamilton College previous to entering the medical department of the Transylvania University at Lexington, Kentucky, which was at that time conducted in a superior manner by a faculty composed of many brilliant and scholarly medical men. On the completion of his course, he received the degree of M. D., and practiced for a time in Onondaga county.

In 1844 the senior Dr. Turner removed to Brooklyn, New York, where his son, Henry Cushman Turner passed his early life, being educated in the public schools of that city, and having the advantage of a thorough training in medical subjects under his father's personal supervision. His medical education was completed at the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York, from which he was graduated in the class of 1867. For fourteen years, from 1885 to 1899, he was attending physician at the Norwegian Hospital, and on his retirement in 1899 was made consulting physician. He is a member of the Kings County Medical Society. He is well informed on all general topics, but is not actively interested in politics.

THOMAS BUTLER VAN ALSTYNE, M. D.—1881.

Thomas Butler Van Alstyne, M. D., was born in Richmondville, Schoharie county, New York, October 2, 1858. His parents were Dr. Sylvester M. and Cynthia E. (Whitney) Van Alstyne. Dr. Sylvester M. Van Alstyne was a graduate of the Albany Medical School and a noted physician of his time. His father, Dr. Thomas Butler Van Alstyne, was also a prominent physician, who commenced to practice at Richmondville in 1819. He was a man of decided ability and influence. In treating his patients he was always successful in gaining their confidence, and had the reputation of being a physician who was always to be depended upon. His grandson, Thomas B. Van Alstyne, was sent to the village schools, then to the Delaware Literary Institute and to the celebrated Hartwick Seminary, which was established in 1815 by the Lutherans in Otsego county; while there he decided to adopt the medical profession. He studied with his father, and afterwards with Dr. Lewis Balch of Albany, entered the Albany Medical College and was graduated in 1879. He spent a year in the City Hospital at Albany, then after one year of study at the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York city, he graduated in 1881, gaining third prize in a class of one hundred and twenty.

He commenced to practice in Richmondville, remaining there thirteen years, terminating a period of seventy-six years, during which the name of Van Alstyne has been connected with the practice of medicine in Richmondville. Going to Binghamton in 1894, he discovered an extensive field for his labors in the medical line, and he has been successful there and has gained a well deserved reputation for knowledge and skill. He has received public recognition of his ability by his appointment to the board of health department of Richmondville, being a member from the time of its organization until he removed from the place. When he located at Binghamton, he maintained the same interest in public matters that had always made him an authority on all questions affecting the general health and progress of the community. He was a member of the board of health of the city of Binghamton for three years. He has been president of the Schoharie Medical Society, a member and president of the Broome County Medical Society and a fellow of the Binghamton Academy of Medicine. Dr. Van Alstyne's first marriage was in 1882, to Miss Edna Mann, of Schoharie county, New York; she died April 19, 1892, leaving two children, Agnes and Edna Marion. In 1894 Dr. Van Alstyne married Miss Alida Mann, of Schoharie county, New York.

WILLIAM WEST HUNT, M. D.—1890.

Dr. William W. Hunt, surgeon of the out-patient department of the Rhode Island Hospital, was born in East Providence, Rhode Island, April 22, 1868, the son of Dr. Simeon and Anna M. (Balch) Hunt, both of whom are descendants of an old and honorable New England ancestry. In the Providence high school Dr. Hunt acquired an excellent classical education, and after his graduation, in 1886, he entered Dartmouth Medical College. He then matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which he received his degree of Doctor of Medicine, June 11, 1890. In the same year he became associated with his father, Dr. Simeon Hunt, in a general medical practice, and this connection has continued up to the present time (1903). In 1892 Dr. Hunt received the appointment of surgical extern at the Rhode Island Hospital, where he continued to serve until December, 1901, when he was appointed surgeon of the out-patient department of the same institution, in which capacity he is serving at the present time; he is also visiting physician at St. Mary's Orphanage.

Dr. Hunt is a member of the Providence Medical Association, and the Rhode Island Medical Society. Fraternally he is affiliated with Rising Sun Lodge No. 30, A. F. and A. M., of which he is past master; he is also a member of Providence Royal Arch Chapter and Calvary Commandery, K. T. Politically he is an adherent of the Republican party. On May 11, 1892, Dr. Hunt married Miss Eliza A. Johnson, and since then they have made their home at the corner of Second street and Warren avenue, East Providence, Rhode Island. Their children are: Frederic Johnson and Arthur Balch Hunt.

ALBION STINSON WHITMORE, M. D.—1878.

Dr. Albion S. Whitmore, son of Samuel and Helen Mahr (Stinson) Whitmore, was born in Bowdoinham, Maine, December 13, 1851, and traces his ancestry back to Francis Whitmore, born in England in 1625, who came to this country in 1649 and settled in Newtown, now known as Cambridge, Massachusetts. Dr. Whitmore's early studies were pursued in the district school of his birthplace, the Gardiner (Maine) high school, and the Maine Wesleyan Seminary and Female College at Kent Hill. In the fall of 1871 he entered Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine, and after pursuing the regular course graduated July 8, 1875, with the degree of Bachelor of Arts; three years later he obtained the degree of Master of Arts from the same institution. In the meantime he began the study of medicine in the Medical School of Maine at Brunswick, later was a student at the Portland School for Medical Instruction, Portland, Maine, and finally entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, graduating therefrom March 1, 1878. The following year he substituted as an extern in the surgical out-patient department of the Boston City Hospital.

On May 1, 1878, Dr. Whitmore established an office in Boston, Massachusetts, where he has since continued a general practice, which has increased with the passing years. He also acts in the capacity of consulting physician to the Home for Aged Couples, New England Peabody Home for Crippled Children, of which he is also trustee, and formerly physician to the Rachel Allen Home. He holds membership in the Massachusetts Medical Society, Suffolk District Medical Society, Thorndike Medical Club, of which he has been president; also the University Club, and the Bowdoin Club, of which he was president for one year. In his political affiliations he is an earnest supporter of the principles of the Republican party. On October 14, 1885, Dr. Whitmore was united in marriage to Miss Maud Hight Swan; they have no children.

JACOB FUHS, M. D.—1875.

Jacob Fuhs was born in the little village of Schoenlind, Austria, on the 17th of December, 1849, and is a son of Aaron and Sarah (Zuckerman) Fuhs. In 1866 his parents came to America, locating in Bridgeport, Connecticut. His father died in 1882, at the age of seventy-three years, and his mother passed away in 1887, at the age of sixty-five years.

Jacob Fuhs received his education in the elementary schools of Elbogen, and in the college of that town, in which he was graduated in 1868. Immediately after his graduation he came to the United States. He remained at Bridgeport only a short time and then went to New York. There he entered the School of Mines of Columbia College, and afterward matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, under the preceptorship of Dr. H. B. Sands, and was graduated in 1875. Subsequently he was assistant for one year to Professor F. N. Otis, of New York city, and then he located in the eastern part of Brooklyn and entered upon the practice of his profession. For one year he served on the staff of the Eastern District Dispensary, since which time he has been attending physician to St. Catherine's Hospital, of whose medical board he has several times been president. In 1877 he became attending physician to the Hebrew Orphan Asylum, of Brooklyn, in which capacity he served for ten years, and since that period has been consulting physician to the institution. He is the senior visiting physician to the German Hospital and the chairman of the medical board, and is consulting physician to the Bushwick Hospital, the Eastern District and the Jamaica hospitals.

During the first ten years of his professional career he engaged in general practice of medicine and surgery, and then devoted his attention to the treatment of the diseases of the internal organs, chiefly of the digestive system. He is a member of the Medical Society of the County of Kings, the Kings County Medical Association, the New York Academy of Medicine, the Associated Physicians of Long Island, the German Medical Society of Brooklyn, of which he has been several times president; the German Medical Society of New York, the Brooklyn Pathological Society, the Brooklyn Neurological Society, and the New York State Medical Society. Dr. Fuhs has written a number of monographs and other papers. On the 13th of May, 1877, he was married to Miss Hannah Schwartz.

Jacob Fuhs

ELMER BERTLY EDDY, M. D.—1873.

Dr. Elmer Bertly Eddy was born January 8, 1850, in Providence, Rhode Island, and is the son of Raymond Perry and Eliza (Smith) Eddy, the former a physician of good standing. Dr. Eddy graduated June 29, 1871, from the classical and scientific course of the Lapham Institute of North Scituate, Rhode Island. In 1873 he received from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University the degree of Doctor of Medicine, and has since been engaged in the practice of his profession. From 1884 to 1890 he held the office of medical examiner to district No. 2, Providence county. He is ex-member of the Rhode Island Medical Society, the Providence Medical Association, and the Rhode Island Medico-Legal Society. Dr. Eddy married, March 25, 1875, Emily Fillinghast, and they are the parents of one daughter, Helen, who is the wife of Alanson D. Rose, M. D., Providence, Rhode Island.

FRANCIS LANDALE TUCKER, M. D.—1891.

Dr. Francis Landale Tucker was born February 13, 1867, in Easton, Washington county, New York, and received his primary education in the public schools of his native town, supplemented by attendance at the Free Academy and by a course of private tuition. After making choice of the practice of medicine as a life calling, he pursued his preparatory studies under the direction of Dr. Henry Gray, and subsequently under the guidance of Dr. Charles Wilkin. He matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he graduated in the class of 1891. For one year he served as interne in the New York Cancer Hospital (now the Memorial Hospital), and at the end of that time entered upon a career of private practice in Manhattan.

He was shortly compelled, on account of failing health, to relinquish for a time his active duties, but on becoming restored he engaged in practice in Brooklyn, where he now has a large and steadily increasing circle of patrons, and is in full possession of the esteem and confidence of his brother physicians. While devoting his time to general practice, Dr. Tucker has a special aptitude for surgery, which would lead him to make a specialty of this branch of medical science. Dr. Tucker is a member of the Kings County Medical Association, the State Medical Association, and holds the position of assistant surgeon to the nose and throat department of the Brooklyn Eye and Ear Hospital.

EDMUND DENISON CHESEBRO, M. D.—1890.

Dr. Edmund Denison Chesebro was born March 26, 1863, in Stonington, Connecticut, and is the son of Amos and Eunice Denison (Gates) Chesebro. He traces his descent, on both the paternal and maternal sides, from John and Priscilla Alden. Dr. Chesebro received his primary education in the public schools of the town of Stonington, and later attended the Mystic Valley Institute of Mystic, Connecticut, from which he graduated in 1883. In 1887 he received from Brown University the degree of Bachelor of Arts, and in 1890 that of Master of Arts. In the latter year he graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University with the degree of Doctor of Medicine, and has since been engaged in the practice of his profession. He holds the appointment of visiting physician to the Rhode Island Hospital and to the department for diseases of children of St. Joseph's Hospital. He is the author of various articles on general medicine and infant feeding.

Dr. Chesebro is a member of the American Medical Association, the American Academy of Medicine, the Rhode Island Medical Society, the Providence Medical Association, the Providence Medical Improvement Club, the University Club, and Orpheus Lodge No. 36, A. F. & A. M. In politics he is a Republican. Dr. Chesebro married, November 26, 1890, Grace Laura Mansfield. Their children are: Mildred, Edmund Denison, deceased, and John Alden.

GEORGE MARVINE TUTTLE, M. D.—1891.

It would require almost a volume to give even brief definitions of the many branches of the healing art, for every organ of the human body and its functions are now the object of specialized attention, and its diseases and methods of treatment of them form a separate branch of science. While Dr. Tuttle devotes himself to a general practice, he has made a specialty of the study of diseases of children and is accounted an authority on the subject, as is shown by the fact that he is called in attendance at one of the large children's hospitals in St. Louis, Missouri.

In giving a brief sketch of this gentleman's life, it may be noted that he is a descendant of early American pioneers, and is of English and Dutch origin. William Tuttle was a Connecticut colonist in the seventeenth century, and one of his descendants, Charles, the great-grandfather of Dr. Tuttle, was a soldier in the patriot army in the struggle for independence. Daniel Sylvester and Harriet Minerva (Foote) Tuttle were the parents of George Marvine, and the latter's birth occurred in Morris, New York, on September 21, 1866.

He received his elementary training in a private school in Salt Lake City and in St. Paul's School at Concord, New Hampshire, and was then a student in Columbia University, where he was graduated in the classical course in 1888. Following this with a professional training at the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York, he became a Doctor of Medicine in 1891. He was then an interne at St. Luke's Hospital in New York for two years and afterwards at the Nursery and Child's Hospital. He then came to St. Louis in 1894 and began his general practice, which he carries on at present, and with gratifying success.

Dr. Tuttle's ability has been recognized in his appointment as professor of therapeutics in the medical department of Washington University, and he is the attending physician of St. Luke's Hospital at St. Louis and for the Martha Parsons Hospital for children. He is the author of a manual on diseases of children. He is a member of the St. Louis Medical Society, the Bethesda Pediatric Society, is secretary of the Columbia Alumni Association of St. Louis and is examiner for the New York Life Insurance Company in St. Louis. His activity in public life is confined to voting the Republican ticket. On September 26, 1899, Dr. Tuttle was united in marriage to Miss Grace Dean Wallace, and their one son has been named Daniel Sylvester after his grandfather.

JOSEPH ANTHONY FRASIER, M. D.—1896.

Dr. Joseph Anthony Frasier was born June 4, 1875, in New Bedford, Massachusetts, and is the son of John William and Mary Ann (Banks) Frasier. The former was descended on the paternal side from a Portuguese family, his maternal ancestors being Irish, and the latter was, on both sides, of Irish lineage.

Dr. Frasier received his early education in the public schools of New Bedford, graduating from the high school in the class of 1893. After studying medicine for three years in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University, he received from that institution the degree of Doctor of Medicine, on October 19, 1896. About December 20th of that year, he began practice in New Bedford, where he has since remained. During 1901 and 1902 he was physician to the New Bedford board of overseers of the poor. He is a member of the New Bedford Medical Society, and the Dartmouth and Plymouth clubs. In politics he is a Republican. Dr. Frasier married, November 15, 1898, Mary Frances Movelle, and they have one son, Joseph A., Jr.

JAMES CLINTON COMSTOCK, M. D.—1884.

Dr. James Clinton Comstock was born in Broome county, New York, February 7, 1859. His parents were Abner and Betsie (Garlock) Comstock, who gave their son all the educational advantages that his native county afforded. After completing his studies at the Windsor Academy and the Cortland Normal School, he had a brief experience in teaching, for which his normal training had prepared him. Then he took up the study of pharmacy and was graduated from the New York College of Pharmacy in 1880. About this time he decided to widen his knowledge of medicine, and with this object in view, he studied with Dr. Lyon, who prepared him to enter the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York, from which he was graduated in 1884.

He gained a practical knowledge of his profession in the Chambers Street Hospital, the Metropolitan Eye and Ear Hospital, and the DeMilt Dispensary. With this experience he began general practice in Binghamton. His merits were soon recognized and appreciated, and he was successful from the outset. Unassuming in his manner, and never pushing or assertive, he has gained the confidence and respect both of patients and of fellow practitioners. He finds time to devote to the study of modern science, and is well informed on all the medical topics of the day. He is a member in good standing of several medical societies, a fellow of the Binghamton Academy and a member of the Broome County Medical Society. In 1895 he married Miss Edith M. Paige, who was a daughter of the late Clinton F. Paige, a Mason of high standing in Masonic circles, and who was for many years secretary of the Grand Consistory.

MATHIAS FIGUEIRA, A. B., M. D.—1872.

Mathias Figueira, M. D., A. B., is a son of Joseph and Julia Figueira. Dr. Figueira entered school in the city of Funchal, island of Madeira, and was graduated from the lyceum there. One year after his graduation he entered the University of Coimbra, Portugal, and pursued a course in mathematics for one year; at the expiration of that time he was forced to abandon his studies on account of ill health, and a sea voyage being advised, he came to this country in June, 1866, to visit some relatives who resided in New York city. While here he studied medicine during the year 1869 under the direction of Dr. Cook, of Pineapple street, Brooklyn; he then entered the office of Dr. Williard Parker in New York city, and was enabled to attend two courses of lectures given at the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, graduating from that institution with the class of 1872. At that time two full courses of lectures and a certificate of one year's study under tutorship from a physician of high standing was all that was requisite for graduation. During the last six months before graduation, Dr. Figueira entered the quiz class of Professor Howe, at Twenty-fourth street and Broadway, in order to prepare for the examination for the resident staff at Bellevue Hospital. This was necessary, as the college lectures did not fit one for the Bellevue Hospital Examination, and as attendance at the lectures of the college was not compulsory, the students were enabled to pass the college examination, which, while thorough, was not so technical as was the hospital examination.

In 1872, one month after his graduation, Dr. Figueira was appointed to the internal staff of Bellevue Hospital. After the regular year's service in the second surgical division of the hospital, he came to Brooklyn and entered upon the practice of his profession at 827 Flushing avenue, and in October, 1883, he moved to his present residence, 14 Stuyvesant avenue, corner of Vernon avenue, Brooklyn. Dr. Figueira was appointed on the internal staff of Bellevue Hospital in 1872, was appointed visiting physician of the House of the Good Shepherd, Brooklyn, in 1880, was appointed visiting physician to St. Catherine's Hospital in 1885, and was appointed visiting surgeon to the same institution in 1890, which is the only appointment he holds at the present time. He is a member of the Alumni of Bellevue Hospital, of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, of the Kings County Medical Society, and of the Brooklyn Surgical Society.

Dr. Figueira is the author of the following named works: "Defense of Surgical Treatment of President Garfield's Case," "Use of Esmarch's Bandage, With Report of the First Operation in Which Esmarch's Device was Used in this County at Bellevue Hospital in the Service of Professor Sands," the writer being his house surgeon at the time; "The Treatment of Fractured Patella," "Latent Appendicitis," "Cololithiasis," "The Treatment of Foreign Bodies in the Bronchia by Posterior Thoracotomy."

FRANCIS JOSEPH QUINLAN, M. D.—1878.

Dr. Francis Joseph Quinlan, of 33 West Thirty-eighth street, New York city, was born in 1853, in New York city. He was educated in St. Francis Xavier's College, from which he received the degrees of Master of Arts and Doctor of Laws. He graduated in 1878 from the College of Physicians and Surgeons as Doctor of Medicine. After serving for a time as interne in St. Vincent's Hospital, he began private practice in West Sixteenth street, New York city, removing thence to Fifteenth street, afterward to 54 West Seventeenth street, and finally to his present address. He is assistant surgeon to the nose and throat department of the New York Eye and Ear Infirmary, and also to the ear department of the same institution. He holds a similar position in the throat department of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, and that of laryngologist in the Northern Dispensary of New York city. He is professor of diseases of the nose and throat in the New York Polyclinic, and laryngologist and otologist to St. Vincent Hospital and the New York City Hospital, and consulting laryngologist to Foundling Hospital in New York city. He is consulting surgeon to the throat and ear department of St. Joseph's Hospital of Yonkers, and to the Jamaica Hospital, Long Island. From 1879 to 1883 he was surgeon in the United States Indian service.

The following are some of the contributions of Dr. Quinlan to the literature of his profession: "Tinnitus Aurium due to Nasal Obstruction;" "Electro-Cauterization of the Middle Turbinate;" "Electro-Cauterization Followed by Meningitis;" "Chronic Hypertrophy of the Lingual Tonsil;" "Papilloma of the Larynx;" "Foreign Bodies in the Bronchi;" "Benign Tumors of the Naso-Pharynx;" "Malignant Tumors of the Naso-Pharynx;" "Paraffine Injections in Nasal Deformities;" "Malignant Disease of the Nasal Passages." He is the inventor of the following instruments: Post nasal forceps, reversible tonsillotome, nasal speculum, paraffine syringe.

Dr. Quinlan is first vice president of the County Medical Association and is a member of the New York Academy of Medicine, the New York County Medical Society, the New York County Medical Association, the State Medical Association, the American Medical Association, the Society of Medical Jurisprudence, the Celtic Medical Society, the New York Otological Society, and the Physicians' Mutual Aid Association. He belongs to the Players' Club, the Catholic Club, the Manhattan Club, the New York Athletic Club, the Lambs' Club, and the National Arts Club. In religion he is a Roman Catholic. Two years ago, at a banquet given in his honor by one hundred medical friends, in New York city, Dr. Quinlan was presented with a loving cup. He married, in St. Francis Xavier's church, in New York city, Matilda Venn.

ALEXANDER GRANT SINCLAIR M. D.—1869.

Dr. Alexander Grant Sinclair was born July 30, 1842, in Charlottenburgh, Glengary county, Ontario, Canada, and is the son of Archibald and Mary (Grant) Sinclair. The former was the second son of Peter Sinclair, of Ben Lawers, Perthshire, Scotland, who became a resident of Canada in 1800. The latter was a son of Finlay Sinclair, of the same place in Scotland. The wife of Peter Sinclair was Ann McIntyre, daughter of Archibald McIntyre, of Kenmore, Perthshire, Scotland, who with his family came to Canada in 1800, and in the same year the marriage of Peter Sinclair and Ann McIntyre occurred. The family is a branch of the Sinclairs of Caithness, and of Norman extraction through William Sinclair, a kinsman of William the Conqueror, and an officer in the army of conquest. Archibald Sinclair, the father of Dr. Sinclair, was a farmer, and proprietor of lumber and flouring mills in Bruce county, Ontario, and served the public many terms as a member and reeve (presiding officer) of the township council and as a member of the county council. Dr. Sinclair was his youngest son.

On the maternal side Dr. Sinclair is descended from United Empire loyalist stock. His mother was a daughter of Peter Grant, who served with the British forces in the war of 1812, and whose father was Angus Grant, a native of the state of Inverness, Scotland, but a resident of the state of New York from 1774 to 1784. Angus Grant died in 1813 from injuries received while on military duty in the war with the United States in 1812. He was the son of John Grant of Inverness, a part of whose clan, the powerful clan Grant, took up arms in 1745-6 for the restoration of the house of Stuart, under the leadership of Prince Charles Edward. After the defeat of the Stuart forces at the memorable battle of Culloden, April 16, 1746, John Grant, with his brother Alexander and eighty-two others, was exiled to Barbadoes for a term of fourteen years. This was done in violation of the terms of surrender. Only two of the exiles lived to return, and of these John Grant was one. But his sense of injury was deep, the Stuart cause was a lost cause, and he resolved to leave forever the land of his birth. Accordingly, in or about the year 1760, he set sail for America, selecting a part of the rich and fertile valley of the Mohawk, where now stands the town of Johnstown, New York, for his future home. Before leaving Scotland he had been required to take the oath of allegiance, and when the Revolutionary war broke out, he and his family felt duty demanded fealty to the existing government, even at the sacrifice of pecuniary interests. Accordingly, his son, Angus Grant, the great-grandfather of Dr. Sinclair, joined the royal army under Sir John Johnston. Of Angus Grant an act of bravery is recorded which, in these days, might have won for him the Victoria cross. Marching through the woods in the winter, the command lost its way, and for days they wandered on, weary, hungry and cold. At last, one of their number, unable to go further, lay down to die. All were weak and well-nigh exhausted, and Sir John said that it was better that one should die than that all should perish, and that the man must be left to his fate. But Angus Grant said, "No;" he "would bring him along or die with him," and shouldering his fallen comrade he staggered on with the rest. A few hours later a faint halloo was heard in the distance, and Sir John putting his ear to the ground for a moment, sprang up exclaiming, "We're saved; we're saved; that is the voice of my brother William!" and so it proved. Another incident is worthy of record. The Loyalists who had left their families behind them were naturally anxious about their welfare, but to visit them was perilous in the extreme for short shrift was given all those found within the lines of the Revolutionary army without a pass. Angus Grant, however, became so anxious regarding his wife and helpless family, that he determined to risk all, and under cover of night he stole to his home on the banks of the Mohawk. The following morning a thrilling message, "the soldiers are coming," was sent from the lookout on the hill. In the chimney corner, smoking, and with his highland "blue bonnet" drawn over his eyes, sat old John Grant, of Culloden fame. A hurried exchange of clothes, and the young man took his father's place in the chimney corner. When the soldiers looked in, they saw, as they thought, what they had often seen before, the old man dozing by the fire, and remounting they rode away. In 1784 Angus Grant moved his family across the border, where he, in common with other United Empire Loyalists, was indemnified for his losses with large grants of land from the British government. His son, Peter, as mentioned above, was the father of Mary, who married Archibald Sinclair, and became the mother of Dr. Alexander Grant Sinclair. The family motto of the Grants was, "Craig ellachie—stand fast."

Dr. Sinclair was educated in the common and grammar schools of the Dominion of Canada, and under private tutors abroad. His studies included Greek, Latin, French, German, English, mathematics and natural philosophy. He began the study of medicine in 1866, as a private student under Dr. Samuel Campbell of Ontario, and attended his first course of lectures in the medical department of the University of Michigan, session of 1866-7, taking, in the following spring, a course of analytical chemistry under Professors Douglas and Prescott. In 1867 he entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, graduating from that institution in 1869 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. In March of that year he gained by competitive examination the position of resident surgeon of the New York Eye and Ear Infirmary, holding it from April 1, 1869, until January 29, 1872, when he resigned for the purpose of going abroad for travel and further study. In Europe he continued his studies mainly in Vienna, but also for a time in London; in the latter place, chiefly at the Royal London Ophthalmic Hospital, and in the former at the Imperial and Royal General Hospital, under Arlt and Bergmeister in ophthalmology, under Gruber in otology, under Schroetter, Schnitzler, and others in laryngology, and under the noted Stricker in pathology, giving also some attention to dermatology under Neuman, Kaposi, and the celebrated Hebra.

Returning to America, in September, 1873, he settled in Detroit, Michigan, and in November of that year entered upon a career of private practice, devoting himself exclusively, as he still does, to diseases of the eye, ear and throat. During his residence there he was ophthalmic and aural surgeon to Harper Hospital from 1876 to 1879. In 1878 he was tendered the position of professor of ophthalmology and otology in the Memphis Hospital Medical College of Memphis, Tennessee, an institution then about to be established in that city, and which, in its twenty-first session, with seven hundred and fifty students enrolled, became the second largest medical college in the United States. The first session of this college began in October, 1880, and in that year he removed to Memphis, which has since been his home. In 1883 laryngology was added to his chair, and hygiene in 1898. In 1883 the chair of materia medica and therapeutics became vacant and at the solicitation of other members of the faculty, he occupied that professorship also during two sessions, 1883 to 1885. He was secretary of the faculty 1883-4, and dean of the faculty during two prosperous sessions, 1884 to 1886. In 1890 he again became secretary of the faculty, an office which he continues to hold. He has been ophthalmic and aural surgeon to St. Joseph's Hospital since 1889, the year in which it was founded, and since 1892 laryngologist to the same institution. Since 1890 he has been ophthalmic and aural surgeon to St. Peter's Orphan Asylum, and has also held since 1890 the office of United States special examining surgeon.

In 1896, at the meeting of the Southern Medical College Association, held at Atlanta, Georgia, Dr. Sinclair originated the movement for the extension of the required time of medical college attendance to four years of six months each, by introducing a resolution to so amend the constitution as to make attendance on four sessions of six months each, in separate years, obligatory on all students matriculating for the first time in 1898, or thereafter. After much opposition this amendment was adopted at the meeting held on November 5, 1898, but inasmuch as the session of 1898-9 had already begun in all southern colleges, it was made operative on and after January 1, 1899. Thus, through his efforts, was accomplished this great step in the elevation of the standard of medical education in the southern states. He was formerly ophthalmic and aural surgeon to St. Mary's Cottage Hospital, and since 1899 has held the same position in the Memphis City Hospital. Since 1894 he has been ophthalmic and aural surgeon and laryngologist to the East End Dispensary, and since 1902 ophthalmic surgeon to the Old Ladies' (now the Mary Galloway) Home.

His literary work includes editorials, addresses, translations from the French and German, articles for medical journals, and many papers read before the various medical societies of which he is a member. During his residence in Detroit he was associate editor of the Peninsular Journal of Medicine from 1873 to 1876, and during 1895 was editor of the Memphis Medical Monthly, but early in the following year he retired from the general editorship, retaining, however, and still continuing, the editorship of the department of ophthalmology. Among the titles of the papers which he has read before medical societies are the following: "Cataract;" "Traumatic Cataract;" "Iritis;" "Glaucoma;" "Retinitis Albuminurica;" "Strabismus;" "Ophthalmia Neonatorum;" "The Electro-Magnet in the Extraction of Foreign Bodies from the Eye-ball;" "Importance of Accuracy in Glasses and Their Fitting a Part of the Physician's Art;" "Stricture of the Nasal Duct;" "Bi-lateral Glioma of the Retina with Enucleation of Both Eyes and Exenteration of One Orbit—No Recurrence in Seventeen Years;" "Sarcoma of the Choroid, Enucleation—No Recurrence in Eight Years;" "Mastoid Periostitis and Mastoid Abscess."

Dr. Sinclair is a member of the American Medical Association; the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the Tennessee State Medical Society, the Medical and Surgical Association of West Tennessee, the Tri-State Medical Association of Mississippi, Arkansas and Tennessee, the Shelby County (now Memphis and Shelby county) Medical Society, of which he was vice-president in 1889, and is an honorary member of the Mississippi State Medical Association. As delegate he represented the Memphis Hospital Medical College in the Southern Medical College Association in 1896, 1897 and 1898. He was formerly a member of the Michigan State Medical Society, the New York Ophthalmological Society from 1870-2, and the American Ophthalmological Society, 1874 to 1878. He was a member of council of the section of ophthalmology, and also of the section of otology, of the International Medical Congress held in Washington, D. C., in 1887. In this congress he read a paper on "Bi-lateral Glioma of the Retina." In 1896 he was vice-president of the American Medical Editors' Association.

He belongs to the Tennessee Club, a society which was organized for social purposes and for culture in literature and art. Among his favorite studies is history, both ancient and modern. Although fond of outdoor sports, his love for the lower animals, especially birds, has made him a lifelong opponent of the so-called sportsman of the present day. Dr. Sinclair is, and has been for a number of years, a member of the board of directors and vice-president of the Continental Savings Bank of Memphis. In religion he is a Christian, in denomination a Baptist, and is a member, and chairman, of the board of deacons of the First Baptist church of Memphis. He is a bachelor. In 1901 the Arkansas Normal College conferred upon him the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws.

LOUIS EUGENE HANMORE, PH. G., M. D.—1884.

Dr. Louis Eugene Hanmore, general practitioner of Newburgh, New York, was born in that city, May 29, 1859. His early youth and young manhood days were spent in Newburgh, where he acquired an academic education in Newburgh Academy, from which he was graduated in the class of 1876. He began his career in the drug business, and later entered the

New York College of Pharmacy, from which he was graduated in the class of 1881. Determining to make the practice of medicine his vocation in life, he placed himself under the competent preceptorship of Dr. Smith Ely of Newburgh; after pursuing a course of study in his office, he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which he received his degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1884. Shortly after his graduation Dr. Hanmore went abroad, and continued his medical studies in the hospitals of Berlin, and later at the Allgemeines Krankenhaus in Vienna. This experience proved a valuable aid to Dr. Hanmore in the practice of his profession, and being a thorough, exhaustive and accurate student of medicine, his advancement has come to him through merit.

Upon his return to his native land, Dr. Hanmore chose the city of Newburgh for his future field of labor, and his success was assured from the beginning. His practice covers all departments of general medicine, in which he has proved eminently successful among a large and influential patronage. Dr. Hanmore has also been continually active in professional lines aside from his personal practice; he has acted as visiting surgeon to St. Luke's Hospital at Newburgh, and for eight years served in the capacity of jail physician. He is a prominent member of the Orange County Medical Society.

WILLIAM H. CARMALT, M. D.—1861.

William Henry Carmalt, M. A., M. D., was born at Friendsville, Susquehanna county, Pennsylvania, August 3, 1836. His ancestors were Friends, one of whom, Jonathan Carmalt, came to America from Carlisle, Cumberland county, England, in 1730, and settled in Chester county, Pennsylvania. Here, three generations later, Caleb, the father of Dr. Carmalt, was born. Dr. Carmalt's mother, whose maiden name was Sarah Price, was the descendant of a family of friends who came to Chester county in the eighteenth century.

Dr. Carmalt attended different boarding schools in Westchester, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and in Alexandria, Virginia. After completing the more elementary studies, he went to Cambridge, Massachusetts, and under the instruction of Drs. Jeffries and Morrill Wyman, took a preparatory course which fitted him to enter Harvard Medical School. Later he completed his course in medicine at the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York under Dr. John C. Dalton, and was graduated in 1861. He assisted Professor Dalton in his work as professor of physiology for one year, then served one and one-half years as interne at St. Luke's Hospital, and again acted as assistant to Dr. Dalton for two years. In 1863 he entered upon a general practice in New York city. About this time he gave particular attention to ophthalmology at the New York Eye and Ear Infirmary, where he served until 1869; also for about three years he was attending ophthalmic surgeon to the Charity Hospital at Blackwell's Island. In 1869 he went abroad and for four years studied at Breslau and Strassburg under Professors Waldeyer and von Recklinghausen, making especial studies in pathology. Returning to America he continued his medical research, devoting himself particularly to the line of work he had pursued while abroad. In 1876 he moved to New Haven, Connecticut, and was appointed lecturer on ophthalmology and otology in the Yale Medical School, and in 1877 attending surgeon at the New Haven Hospital. After serving for two years as professor of ophthalmology and otology in the Medical School he was in 1881 appointed professor of the principles and practice of surgery, which position he still retains. He is chief of the surgical clinic of the New Haven Dispensary.

Dr. Carmalt has contributed articles to different medical journals and to the associations to which he belongs, and has given much time and thought to the discussion of surgical subjects and of hospital administration, having served for fifteen years on the Prudential (Executive) committee of the New Haven Hospital. He is a fellow of the American Surgical Association, a member of the American Ophthalmological Society, and a member of the American Otological Society. He has been secretary of the Congress of American Physicians and Surgeons since its foundation in 1888. He is a member of the state, county and city associations. In 1863 he married Laura Woolsey Johnson, of Stratford, Connecticut, a descendant of William Samuel Johnson, of Connecticut, who was one of the framers of the constitution of the United States. Mrs. Carmalt is also a niece of the late Theodore D. Woolsey, president of Yale College for twenty-five years. They have three children, Ethel, Laurance Johnson and Geraldine Woolsey. Dr. Carmalt received the honorary degree of M. A. from Yale in 1881.

WILLIAM A. MOORE, M. D.—1885.

Dr. William A. Moore, the son of Charles F. and Lydia A. (West) Moore, was born in Binghamton, Broome county, New York, March 29, 1859. The Moores have lived in Broome county for five generations, the grandfather of Charles F. being one of the first to locate in Binghamton. William A. Moore went through the ordinary routine of the public schools, where he prepared for college. Entering the department of arts at Columbia College, he completed the course and graduated in 1882, being a classmate of Nicholas Murray Butler, now president of Columbia University. While in Columbia he rowed on the varsity crews of 1881-82-83. He entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city and graduated in 1885. He served on the house staff of the Presbyterian Hospital in New York from 1885 to 1887. Dr. Moore then returned to Binghamton, where his skill as a specialist in surgery has given him the reputation of being one of the best known operating surgeons in his region.

He is surgeon in chief of the Binghamton City Hospital, surgeon to the Lacakawanna Railroad, also to the Binghamton street railroad system. He is a member of the Medical Society of the State of New York, of which organization he was vice president in 1902-3; a member of the Medical Society of the County of Broome, and a fellow of the Binghamton Academy of Medicine. He was married in 1889 to Miss Mary S. Allerton, of New York city. They have four children: one son and three daughters.

EDWARD H. MAYNARD, M. D.—1873.

Dr. Edward H. Maynard, general practitioner of Nyack, Rockland county, New York, was born in Madison county, New York, February 4, 1850. He acquired the usual elementary education at Cazenovia Seminary, and after deciding to make the practice of medicine his life work, he pursued a course of study under the guidance of Dr. Levi P. Greenwood, of Erieville, New York, after which he attended the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, and after one year, 1870-71, in the medical department of that institution, he continued his studies in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which he graduated in the class of 1873.

He then passed an interneship of two years in Roosevelt Hospital, and in the spring of 1875 located in Nyack and devoted his entire energies to the practice of his profession. His devotion to his work, combined with ability, both natural and acquired, has gained for him a high position among the most skilled physicians and surgeons of Nyack. He is progressive without being radical, and keeps abreast of the times in matters pertaining to his calling; he not merely secures the confidence of his patients, but their lasting friendship, and in his care for them he exhibits the skill, charity and kindness of the ideal physician. In addition to his extensive private practice, he acts in the capacity of visiting physician to the Nyack Hospital. Dr. Maynard is affiliated with the Rockland County Medical Society and the Rockland County Medical Association.

Dr. Maynard was united in marriage in 1878 to Miss Elsie De R. Morford, a native of Sussex county, New Jersey, and a daughter of Anthony D. Morford, who was born in Sussex county, New Jersey, in 1822, and who was graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons in 1844, and for ten years enjoyed a large and lucrative practice at Newton, Sussex county. At the expiration of that period of time he retired from the medical profession and engaged in banking. Two children have been born to Dr. and Mrs. Maynard, Linn De R. and Margaret R. Maynard.

CHRISTIAN A. HERTER, M. D.—1885.

Dr. Christian Archibald Herter, physician, of 819 Madison avenue, New York city, was born in Glenville, Connecticut, September 3, 1865, son of Charles and Mary (Miles) Herter. His father, a native of southern Germany, and a descendant of the Swiss family of Herder, was an artist and successful business man. His mother was the daughter of a physician, and was a descendant of Simon Fiske, lord of the manor of Stradhaugh, Loxfield, England.

Christian A. Herter was educated in New York city, and largely in the Columbia grammar school and under private tutors. When he was thirteen years old he began laboratory studies in chemistry and physics, and took a two years' private course in physics and mathematics in Columbia College. He then entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons, from which he was graduated in 1885, the year before attaining his majority. In the year following he was junior assistant in the first division of Bellevue Hospital. He then devoted himself to advanced studies, under Professor William H. Welch of the Johns Hopkins Medical School, and during the winter of 1887-88 was a pupil of August Forel in the University of Zurich, investigating cerebral anatomy. Returning home he engaged in private practice, devoting his attention particularly to neurology, and also performing a great deal of hospital work. He has occupied numerous positions in leading institutions, and has served as visiting physician to the City Hospital, consulting physician to the Babies' Hospital, consulting neurologist to the Lying-in Hospital, all in New York city, and consulting pathological chemist to the Craig Colony for Epileptics at Sonyea, New York. Since June, 1898, he has been professor of pathological chemistry in the New York University and in the Bellevue Hospital Medical College. He is a member of the Association of American Physicians, the Association of American Neurologists, the Association of American Physiologists, the New York Academy of Sciences, of which he is a fellow, the New York Academy of Medicine, the New York Pathological Society, the New York Neurological Society, the New York County Medical Society, the New York State Medical Society, the Century Association and the New York Riding Club. Dr. Herter married, December 9, 1886, Miss Susan Dows, and five children have been born to them, Forel, Christine, Mary Dows, Susan Dows, and Albert.

GONZALO EDWARD BUXTON, M. D.—1875.

Dr. Gonzalo Edward Buxton was born February 18, 1849, in Worcester, Massachusetts, and is the son of Edward and Julia Clarinda Claflin (Coburn) Buxton. The former was the son of David B., the grandson of James, and the great-grandson of Benjamin, who was the son of Samuel, the grandson of Joseph, and the great-grandson of Anthony, who emigrated from England to Salem, Massachusetts, in 1637.

Dr. Buxton received his preparatory education in the public schools of his birthplace, and took a special course at the Kentucky University. In January, 1872, he took up the study of medicine with Dr. Walter Burnham, at Lowell, Massachusetts, and in September of the same year entered the medical school of Harvard University, on the three years' course. In June, 1874, at the end of the second year, he had passed his examinations and entered upon the third year's course. In September, 1874, he entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University, and graduated with the class of March, 1875, receiving the degree of Doctor of Medicine. He then took a course at the Long Island College Hospital, but in the latter part of May was appointed resident physician and surgeon at St. Francis' Hospital, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, where he served one year. In June, 1876, he returned to Harvard, completed his examinations, and took the degree of Doctor of Medicine. He then went abroad, and took a four months' course at Rotunda Lying-in Hospital, Dublin, as resident; spent six months in the London hospitals, taking special courses, and two months in Paris. In the winter of 1877 he returned to the United States and engaged in practice in Kansas City, Missouri. In 1883 he again went abroad, completed his course at Dublin, took the degree of Licentiate in Midwifery, and spent the remainder of the year on the continent. Upon his return to this country in 1884, he settled in Pawtucket, Rhode Island, where he practiced four years, and in 1888 removed to National City, California. In 1896 he began practice in Providence, where he has since remained.

Dr. Buxton is the author of a great number of papers on subjects pertaining to his profession, which have been published in medical journals and society transactions, and he has also written for the public press upon matters relating to public health. While in Kansas City Dr. Buxton was adjunct professor of obstetrics in the medical department of the University of Kansas City, and a member of the hospital dispensary staff, and while in National City was a member of the board of health. Dr. Buxton is a member of the American Medical Association, and presented an interesting paper at the San Francisco meeting; is member, president, and ex-vice president of the San Diego County (California) Medical Society; ex-member of the Missouri State Medical Association, Kansas City District Medical Society, Kansas City Medical Society, Jackson County (Missouri) Medical Society, Rhode Island Medical Society and Providence (Rhode Island) Medical Association. He is a Mason and a Knight Templar, holding the office of past commander in San Diego Commandery. He is past chancellor commander in the order of Knights of Pythias, belongs to the Ancient Order of Foresters, Independent Order of Red Men, and sons of St. George. Dr. Buxton married, 1878; Miss Sara A. Harrington, of Worcester, Massachusetts. They have two sons, G. Edward Buxton, Jr., and Bertram H. Buxton.

HORACE S. WARNER, M. D.—1884.

Horace S. Warner, M. D., the son of Jonathan M. and Emily (Seelye) Warner, was born in Thomaston, Litchfield county, Connecticut, January 21, 1858. He attended the public schools of Thomaston, and a little later completed an academic course, which prepared him for Williams College, from which he received the degree of A. B. in 1881. Dr. William Woodruff gave him the necessary instruction in medicine preliminary to his course at the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York, and he was a successful candidate for the degree of M. D. in 1884. One year of hospital work in the City Hospital at Blackwell's Island followed his medical study, and at the expiration of that time he returned to Thomaston and began his professional life. After two years of practice there, he removed to Collinsville, Hartford county, Connecticut, remaining there three years; then going south, he located in Atlanta, Georgia, where he continued his practice for two years.

In 1893 he settled in Brooklyn, New York, where he has since been actively engaged in his professional duties. In addition to his general practice, he is the medical examiner of several life insurance companies; he represents the New England Mutual Life Insurance Company, of Boston, Massachusetts, the State Mutual of Worcester, Massachusetts, the Berkshire of Pittsfield, Massachusetts, the Travellers' and the Phoenix of Hartford, Connecticut, the Manhattan and the Provident Savings of New York, the Prudential of Newark, the Provident Life and Trust Company of Philadelphia, the Pacific Mutual of San Francisco and several others.

Horace Seeley Warner

Dr. Warner is a member of the Medical Society of the County of Kings and of the Physicians' Mutual Aid Association. During his residence in Connecticut he was a member of the State and County Medical societies. While in Atlanta he was a deacon of the Central Congregational church and is now a member of the Lewis Avenue Congregational church, of which he was formerly deacon. On September 25, 1884, Dr. Warner married Miss Carrie Stuart Crosby, daughter of George Crosby of Danbury, Connecticut, and to them has been born one son, John Birchard Warner.

ROYAL PHILLIPS WATKINS, M. D.—1892.

Dr. Royal Phillips Watkins was born October 2, 1867, in Proctorsville, Vermont, and is the son of Gardner Augustus and Eliza (Goodrich) Watkins. The former is the son of Zenas Watkins, who settled in Peru, Massachusetts, about 1800. Zenas was a son of Samuel, son of Samuel, of Hinsdale, Massachusetts.

The early education of Dr. Watkins was received in the public schools of Gardner, Massachusetts, and in 1889 he graduated from Amherst College with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. In 1892 he received his doctor's degree from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University. After serving for two years as interne in Bellevue Hospital, he went, in November, 1894, to Worcester, where he has since been engaged in the work of a general practitioner. In 1895 and 1896 he was connected with the Worcester Isolation Hospital, and is now surgeon to the out-patient department of the City Hospital, and visiting surgeon to St. Vincent's Hospital. He is a member of the Massachusetts Medical Society, and in politics is allied with the Republican party. Dr. Watkins married, December 23, 1895, Cora E. Nutting. They have two children, Agnes and Olive.

WILLIAM EDWARD SWAN, M. D.—1890.

Dr. William Edward Swan of Saratoga Springs, New York, was born September 13, 1866, in Albion, Orleans county, New York, and is the son of S. P. Vedder and Elizabeth (Tompkins) Swan. The former was for a number of years engaged in business in Albion, and in 1878 removed to Silver Creek, Chautauqua county. The paternal grandfather of Dr. Swan, Captain Stephen Swan, who was born in England, came to America as a young man, settled in Galway, Saratoga county, and served in the war of 1812 with the rank of captain.

Dr. Swan received his early education in the public schools of Saratoga Springs and at the Yates Institute of that place, and in 1887 entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he graduated in 1890 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. During his undergraduate course he served for several months on the staff of St. Luke's Hospital. Since 1890 he has been engaged in the practice of his profession in Saratoga Springs. In 1896, with a view to specializing in his calling, Dr. Swan entered upon a post-graduate course at Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore, becoming assistant resident gynecologist on the hospital staff. In October, 1897, he went abroad and passed the winter and the following spring in special study of gynecology and surgery in Munich, Vienna, Berlin and Leipsic. It is to these branches of his profession that he now chiefly devotes himself. In 1901 he was appointed attending surgeon on the staff of Dr. Strong's Saratoga Sanitarium, and is attending surgeon to the Saratoga Polo Association.

Dr. Swan is a member of the Residents' Association of the Johns Hopkins Hospital, a fellow of the New York Academy of Medicine, and of the New York State Medical Association, a member of the American Medical Association, the Albany County Medical Society, the Albany Practitioners' Club, the Union Medical Society, the Medical Society of Saratoga Springs, the Saratoga Club and Saratoga Golf Club. In politics Dr. Swan is a Republican, but has never sought or held any political office. He is unmarried.

HENRY JESSE KENYON, M. D.—1878.

Dr. Henry Jesse Kenyon was born in 1851, in Racine, Wisconsin, and is the son of James R. and Sarah A. (Miller) Kenyon. He was educated in the public schools, and in 1878 graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University with the degree of Doctor of Medicine, being president of the graduating class of that year.

After graduation Dr. Kenyon entered upon the practice of his profession in Lawrence, Massachusetts, and in 1887 removed to Worcester, where he has since remained. From 1897 to 1900 he was physician to the Massachusetts Odd Fellows' Home in that city. He is a member of the Massachusetts Medical Society, and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He finds in devotion to his professional duties not only a field of congenial labor, but his favorite means of recreation. Dr. Kenyon married, March 9, 1893, in Malden, Massachusetts, Ida Rowena Shattuck. They have no children.

GERRIT FRANKLIN BLAUVELT, M. D.—1873.

Dr. Gerrit Franklin Blauvelt, an eminent physician and surgeon of Nyack, New York, was born in Rockland county, New York, August 1, 1849. He was indebted to the public schools of his native town, which he attended until he attained the age of twelve years, for his preliminary education; his parents then removed to New York city, and Gerrit became a student in the College of the City of New York, from which he graduated with the degree of Bachelor of Arts in the class of 1868. He then pursued a partial course of study in Columbia University and left that institution in order to prepare himself for a medical career. He studied under the supervision of Dr. T. B. Smith and subsequently Dr. H. B. Sands, of New York, and after completing his course of reading with these competent preceptors, matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which institution he was graduated in the class of 1873. He served an internship of eighteen months in Roosevelt Hospital, after which he prosecuted his medical studies in Europe, spending most of his time in Vienna and Strassburg, where he gained much valuable experience.

After his return to his native land Dr. Blauvelt selected New York city as the field for his future work; he entered upon the active duties of his profession, and by close application and hard work built up a select patronage, which he enjoyed for two years. In addition to his private practice he acted in the capacity of surgeon to the outdoor department of the New York Hospital. In 1878 he removed to Nyack, New York, and being thoroughly equipped for his work, made a success of his career from the beginning in a section that is noted for the number of skillful physicians that reside there. He engages in a general practice of medicine and surgery, and his skill and ability are attested by the liberal patronage he receives. His professional prominence is no less enviable than his social position, which has come to him as the result of his genuine character, his kindly disposition and his unfailing courtesy. Dr. Blauvelt is prominently identified with the Rockland County Medical Association, the New York State Medical Association and the American Medical Association.

JOHN JOSEPH CUMMINGS, M. D.—1899.

Dr. John Joseph Cummings was born March 16, 1870, in Worcester, Massachusetts, and is the son of Thomas Charles and Margaret (Hunt) Cummings, both natives of the county of Waterford, Ireland. The former emigrated in 1863, settling in Worcester, Massachusetts, and the latter came to this country in 1865.

Dr. Cummings was educated in the grammar schools and the high school of Worcester, Massachusetts, where he subsequently learned the business of book-printing, being connected for five years with the establishment of Charles Hamilton, whose business was the largest of the kind in Worcester. In 1895 he entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University, from which he graduated in 1899 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. Since 1900 he has been engaged in the practice of his profession in Worcester, not devoting himself to any specialty, but pursuing the work of a general practitioner. He is a member of the Massachusetts Medical Society.

HENRY MOFFAT, M. D.—1881.

Dr. Henry Moffat of Yonkers, New York, was born December 20, 1855, in Princeton, New Jersey, son of James C. and Mary B. (Matthews) Moffat. His father was a Scotchman by birth, of lowlander ancestry, born near Newton Stewart, and his family name designates a village on the road from Glasgow to Liverpool. Dr. Moffat was afforded excellent educational advantages. He began his studies in the Edge Hill school in his native city, and when fourteen years of age entered the Freehold (New Jersey) Institute, where he remained for three years. In 1871 he entered Princeton College, from which he was graduated in 1875 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts, and in 1878 he received from the same institute the degree of Master of Arts. For four years after his graduation he taught Latin and Greek in a private school in New York city. He prepared for his profession in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, where he had for preceptor the accomplished Dr. Henry B. Sands. After his graduation in 1881, he was for two years a member of the medical and surgical house staff of St. Luke's Hospital.

Dr. Moffat located in Yonkers, New York, in 1883. In addition to caring for his private practice, he has been since 1889 attending surgeon of St. Joseph's Hospital, Yonkers, and since January, 1903, has been consulting surgeon to the Westchester Almshouse. He is a member of the Westchester County Medical Society, of the Jenkins Medical Society and of the New York Academy of Medicine; also of the University Club and the Princeton Club of New York city, and the Yonkers City Club. In politics he is a Republican, and served on the board of health of the city of Yonkers from 1898 to 1901. Dr. Moffat was married October 14, 1885, to Miss Edith Bogart, and of this marriage was born one child, Stanley Matthews Moffat.

ALVERD EZRA WINCHELL, A. M., M. D.—1865.

Alverd Ezra Winchell, M. D., New Haven, Connecticut, was the eighth in descent from Robert Winchell, who lived at Dorchester, Massachusetts, in 1634, soon after the colony was founded, and at Windsor, Connecticut, in 1637, in which year it was established as a part of the Connecticut colony, whose written constitution was the first one framed by the people which gave all freemen the right to vote.

Dr. Winchell, the son of Ezra and Lucinda (Newman) Winchell, was born June 21, 1831, in Egremont, Berkshire county, Massachusetts. He prepared for college at the academy in Great Barrington, Massachusetts, and was graduated with honors from Wesleyan University in 1857, obtaining later the degree of A. M. He accepted a position as principal of the Owosso (Michigan) Union Seminary, where he showed great ability in the management of the institution and much originality in the methods he introduced. To the regret of all concerned, he resigned at the end of three years' service for the purpose of studying law under Judge John P. H. Tallman, a prominent attorney of Poughkeepsie, New York. After a period of legal reading he began the study of medicine under Dr. Clarkson T. Collins, and through him was brought to the notice of Alfred C. Post and Valentine Mott, two eminent physicians of New York city. He was encouraged to enter the New York College of Physicians and Surgeons, from which he was graduated in 1865. During that year he took a trip through the south, making a study of the condition of the southern states directly after the close of the Civil war, in the interests of sanitary science, which has always been a leading feature in his work. On his return to the north, he settled in New Haven, Connecticut, where he made a specialty of surgery during the early years of his medical life, and later acquired a large general practice.

He ranks high in the different medical clubs to which he belongs, among which are the American Medical Association, the Connecticut State Medical Society, the New Haven Medical Society, and the New Haven City Society, of which he has acted as president for several years. In 1879 he was appointed a member of the board of health of New Haven, and this appointment was renewed for fourteen years, while he served as president of the board during several successive years. His interest in this direction has been further manifested by his membership in the American Public Health Association. His long residence in New Haven has made him solicitous to promote the welfare of the community and to make the city compare favorably with others of its size. He is a member of the American Academy of Political and Social Sciences, and belongs to the Masonic fraternity. He is very active in church and philanthropic work.

Dr. Winchell was married February 9, 1860, to Helen E., daughter of Captain Charles E. Hinman, of Southbury, Connecticut; she died in 1863, and in 1865 he married Mary, daughter of Elizur Mitchell, of South Britain, Connecticut; she died in 1874, leaving a daughter, Helen, who married Dr. William A. Brooks, of Boston, Massachusetts. In 1876 Dr. Winchell married Catherine Worthington Shepard, daughter of the Rev. Samuel N. Shepard, the pastor of a Congregational church in Madison, Connecticut, for thirty years. Mrs. Winchell was also the granddaughter of the Rev. Samuel Shepard, D. D., who preached in Lenox, Massachusetts, for fifty years, and she was a niece of the eminent John Todd, D. D.

STEPHEN PIERSON, A. M., M. D.—1869.

Dr. Stephen Pierson of Morristown, New Jersey, was born in that town, November 8, 1844, and is a son of Edward and Elizabeth (Guerin) Pierson. He prepared for college at the Morris Academy and entered Yale College in 1861, but at the close of his freshman year he enlisted, in August, 1862, for a nine months' service as a private in Company I, Twenty-seventh New Jersey Volunteer Infantry, and at the close of that term he had been promoted to the rank of second lieutenant. In September, 1863, he re-enlisted as a private in Company C, Thirty-third Regiment, New Jersey Volunteers. He participated in the campaign against Chattanooga and in the Atlanta campaign. He was with Sherman on his memorable march from Atlanta to the sea, and in the campaign through the Carolinas, which culminated in the surrender of General Johnston at Raleigh, North Carolina. He was promoted to the rank of adjutant of the regiment, and later captain and brevet major for brave conduct on the field of battle. He received a severe wound in the side at Pine Knob, Georgia. On the first day of July, 1865, he was mustered out of service and returned home with an honorable record.

In September, 1865, he again entered Yale College, in the class of 1868, and after remaining there for two terms entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which he was graduated in 1869.

After his graduation he served an internship of one and a half years in Bellevue Hospital, New York. He then located in Boonton, New Jersey, where he practiced until 1873, since which time he has resided in Morristown, where he enjoys an active practice. Dr. Pierson has been the Medical Director of All Souls' Hospital since it was established in 1892, and is also visiting physician and surgeon at the Morristown Memorial Hospital. He has served for twenty-five years as a member of the board of education of Morristown, and an ex-director of the board of freeholders of Morris county, New Jersey.

He is a member of the New York Academy of Medicine, the New Jersey State Medical Society, the Morris County District Medical Society, the Morristown Medical Club, the Bellevue Hospital Alumni Association, the College of Physicians and Surgeons Alumni Association, Washington Headquarters Association, Torbert Post No. 24, G. A. R., of which he has been several times the commander; New York Commandery, Military Order of the Loyal Legion; Morris County Golf Club, and the Morristown Field Club. He is president of the board of trustees of the First Presbyterian church of Morristown, New Jersey, and also a ruling elder in the same church. On September 13, 1870, he was married to Miss Amelia Cory, daughter of Silas D. Cory of Morristown. Mrs. Pierson died in February, 1894. There are no children of this marriage now living.

WILLIAM YOUNG FINCH, M. D.—1894.

Dr. William Y. Finch, practicing physician and surgeon of Brooklyn, New York, was born in New York city, August 14, 1871, the son of Richard L'Hommedieu Finch, an eminent attorney and counselor of law of New York. The educational advantages enjoyed by Dr. Finch were obtained in the Staten Island Academy, in which institution he was prepared to enter the Friends Seminary of New York, from which he was graduated in the class of 1891. His talents and inclinations led him to adopt the profession of a physician, and he commenced his preparatory studies under the efficient guidance of Dr. W. H. Porter as preceptor; subsequently he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York city, from which he received his degree of Doctor of Medicine in the class of 1894.

Immediately after his graduation he received the appointment of house physician and surgeon at Randall's Island, which he filled for one year; he was then assistant in the genito-urinary department of the Vanderbilt Clinic from 1895 to 1896; was then appointed physician to the medical department of the New York Post-Graduate Medical School and Hospital Dispensary for the year 1896; for two years acted in the capacity of instructor in the general medicine faculty of the Post-Graduate School; was one of the assistant surgeons of the Seney Hospital Dispensary of Brooklyn in 1898, and the assistant physician of the Brooklyn Central Dispensary from 1897 to 1899. Dr. Finch commenced the practice of his profession in Staten Island, having a large patronage from the first and remaining there until 1897, when he removed to Brooklyn, New York. He has applied himself conscientiously to his chosen profession, in which he has met with flattering success, and the high position he occupies in the medical fraternity gives abundant evidence of his ability and skill. From 1895 to 1897 Dr. Finch was a member of the editorial staff of the American Medico-Surgical Bulletin, and at the present time (1902) he is a member of the Kings County Medical Society and the Kings County Pathological Society. He resides at 407 Bergen street, Brooklyn.

WILLIAM GILBERT TERWILLIGER, M. D.—1894.

Dr. William Gilbert Terwilliger, a well known physician of Brooklyn, New York, was born January 25, 1872, in Ulster county, New York, and received his primary education in the New York public schools, later becoming a student at Dwight's high school. Having decided, after giving to the subject the full and serious consideration it demanded, that the practice of medicine should be the object to which the best energies of his life should be devoted, Dr. Terwilliger matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which institution he was graduated in the class of 1894.

He entered at once upon the active practice of his calling, choosing Brooklyn for the scene of his labors. In that city he has since remained, building up for himself, in the course of years, a large and profitable practice, and winning from both patrons and professional brethren the reputation of a skillful and successful medical practitioner, animated by a sincere enthusiasm for his chosen calling, and a conscientious devotion to duty. Dr. Terwilliger is a member of the Brooklyn Medical Society, and takes a lively interest in everything pertaining to the growth and development of the community in which he resides.

LEWIS E. B. SANBORN, M. D.—1867.

Dr. Sanborn is a native of the old Pine Tree state, having been born in Machiasport, Washington county, Maine, on the 19th of February, 1835, and he traces his honored ancestry back to Miles Standish. There he was reared to maturity, completing his more specifically literary education in the Washington Academy and instituting his business career by preparing himself for a druggist. On the 10th of September, 1862, he enlisted as a member of the Twenty-second Regiment of Maine Volunteer Infantry, and was afterward appointed hospital steward. He continued in the service until the close of his term of enlistment, and his experience in the hospital work, as well as his previous experience in pharmacy, led him to determine upon preparing himself for the practice of medicine as a life work. After being mustered out of the army he began reading medicine in Manchester, New Hampshire, and in Machiasport, where Dr. J. W. Murray was his preceptor. Later he was matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, where he was graduated as a member of the class of 1867.

He entered upon the active practice of his profession in his native state, but after a short interval returned to New York city, where for seven years he was connected with the municipal health department, rendering such efficient service that his appointment, in 1879, to his present office as deputy health officer of the quarantine department of the port of New York came as a fitting recognition of his ability and devotion to his responsible duties. Dr. Sanborn has thus been incumbent in this position for twenty-three years, and his long retention in the office offers the best assurance of his administration of the duties which devolve upon him in this important capacity. He maintains his home in the village of Rosebank, Staten Island. Dr. Sanborn was married twice: on October 25, 1870, to Isabelle B. Corey, daughter of Rev. Dr. S. A. Corey, and of the three children, one, Eugene B., lives in New York; on May 3, 1894, he married Mrs. Frances K. Nash of Charlestown, Massachusetts, a lady of New England ancestry.

JOHN CHARLES McCOY, M. D.—1892.

John Charles McCoy, surgeon, of Paterson, New Jersey, was born in New York city, March 19, 1868, a son of Josiah B. and Mary E. (Cassidy) McCoy. He was graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, in the class of 1892. He is attending surgeon of the Paterson General Hospital, consulting surgeon to the Good Samaritan Hospital, Suffern, New York; a member of the Passaic County Medical Society, of the New Jersey State Medical Society, of the American Medical Association, and of the New York Academy of Medicine.

GEORGE RAWSON BRUSH, M. D.—1857.

George Rawson Brush, M. D., who died November 29, 1894, at Colorado Springs, Colorado, was born at Smithtown, Suffolk county, Long Island, November 3, 1836, and was a son of Philetus Smith and Dorothea Ann (Brush) Brush, both of whom were descended from early Long Island families. He was one of the eighth generation in line of descent from Thomas Brush, who was born about 1610, settled at Southold in 1653, and came from Southold to Huntington, where he died shortly after 1670, and left children, Thomas, John, Richard and Rebecca.

Among the children of Richard Brush was Thomas, who had a son Nehemiah, who also had a son Nehemiah, who was the great-grandfather of our subject. Nehemiah (2) married and had a son Henry, who married Charity Smith and had children, among whom was Philetus, the father of Dr. George R. Brush.

Of the numerous descendants of Thomas Brush, the first American ancestor of this family, Jesse Brush, was an officer in the Revolution; his brother John was the General John Brush who commanded the Dutchess county troops at the Harlem bridge in the war of 1812, and who was afterward major general of the militia. Another brother, Colonel Henry Brush, was captain of Ohio volunteers in the war of 1812, and was on his way to Detroit with two hundred and thirty men, one hundred beef cattle and a quantity of provisions and the mail at the time General Hull surrendered, August 16, 1812. Captain Brush had arrived at the river Raisin, and was in imminent danger of falling into the hands of the Indians under Tecumseh, through the negligence of Hull to send reinforcements; he was notified by a British officer carrying a flag of truce concerning Hull's surrender, including Captain Brush's own command. He refused to accept the notice as authoritative, and escaped with most of his stores to Ohio.

Dr. George Rawson Brush received his early education in the schools of Smithtown, and for some time read medicine in the office of Dr. Morrell, of Huntington. When sixteen years of age he entered the seminary at Pennington, New Jersey, and after graduating entered the office of Dr. Lafayette Ranney, of New York city, under whose preceptorship he studied for some time, when he entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons, and graduated from that institution at the age of twenty-one years. He began the practice of his profession in the office of his preceptor, with whom he remained until his health became impaired. He then removed to Sayville, Long Island, where he successfully practiced until September 2, 1861, when he was appointed assistant surgeon in the United States navy, and rendered efficient service during the great Civil war. His promotion in the service was rapid. In April, 1865, he was made passed assistant surgeon; was promoted to the rank of surgeon February 10, 1872, and to medical inspector in November, 1889. During the Civil war Surgeon Brush served on the United States frigate Potomac, 1861-4, during which time he saw much of the yellow fever epidemic at Pensacola, Florida. He was on duty on board the United States receiving ship North Carolina, at New York, 1864-5; and on the United States steamship Wateree, Pacific station, 1865-7. He was detailed to attend the wounded at Callao, Peru, after the bombardment of that city by the Spanish fleet, May 2, 1866. His subsequent service was on board the United States steamship Wampanoag, North Atlantic station, 1868; in the naval hospital at Norfolk, Virginia, 1868-9; on the United States steamships Cyane, Ossipee, Pensacola, Saranac and Onward, Pacific station, 1869-1872; at the Naval Academy, Annapolis, Maryland, and the United States naval rendezvous, New York city, 1873-4; and on the United States steamship Saranac, North Pacific station, 1874-5. He was shipwrecked at Seymore Narrows, British Columbia, June 18, 1875. He was on duty at the Naval Hospital, Mare Island, California, 1875-6; on the United States flagship Omaha, South Pacific Station, 1876-8; on the United States receiving ship Colorado, New York, 1879-81; on the United States steamship Vandalia, North Atlantic, 1882-4; in the naval laboratory, Brooklyn, New York, 1884; on the United States receiving ship Vermont, New York, 1885-8; on the United States steamship Pensacola, Atlantic station; on the United States flagship Omaha, Asiatic station, 1889-91; and at the Navy Yard, New York, 1892-94.

This summary indicates that Surgeon Brush had a wide experience and traveled extensively. Being a diligent reader and lover of books, he collected many rare volumes during his travels, and his library at Sayville is regarded as one of the finest in the county. He was prominent in Masonry, in which ancient order he had attained the thirty-second degree, and he was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. Having a most genial disposition and excellent social qualities, his literary accomplishments made him a charming addition to the most cultured circles. He was married at Sayville, Long Island, March 12, 1864, to Miss Margaret A. Smith, daughter of Captain Jacob and Elizabeth (Edwards) Smith. Of this union was born one son, George Jacob, who died at the age of about eleven years.

JOSEPH VARNUM MOTT, M. D.—1872.

Dr. Joseph Varnum Mott was born in New York city September 5, 1849, and is the son of Henry A. and Mary (Varnum) Mott. The former was a prominent lawyer in New York city, and the latter was a daughter of the late Joseph B. Varnum, also a resident of the metropolis. The paternal grandfather of Dr. Mott was the late Dr. Valentine Mott, famous in the annals of the medical profession.

Dr. Mott was educated in private schools of New York city, and in 1868 began the study of medicine in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he received in February, 1872, the degree of Doctor of Medicine, being honored at the graduating exercises with the position of marshal of his class. Immediately after graduating Dr. Mott spent some time in European travel, and in 1873 returned to New York, and began private practice, in which he was actively engaged until 1882, when ill health compelled him to relinquish all professional duties. After traveling for several years in the orient for the purpose of recuperating his health, Dr. Mott returned in 1885 to his native land and settled in Boston, where for a time he engaged in practice as a consulting physician. Eventually Dr. Mott resigned all professional labors, and identified himself with insurance interests. From 1875 to 1876 he served on the staff of the Metropolitan Throat Hospital as surgeon, and from 1881 to 1882 held the position of medical director of the Harlem Dispensary. He has frequently filled the office of medical examiner in various insurance companies.

In 1893, Dr. Mott founded in Boston, Massachusetts, the Workman's Benefit Association, which in September, 1902, had a membership of nearly seven thousand, and had paid in death benefits over two hundred and sixty thousand dollars, at a total cost of twelve cents per year to its members. In addition to being the founder of this society, Dr. Mott served, during the first seven years of its existence, both as organizer and secretary, but was forced to resign owing to the confinement incident to the positions. In 1900 he was elected president, but in 1902 was compelled by ill health to decline a reelection.

During his active professional career Dr. Mott was a member of the New York County Medical Society, the Physicians' Mutual Aid Association of New York, and secretary of the Harlem Medical Society. He has served as medical examiner to most of the fraternal beneficiary societies, in a large number of which he is a member in good standing, being a thorough believer in this form of protection when honestly conducted. He is extremely fond of well bred dogs, and two years ago stocked a kennel of Boston terriers, to the care of which he has devoted much attention. During this time he has attended the principal bench shows, at which his animals were awarded numerous prizes. Among the valuable dogs owned by him is one known as Champion Lord Derby, the winner of seventeen first and fourteen special prizes.

Dr. Mott married Sarah W., daughter of John D. Wilson, of New York, and by this marriage was the father of three children, of whom only one is now living, J. Varnum Mott, Jr., who resides in New York. In 1890 Dr. Mott was divorced from his wife, and subsequently married H. Florence Burbeck, of Arlington, Massachusetts. Dr. Mott continues to reside in Boston.

ALFRED TRENCHARD-WOOD, M. D.—1899.

Dr. Trenchard-Wood may be said to have, in a sense, an inherent predilection for the medical profession, since both his father and grandfather attained distinctive prestige as physicians and surgeons. Dr. Trenchard-Wood is a native of New York city, being a son of Dr. James Robie and Katharine E. (O'Donoughue) Wood, the former of whom was born in New York city, and the latter in the city of Rochester, New York. Our subject was reared in his native city, completing his more specifically literary education in St. Francis Xavier College, where he was graduated as a member of the class of 1895, receiving the degree of Bachelor of Arts, while later he also received the degree of Master of Arts from this same institution. He is a young man of distinct individuality, and early formed plans for his future life work, determining to prepare himself for that profession which had been so honored and dignified by the services of his father and grandfather.

He began reading medicine under his father and eventually was matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, where he completed the prescribed course and was graduated as a member of the class of 1899. To more thoroughly fit himself for the practical work of his profession he then entered St. Francis Hospital, where he secured valuable clinical experience and was graduated, on the first of October, 1900. He served as clinical assistant in department of pediatrics in the New York School of Clinical Medicine for six months, and on April 1, 1901, he located in New Brighton, where he succeeded to the practice of Dr. J. Van Rensselaer. He has here secured the most gratifying recognition as a successful and able physician and surgeon, retaining to an extraordinary degree the practice controlled by his predecessor, and also winning a new clientele. He continues to be a close student, keeping in touch with all advances made in the two sciences to which he devotes his attention as a practitioner. He is a member of the Richmond County Medical Society, and is visiting physician to the Home for Destitute Children of Seamen and is connected with the New York health department as inspector and vaccinator. He has his office at No. 13 Franklin avenue, and resides in New Brighton.

ERASTUS PERRY SWASEY, M. D.—1869.

Erastus Perry Swasey, son of Dr. Charles Lamson and Hannah (Barker) Swasey, was born at Wakefield, New Hampshire, May 4, 1847. The Swasey and Perry families both came of old New England stock. The ancestry of the Swasey family in America dates back to the year 1632, and its members first settled in Salem, Massachusetts. This family has always included many professional men among its members. Dr. Swasey's paternal grandfather was a physician, and gave his son, Charles Lamson Swasey, a good education, sending him to Bowdoin College, where he completed the course and took his degree in medicine. After his graduation he practiced medicine in Wakefield, New Hampshire, and afterwards in New Bedford, Massachusetts.

The subject of this sketch was educated in the public schools of New Bedford; and under his father's tuition prepared for the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York, where he was graduated in 1869. He served as interne in the surgical wards of the New York Hospital for fifteen months, and was in the Nursery and Child's Hospital one year. In 1871 he selected New Britain, Connecticut, as the field for his medical work. In this busy New England town, noted for its commercial industries, he has practiced since that time.

Dr. Swasey is a member of several medical societies, among them the Hartford Medical Society, and the Connecticut County and State Medical societies. In church matters he favors the Congregational faith. He married Agnes Smyth, October 28, 1873, and they had one child, Agnes Perry Swasey, who died at the age of eleven years. His second marriage occurred June 5, 1889, to Hope S. Martyn, of South Attleboro, Massachusetts.

RUSSELL HENRY CHITTENDEN, PH. D.—1875.

Professor Russell H. Chittenden, director of the department of physiological chemistry and lecturer in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city (1898 to 1903), is of English origin, his first American ancestor on the paternal side having settled at Guilford, Connecticut, in 1639. He was born in New Haven, Connecticut, February 18, 1856, the son of Horace Horatio and Emily Eliza (Doane) Chittenden.

Dr. Chittenden prepared for college in the public and private schools of New Haven, pursued his scientific studies at the Sheffield Scientific School of Yale, from which he was graduated in 1875 with the degree of Bachelor of Philosophy, taking the degree of Doctor of Philosophy from the same university in 1880, and at the University of Heidelberg, where he was associated with Professor Kuehne in researches in physiological chemistry. From 1876 until 1882 he was assistant and instructor in chemistry, and instructor in physiological chemistry at Yale, and in the latter year was called to the chair of that department. He also received the appointment of director of the department of physiological chemistry at the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, and in 1898 was elected to succeed Professor Brush as director of the Sheffield Scientific School.

E. P. Swasey

Professor Chittenden has been frequently called upon to testify as an expert in criminal trials, being prominently known among the physiological chemists of the United States and Europe. He has edited a series of studies in physiological chemistry (four volumes), published a volume on the chemical processes of digestion, and papers from his pen to the number of one hundred and twenty-five, the majority embodying the results of original research in physiological chemistry, have appeared in the scientific periodicals of America and Europe. He is a member of the American Physiological Society, of which he has been president since 1896; National Academy of Sciences, Connecticut Academy of Arts and Sciences, American Chemical Society, a fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, president of the American Society of Naturalists in 1893, and vice-president of the Congress of American Physicians and Surgeons in 1897 and in 1903. On June 20, 1877, Professor Chittenden married Gertrude Louise Baldwin; their children are: Edith R., Alfred Knight and Lilla Millard Chittenden.

BENNETT FRANKLIN DAVENPORT, M. D.—1871.

Dr. Bennett Franklin Davenport was born May 28, 1845, at Cambridge, Massachusetts, the son of Charles and Joan Fullerton (Hagar) Davenport, and the grandson of Joseph Davenport, of Newton. On the paternal side he descends in the sixth generation from Thomas Davenport, who came from England, and settled in the Dorchester district of Boston in 1640.

Dr. Davenport was prepared for college at the public schools of Cambridge, graduating at Harvard College in 1867, as Bachelor of Arts, and receiving from the same institution, in 1870, the degree of Master of Arts and in 1871 that of Doctor of Medicine. He also received in 1871 the degree of M. D. from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York. His preceptors at Harvard were Dr. Calvin Ellis and Dr. Henry I. Bowditch. In the interval between the years 1867 and 1871 he went abroad for a year, applying himself to the study of medical specialties in the universities of Germany, notably at that of Tuebingen. In July, 1871, he began in Boston the practice of his profession, where his office has always been, at 161 Tremont street. His residence, however, since 1890 has been at Watertown, a suburb of Boston. He was for three years visiting physician on the staff of the Boston Dispensary, and filled for seven years the chair of professor of chemistry in the Massachusetts College of Pharmacy, holding that position from 1879 to 1886. For the ten years between 1882 and 1892 he was analyst to the Massachusetts state board of health, and ever since then the chemist of the state dairy bureau. He is also the expert for the state upon its official record ink required by statute to be used for all the public records of the state. He was, prior to the institution of the office of medical examiner, for several years one of the coroners of Boston, and from 1882 to 1885 was dairy inspector for the city. From 1892 to 1902 he was the chairman of the Watertown board of health. For five years he was the chairman of the water board and also for some years of the park board of that suburb. His professional specialties have been those relating to sanitation and toxicology, the examination of food and drugs for adulterations; also the expert examination of questioned handwritings, inks and documents. His annual reports are published in the Annual Reports of the Massachusetts state board of health, from 1882 to 1892, and in the Boston Medical and Surgical Journal for the years from 1882 to 1895, inclusive.

Dr. Davenport is a member of the Boston Society for Medical Improvement, also for Medical Observation, of the Massachusetts Medical Society, of which body he was the delegate for the decennial revision of the United States pharmacopoeia, in 1880, 1890 and 1900. He also belongs to the Massachusetts Medico-Legal Society, the Massachusetts Association of Boards of Health, the New England Waterworks Association, the American Public Health Association, and the American Chemical Society; also to those of London, Paris and Berlin, to the British Society of Public Analysts, and to the Deutsch Gesellschaft Angewandte Chemie. He is connected with both the American and British Pharmaceutical Associations. He is a charter member of the Historical Society of Watertown, of which he is corresponding secretary, and holds the office of president in the Watertown chapter of the Sons of the American Revolution. He is also a member of the New England Historical and Genealogical Society, the Boston Society of Natural History, the Harvard Greek letter societies of Phi Beta Kappa and Phi Eta, and fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. The favorite avocation of his leisure hours outside of the investigation of subjects relating to his vocation as a medical practitioner, has been the study of American history, particularly that of New England.

Dr. Davenport married, July 23, 1873, Annie Emeline, daughter of John and Martha Jane (Sturtevant) Coolidge, of Watertown, Massachusetts. Their children are: Grace Coolidge, born December 28, 1877, graduated from Radcliffe College in 1902; John Coolidge, born February 23, 1881, is of the class of 1904 at Harvard University; Anna Coolidge, born August 14, 1885, is of the class of 1906, at Radcliffe College; and Benita Coolidge, born August 24, 1888. Benita is now in the Cambridge Latin School, preparing to be of the class of 1911 at Radcliffe College.

EDWIN LEOPOLD ROSE. M. D.—1895.

Dr. Edwin Leopold Rose, of 4 West One Hundred and Thirty-second street, New York city, was born October 4, 1866, in the city of which he is now a resident, and is the son of Cornelius and Helen (Elsasser) Rose. The former was born January 12, 1829, at Blieskastel, Rhenish Bavaria, Germany, and received his elementary education at the public school and Latin school of his native place. Later, and until his fourteenth year, he was at the College at Mannheim, grand duchy of Baden. In his fifteenth year he entered the banking office of H. L. Hohencenser & Sons at Mannheim, and at the end of his apprenticeship, became clerk in a wholesale tobacco establishment. September 24, 1848, he emigrated to America, and became a resident of New York, where he has since remained. He was active in business until 1898, and since 1849 has been a member of the Seventh Regiment, National Guard State of New York. The mother of Dr. Rose was born in Fuerth, Germany, in 1835, came to America in 1851, was married the same year, and died in August, 1894.

In 1873 and 1874 Dr. Rose was at school in Nürnberg, Germany, and from 1874 to 1882 attended public schools No. 70 and No. 68 of New York city, graduating at the latter school in 1882. During the years 1883 and 1885 he was a student at the College of the City of New York. He spent the years 1886 and 1887 studying for the legal profession in a law office, and the two years following in the manufacturing business. He graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York in 1895 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. In the autumn of that year he entered Lebanon Hospital as a member of the house staff, and after serving in this institution one year was appointed visiting physician to the out-patient department. In the summer of 1898 he passed a civil service examination for appointment as medical inspector of the department of health, New York city, to which office he was appointed the following year. He also holds the position of lecturer to the Training School for Nurses.

Dr. Rose is president of the Association of the Alumni of Lebanon Hospital, and is a member of the New York County and State Medical Association, the Harlem Medical Association, and the Physicians' Mutual Aid Association. He married, June 29, 1898, Anna Celler. They have had one son, Edgar H. Rose, who is now deceased, and a daughter, Helene E. Rose.

JAMES WALTER LYMAN, M. D.—1881.

Dr. James Walter Lyman, of 424 West Thirty-fourth street, New York city, was born in Hartford, Connecticut, December 10, 1856, a son of Norman and Louisa Gertrude (Wickham) Lyman. The origin of the family is traced back on the paternal side to Richard Lyman, who came to this country from England in the year 1631, and on the maternal side he is a descendant of Miles Standish, born in England in 1584, who was one of the Plymouth Pilgrims, famous in colonial history and the theme of Longfellow's poem entitled "The Courtship of Miles Standish," and whose death occurred at Duxbury, Massachusetts, in 1656.

Dr. Lyman prepared for college in the public schools and the Episcopal Academy of Connecticut, and subsequently matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which institution he was graduated in the class of 1881 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. Dr. Lyman then spent an internship of one year in the Almshouse and Workhouse Hospital on Blackwell's Island, where he gained a wide and varied experience. On May 1, 1882, he established himself in practice in New York city, and soon reached a position of prominence in the medical profession. He is a member of the County Medical Society. In politics he is a Republican, but believes in voting for the man best suited for the office irrespective of party. On November 1, 1887, Dr. Lyman married Miss Alice Smith, a native of New York city; they have one child, Alice Louise Lyman.

LEWIS GUSTAVUS NOLTE, M. D.—1886.

In 1848, when the present flourishing city of Milwaukee, Wisconsin, was but a village on the shores of Lake Michigan, Conrad Nolte and his son Simon became early settlers there, having emigrated from Goettingen, Hanover, Germany. This Simon Nolte married Miss Pauline Esche, and there was born to them in Milwaukee on December 19, 1862, the son whom they named Lewis Gustavus.

Lewis was a pupil in the public schools and a private school in his native city, and then attended Concordia College at Fort Wayne, Indiana, one of the three German gymnasia of this country. He was there three years and then entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons at New York in 1883 and graduated in 1886. Following his graduation he returned to Milwaukee and became the assistant of that leader in the medical profession, Professor Nicholas Senn, with whom he remained several years, and whose influence has had much to do with the development of the talent of his young assistant. In 1891, when Dr. Senn went to Chicago to assume his duties as professor of surgery at Rush Medical College, Dr. Nolte succeeded to his chief's office, where he is still located.

Dr. Nolte was a trustee of the Johnson Emergency Hospital for several years, is professor of principles and practice of surgery and clinical surgery at Milwaukee Medical College, was county and police surgeon for three years, 1888-91, is surgeon to Trinity Hospital, Johnston Emergency Hospital and consulting surgeon to the County Hospital. He is a member of the Deutscher Club, the Milwaukee Athletic Club, Milwaukee Yacht Club, the Milwaukee and the Milwaukee County Medical societies, the Barnard Medical Society, Wisconsin State Medical Society, Northwestern Medical Society, the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and of the American Medical Association. He has also written a number of articles for delivery before medical societies and for medical journals. On October 17, 1888, Dr. Nolte was married to Miss Wilhelmina Widmayer of New York city, and their four children are: William Lewis, Lewis Palmer, Gladys Louise and Reginald Widmayer.

RICHARD ALBERT TERHUNE, M. D.—1850.

Dr. Richard Albert Terhune, physician and surgeon of Passaic, New Jersey, is a worthy descendant on the paternal side of a French ancestry. The name was originally spelled Teheune, and the progenitor of the American branch of the family emigrated from France to the United States about the year 1640. On the maternal side he is descended from Polish stock.

Dr. Terhune was born in Hackensack, New Jersey, January 9, 1829, a son of Garrit and Elizabeth (Zabriskie) Terhune, the former being a native of New Jersey, where he received his early education. He then entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, where he remained for two years; subsequently he was a student in the medical department of Rutgers College, from which he was graduated with the degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1827. He practiced for about a year in Hackensack, after which he located in Passaic, where he had a large and lucrative patronage. His visits to his patients were mostly made on horseback and he carried the old-fashioned saddlebags, which contained the medicines and implements which were necessary to his profession; he was considered one of the representative physicians of his day in Passaic, New Jersey, where he remained until his death in 1885, at the age of eighty-four years. His wife was a native of New York.

Dr. Terhune acquired his education in the common schools of Passaic, New Jersey, and under his father's able preceptorship he mastered Latin and Greek. Deciding to enter the medical profession he became a student in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which he was graduated with the degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1850. He commenced the practice of his profession in Passaic, New Jersey, which at that time was a very small village, and his practice was partly of a country nature. Dr. Terhune is well fitted for the profession which he has chosen as a life work, and commands the universal respect and confidence of the community in which both his father and he have labored so long and faithfully. He was president of the council of Passaic when the city was first organized and under the charter served as its first mayor.

In 1852 he was appointed superintendent of the schools of Acquackanonk township and a few years later, seeing, in his extensive travels about the country, the bad condition of the public roads, he sought and obtained the office of commissioner of highways of the township, and great improvements were brought about under his administration.

Dr. Terhune is a prominent member of the Passaic County District Medical Society, the Passaic City Medical Society and the New Jersey State Medical Society. He is also actively connected with the Masonic order, being past master of Passaic Lodge No. 64; he was also a former member of Centennial Chapter and Melita Commandery of Paterson, New Jersey. Dr. Terhune was united in marriage, June 18, 1861, to Mrs. Emily L. Morrell, daughter of Alanson Randol, of Newburgh, New York; they have two children, Miss Bessie Terhune and Percy Hamilton Terhune, M. D., of Passaic, New Jersey.

FREDERICK WILLIAM FLAGGE, M. D.—1881.

Dr. Frederick W. Flagge was born in the city of New York, July 25, 1858, a son of Francis Henry and Mena (Fischer) Flagge, the former named being a native of Germany and the latter of New York state. Francis H. Flagge was elected a member of the New York legislature in 1868, and served in that capacity for a number of years. Dr. Flagge obtained his preliminary education in the public schools of New York city and subsequently matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, where he was under the personal preceptorship of Professor James Little, and from which institution he received his medical diploma in 1881. He then pursued special courses under the guidance of Professors Alfred L. Loomis and George Wheelock, after which he engaged in active practice in New York city, where he remained two years. Dr. Flagge then located in Rockaway, New Jersey, where he has continuously practiced ever since, devoting much time and attention to surgery.

He is acting in the capacity of surgeon to the Memorial Hospital of Morristown, consulting surgeon to St. Francis' Hospital at Denville, and examiner for the Mutual Life Insurance Company, the New York Life Insurance Company and the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance companies of New York. He is a member of the Morris County District Medical Society, of which he is ex-president; permanent delegate to the New Jersey State Medical Society, a member of the American Medical Association, treasurer and one of the founders of the Tri-County Medical Society, embracing Warren, Essex and Morris counties, and a member of the Morristown Medical Club. He was elected a member of the first council of the corporation of Rockaway, and is also a member of the Rockaway township board of health. Dr. Flagge has been chosen for the position of noble grand of Citizens' Lodge No. 144, I. O. O. F.; member and medical examiner of Rockaway Council No. 1349, Royal Arcanum; member of the White Meadow Club, and president of the Rockaway Club. On January 26, 1881, he was united in marriage to Miss Anna S. Webster, who died July 29, 1891. On September 6, 1893, he married Miss Bertha Gage, a daughter of Justice C. B. Gage, of Dover, New Jersey; they have one child, Rebecca Flagge.

HARRY PERCIVAL WOLEY, M. D.—1890.

The paternal grandfather of this well known Chicago physician and surgeon was David Woley, who by his wife Mary (Smith) Woley became the father of Edwin Ruthwin. Edwin R. married Eugenie Victoria Decker, the daughter of James and Azubah Ann (Betts) Decker, and while these parents were residing at Maquoketa, Jackson county, Iowa, their son Harry Percival was born to them, on June 8, 1864.

Harry Percival Woley received his early educational training in the schools of Watertown, New York, and following his graduation from the high school there in 1883, he attended Hamilton College, where he was graduated in 1887. He then began preparation for his medical career in the medical department of Columbia University, and received his degree in 1890. During the following year and a half he was an interne in the Charity and Maternity Hospital in New York city and also did service in the Chambers Street Hospital. While in New York he was appointed surgeon of the Netherlands-American steamship line, but after a year resigned and in 1893 located in Chicago. He was appointed surgeon of the South Side Free Dispensary in 1894. In the following year he was assistant to the chair of orthopedic surgery in the medical department of Northwestern University and at the same time was visiting orthopedic surgeon to St. Luke's Hospital dispensary. In August of 1895 he was given a place on the Chicago medical staff of the New York Life Insurance Company, and just one year from that date was appointed to his present position, that of medical examiner in chief of the company. This department in Chicago has increased its force of assistants from three to twenty-three, all of whose work is controlled and reviewed by the chief examiner, and thus Dr. Woley's position is one of great responsibility and requires marked professional ability.

Dr. Woley believes in keeping up with the advanced thought of the times, and has therefore allied himself with a number of professional bodies, being a member of the Chicago Medical Society, Chicago Pathological Society, Chicago Physicians' Club, American Medical Association, Chicago Medical Examiners' Association, is president of the Chicago Orthopedic Society and treasurer of the Western Alumni Hamilton College Association. He is a Republican voter, but otherwise takes no active part in politics. On January 6, 1897, he was married to Miss Vida Hill, and their only son, H. P. Woley, Jr., died December 19, 1902. Dr. Woley's residence is at 6509 Minerva avenue, Chicago.

WILLIAM E. WIRT, A. M., PH. D., M. D.—1889.

Dr. William Edgar Wirt is one of the distinguished surgeons of Cleveland, nor is his reputation limited by the confines of that city or even the state, for he is widely known to the profession and in a large degree to the laity outside of Cleveland. There has been much fantastic theorizing regarding success, but the analysis of the life work of the men who have gained distinction in their chosen callings always brings forth certain elements, a thorough mastery of the work which they undertake, close application, and a desire for advancement, not merely for the sake of financial gain, but also because of a laudable ambition for perfection. These same qualities are the dominant ones in the career of the eminent physicians or surgeon, and upon that foundation has Dr. Wirt buildied his reputation.

The Doctor is a native of Illinois, his birth having occurred in Mendota, that state, December 19, 1862. In the paternal line he comes of ancestry that was established in western Pennsylvania in early colonial days. His father was Peter W. Wirt, a native of western Pennsylvania, who on arriving at years of maturity married Sybil R. Finley, a descendant of John Harris, who came from Scotland to the new world about 1765 and settled in New Jersey. When the colonies, unable longer to bear the yoke of British oppression, began war with the British troops stationed in this country, he joined the continental army and fought for the independence of the nation. The Doctor's father was a school teacher and farmer, and when their son William E. was a little lad of four years they removed from Mendota, Illinois to Bethel, Missouri, and afterward became residents of Lathrop, Missouri, but both passed away a number of years ago.

In January, 1874, when eleven years of age, William E. Wirt was sent to live with Dr. N. S. Everhard, of Wadsworth, Ohio, whose wife was a sister of William's mother. He immediately entered the public schools of that town, and in June, 1880, was graduated in the high school of Wadsworth. By competitive examination, in May, 1880, he received the appointment whereby he entered the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, Maryland, and there he was graduated on the 6th of June, 1884. He then took the post-graduate course, which is a two years' cruise, making a tour around the world. After passing his final examination he received his diploma at Annapolis, June 10, 1886.

Immediately thereafter Dr. Wirt took up the study of medicine and entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, but his course there was not continuous. He took a summer course in the medical department of the University of Wooster at Cleveland in the summer of 1888 and was there graduated, and he was graduated from the New York college in 1889. For several weeks, however, after completing his course in the University of Wooster, he had charge of the private practice of his uncle, Dr. Everhard, who was then ill, but in October, 1888, he returned to New York for his third year's work. A few weeks before his graduation, while doing duty in Sloane Maternity Hospital, he had some trouble with the house physician of the hospital, brought about by his criticism of the surgeon's personal abuse and cruelty to inmates. This trouble was reported in all the newspapers of New York city, but Dr. Wirt was exonerated upon the faculty investigation which followed.

In September, 1889, Dr. Wirt was appointed an interne at the Hospital for Ruptured and Crippled, in New York city, remaining there for a year and gaining broad and varied experience in the treatment of those thus afflicted and learning much of surgical work for the relief of such patients. During this time he had the medical clinic at DeMilt Dispensary for two months. For several months he assisted in the medical department of Vanderbilt Clinic, also in the outdoor department of the Roosevelt Hospital Surgical Clinic.

On the 30th of January, 1891, Dr. Wirt opened an office for the private practice of his profession in Cleveland, where he has since remained, with the exception of a brief period of six months, and almost from the beginning has enjoyed a practice which is not only extensive but also of a most important character. In the month of his arrival here he also received the appointment of lecturer on orthopedic surgery in the medical department of the University of Wooster, in Cleveland, now the Cleveland College of Physicians and Surgeons. Two years later he was elected professor of orthopedic surgery in the same institution, which position he has since most capably filled. He is also the orthopedic surgeon to the Cleveland General Hospital and the Cleveland City Hospital and is surgeon in chief of the Hospital for Crippled Children in Cleveland. Dr. Wirt has won distinction in connection with his work. Wonderful has been the advance made by the medical fraternity in the last half, and even quarter, of a century. Surgical work has certainly taken the lead in this direction, for operations which are now performed with almost unvarying success were unknown a comparatively short time ago. With this progress Dr. Wirt has kept fully abreast, and has not only broad scientific knowledge, but the ability of readily and correctly applying this knowledge for the relief of those who need professional aid in his specialty. Moreover, he is a man of broad humanitarian spirit and deep human sympathy, and because of this he is never happier than when bringing aid and relief to some of the unfortunate ones of the world.

At the time of the Spanish-American war in 1898, Dr. Wirt joined the navy and served with the rank of a lieutenant. Patriotism has ever been a marked characteristic of his nature and he gives a loyal support to the Republican party, because he believes its platform contains the best elements of good government. He is a valued and popular member of the Colonial Club, the Yacht Club, and of the Sons of the American Revolution and his standing in the regard of his professional brethren of the city is indicated by the fact that he was chosen by them in 1895 for the office of president of the Cleveland Medical Society. He is now president of staff of the City Hospital, chairman of the clinical and pathological section of the Academy of Medicine of Cleveland, trustee of the Medical Library Association, and is also in command of the naval militia of Ohio, with the rank of lieutenant commander. If man's worth in the world is estimated by his helpfulness to his fellow men, then Dr. Wirt's rating is high, and the regard in which he is uniformly held in Cleveland is not the less the result of his professional talent than of his commendable private career.

WILLIAM POPPER LOTH, M. D.—1894.

To the layman the long list of medical terms and the names of different branches of the science are somewhat cloudy in significance, but the classification shows the high point which the healing art has reached through modern scientific research, and the nomenclature is no longer a cloak for quackery and ignorance. Of the numerous branches of the medical art Dr. Loth, of St. Louis, has applied himself to that known as dermatology, or the science of the skin and its diseases, and is a specialist in this line.

The Loth family is Austrian in origin, and the American of the name came from Austria and settled in Hartford, Connecticut, but later moved to St. Louis, Missouri; he was a merchant and followed that occupation throughout his life. Adolf Loth and Sarah Popper were the parents of William Popper Loth, who came into the world in St. Louis on September 21, 1870. For his education in the fundamentals he attended the public schools and Smith Academy in his native place and then became student in Washington University. He gained his first knowledge of medicine in the St. Louis Medical College, where he remained one year, and then went to the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, where he became an M. D. in 1894. For two years following he was an interne in the Mount Sinai Hospital at New York, and then went abroad to pursue his studies in the famous schools of Europe, in Berlin, Hamburg, Paris, London, and in that Mecca of the medical cult, Vienna. Thus equipped, he returned and began practice in St. Louis, where, as we have said, he gives special attention to skin diseases. For two years Dr. Loth was professor of dermatology in Beaumont Medical College, or until the consolidation of that institution with Marian-Sims College. He is a member of the St. Louis Medical Society and the Medical Science Club, and has made some scholarly contributions to journals on dermatology. Dr. Loth is independent in politics and has never married; he is a popular man in professional circles and in general society.

ISAIAH WINDS CONDUCT, M. D.—1847.

For more than two and a half centuries the Conduct family have been represented in this country by ancestors of our subject; they came here about 1679 and located in Newark, New Jersey, in 1689. The name was originally Cundlitt. Dr. Isaiah Winds Conduct was born in Succasunna Plains, New Jersey, October 6, 1817, and is the son of Hiram and Abigail (Beers) Conduct, natives of New Jersey. He is a self-made man; his literary education was acquired in the public schools, and at the age of fourteen years he became a clerk in a country store, devoting all his spare time to study. He prepared himself for teaching, which he followed, in all, for ten years. Not content to devote his life to that work, however, he resolved to become a member of the medical fraternity, and to this end matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he was graduated in 1847. He is one of the oldest living graduates of this college, and it is worthy of note that in the spring of 1847 he saw performed, in New York, the first operation with the use of anesthetics.

Dr. Conduct began his medical career as a general practitioner in Blairstown, New Jersey, where he remained until 1849. About that time there was a movement to secure better educational facilities for Blairstown by building an academy by popular subscription, in which the Rev. John A. Riley, pastor of the Presbyterian church, and Mr. John Bunnell and Dr. Conduct were the leaders. Mr. John I. Blair, the wealthiest citizen of the town, and for whose family the town was named, subscribed one third of the necessary amount. When all the subscriptions were in it was found that all but fifty dollars had been subscribed by Presbyterians, so it was decided to make the academy a parochial school under the management of the presbytery. Messrs. Blair and Bunnell and Dr. Conduct constituted the building committee. The building completed, the next important matter was the selection of one well qualified to take charge of the school, and Dr. Conduct, having won for himself an enviable reputation as an instructor, was finally prevailed upon to accept the position for one year, 1848-9, in order to properly launch the new institution. He did not, however, entirely abandon his medical practice. This school is now one of the finest of its kind in the country.

In November, 1849, Dr. Conduct was made house physician in Bellevue Hospital, New York, and this was a golden opportunity for him, as he had a natural aptitude for surgery, and this appointment afforded him opportunity to put into practice the theoretical knowledge he had acquired in his collegiate course. In his professional work he contracted typhoid fever; during his convalescing period he returned to the College of Physicians and Surgeons, where he spent much time in the dissecting room and the clinic. In 1851 he returned to his native town and engaged in general practice until 1856, when he removed to Dover, where he has since resided, and enjoys a large and lucrative practice among the leading circles of the town.

His experience has been that of a country physician, who has to meet all emergencies and to do the best he can with facilities at hand, and often take recourse to means improvised on the spot. This requires quick perception and cool judgment, and Dr. Conduct possesses these traits to a marked degree. He is a friend of all needing his services, and was never known to turn a patient from his door. Many times he performed difficult operations, receiving only such aid as could be given by laymen who chanced to be at hand.

On November 2, 1851, Dr. Condict was married to Miss Mary Trimble Carrol, of New York city; she departed this life April 19, 1888. Ten children were born to them: Daniel Trimble, M. D., of Goshen, New York, a graduate of Albany Medical College; Miss Mary Condict, who died in 1890; Abigail B., married George Singleton and resides in Dover; Edward Carrol D. D. S., of Trenton, New Jersey; Arthur W. M. D., of Dover, New Jersey, a graduate of Michigan University; Elizabeth Marshal, who married Theodore A. Dickerson and died in 1897; William Newbold and Francis Seward, who died in infancy; Frederick L., D. D. S., of New Brunswick, New Jersey, and Joseph Carrol, who died in 1898 in his thirtieth year.

Dr. Condict is a member of the Morris County District Medical Society and also of the New Jersey State Medical Society. He is the author of a number of scientific papers which have been presented before medical and surgical societies. He is still mentally and physically vigorous, and being a natural student, is thoroughly versed in the most advanced theories and practices of medicine and surgery. Next to his profession, he has been interested in religious and educational matters, has been a member of the Presbyterian church more than sixty years, and was for twenty-five years a member of the Dover board of education.

NATHANIEL P. DANDRIDGE, M. D.—1870.

High on the roll of distinguished physicians in Ohio appears the name of Dr. Nathaniel Pendleton Dandridge of Cincinnati, whose comprehensive knowledge of his profession in its various departments has won him fame that extends beyond the city of his residence. Cincinnati is also the city of his birth, his natal day being April 16, 1846. His parents were Alexander Spotswoode and Martha Eliza (Pendleton) Dandridge, and he comes of English and Scottish ancestry. At an early epoch in the colonial history of our country his ancestry in both the paternal and the maternal lines established homes in Virginia, and Alexander S. Dandridge was a direct descendant of Governor Spotswoode.

Dr. Dandridge began his education in a private school in Cincinnati and later entered Kenyon College, Gambier, Ohio, in which he was graduated with the class of 1866. Regarding this merely as an initiatory step to further collegiate work, he spent the scholastic year of 1866-67 as a student in the Medical College of Ohio and in the summer of the latter year went abroad. During the following winter he was a student in Paris, France, and in 1868-69 continued his preparation for the practice of medicine as a student in the school of medicine in Vienna, Austria. Returning then to his native country with a comprehensive knowledge of principles and methods of medical practice in Europe, he next entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, where he remained through the year 1869-70, and was then graduated.

Beginning practice in Cincinnati Dr. Dandridge almost from the beginning has enjoyed a distinctively representative clientage, which in the course of years has grown to large proportions. In 1872 he was pathologist to the Cincinnati Hospital and became surgeon to the same institution in 1880, with which he is still connected. In the latter year he also became professor of surgery in the Miami Medical College and has filled the chair to the present time, being regarded as a most capable instructor, concise and clear in his presentation of any subject, so that his lectures make a strong impression upon the minds of his auditors. That he is considered one of the foremost representatives of the profession of surgery in this country is indicated by the fact that he has many times been solicited to contribute to the leading medical journals articles upon his specialty, and his theses have broadened knowledge among the followers of his calling and thus rendered surgical work more effective and beneficial to the human race. He belongs to the Cincinnati Academy of Medicine, the Ohio State Medical Society, the American Medical Association, the Southern Surgical and Gynecological Society, the Surgical Association, and is an honorary fellow of the Academy of Surgery of Philadelphia. He gives his political support to the Democracy and is connected with the Sons of the Revolution and Virginia Chapter of the Society of Colonial Wars.

GUY CARLETON BAYLEY, M. D.—1872.

Dr. Guy Carlton Bayley, general practitioner of Poughkeepsie, New York, was born in that city, October 16, 1850. He is a great-grandson of Dr. Richard Bayley, who was surgeon in chief of Lord Howe's army in the Revolutionary war, was the first professor of anatomy in Kings College Hospital in New York city, and afterward established quarantine on Staten Island, as health officer of that part of New York. His son, Dr. Guy Carlton Bayley, after whom Dr. Bayley is named, was the first medical superintendent of Bloomingdale Asylum in New York. Dr. Bayley's preliminary education was acquired in the Dutchess County Academy and in the select school at Sing Sing, New York, which was conducted under the competent supervision of Mr. Churchill. In 1869, having decided to study the science of medicine, he pursued a course of study with Dr. Henry B. Sands as preceptor; being an apt and earnest scholar he was soon enabled to enter the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which he was graduated with the degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1872. Immediately after his graduation he returned to Poughkeepsie and entered upon the active practice of his profession. He keeps thoroughly in touch with all advances made in the science of medicine and surgery, he is analytical in his methods, discriminating and painstaking in his investigations, and ever alive to the welfare of his patients, which characteristics should govern this most important of professions. He received the appointment of visiting surgeon to St. Barnabas Hospital, and physician in charge of the Orphans' Home and the Home for the Friendless. In 1884 he was appointed on the visiting surgical staff of the Women's Hospital of the State of New York, New York city, and associated himself with Dr. Nathan Bozeman. In 1887 Dr. Bayley received the appointment of resident medical officer and visiting surgeon to Vassar Brothers' Hospital, and after faithfully performing his duties in that capacity for twelve years he was made surgeon in chief of the institution. Dr. Bayley is a prominent member of the American Medical Association, the New York State Medical Association, and the Dutchess County Medical Society, of which he was the president in 1900.

CHARLES GEORGE KOEHLER, M. D.—1882.

Dr. Charles George Koehler, 313 South Fifth street, Brooklyn, New York, was born September 10, 1858, in Brooklyn, New York, and is a son of John G. and Auguste Koehler. When only six years old he began to attend the public schools of his native city and at the age of thirteen was graduated from the grammar school.

He then went abroad with his brother and sisters, and for two years he resided in Coburg, Saxony, received private instruction in the languages. At the end of that time he returned to this country, and entered his father's drug store, at the same time attending the New York College of Pharmacy, from which he was graduated in the class of 1878. Subsequently he took up the study of medicine, under the preceptorship of his uncle, August Koehler, and later entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University, from which he received the degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1882. Soon afterward he opened an office and began practice, and in 1883 served on the dispensary staff of St. Catherine's Hospital of Brooklyn.

Dr. Koehler is a member of the Kings County Medical Society, and the Physicians' Mutual Aid Association. He and his family are identified with St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran church. He married, in 1883, Louise A., daughter of Henry Saake, of the Brookfield Glass Works. They are the parents of four children: Charles G., Viola A., Lulu A., and Ida G.

CRAWFORD ELLSWORTH FRITTS, M. D.—1875.

Dr. Crawford E. Fritts, for more than a quarter of a century a prominent member of the medical profession in Hudson, Columbia county, New York, was born in the same county, May 14, 1850, a son of William and Lucretia (Plass) Fritts, of Columbia county, New York.

Dr. Fritts was reared in the town of his birth and acquired his elementary education in the Hudson Collegiate Academy. Shortly after completing his course of instruction in that institution, he decided on the practice of medicine for his vocation in life and commenced his preparatory studies under the direct supervision of Dr. H. Lyle Smith. He then matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which he received his degree of Doctor of Medicine in the year 1875. Immediately after his graduation he received the appointment of interne at the Kings County Hospital in Brooklyn, New York, where he remained nearly two years, and the experience gained in this position proved of great benefit to him in his professional career. In May, 1877, Dr. Fritts returned to his native town of Hudson, established an office and has since conducted an exceedingly large and lucrative practice of a general nature. He also takes a deep interest in the study of ophthalmology, has a large practice in that line and discharges his duties skillfully and with scrupulous conscientiousness.

Dr. Fritts is recognized as one of the leading medical practitioners of the city, and his services are often required in consultation with other physicians in some of the difficult problems which every doctor has to cope with, and which almost seem, at times, to baffle their skill and ingenuity. He acts in the capacity of surgeon and chief of the staff of the Hudson City Hospital, is the consulting physician to the House of Refuge for Women in Hudson, and served as lieutenant and assistant surgeon of the National Guard of New York. Dr. Fritts is a member of the Columbia County Medical Society, the Columbia County Medical Association, the New York State Medical Society, the New York State Medical Association, and the American Medical Association.

ALBERT BURR NASH, A. B., M. D.—1887.

Dr. Albert Burr Nash, general practitioner of Newark, New Jersey, is a descendant of a family who were among the earliest settlers of the state of Connecticut. His great-grandfather, Jacob Nash, lost his life during the American Revolution when the town of Norwalk, Connecticut, was burned. His grandfather, Jacob Nash, was for many years an old and honored resident of Norwalk, and his son, Captain Burr Nash, father of Dr. Albert Burr Nash, was prominently identified with the religious and social life of the town of Norwalk; he was united in marriage to Miss Mary Weed, also a native of Connecticut.

Dr. Albert Burr Nash was born in South Norwalk, Connecticut, January 29, 1855; he acquired his preliminary education in the public schools of his native town and under the competent preceptorship of private tutors in Norwalk, and this was supplemented by a course of study in Union College, from which he was graduated in 1883 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. He then matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, and graduated from that institution with the degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1887.

Immediately after his graduation he located in Newark, New Jersey, where for three years and a half he was engaged in the treatment of mental diseases at the Essex County Insane Asylum, in which he took an unusual interest; at the same time he continued his studies, so that when (though offered many inducements to remain) he removed to the Roseville section of Newark, he had a broad and comprehensive knowledge of his profession, and this, coupled with a gentle, sympathetic nature, soon won him many friends and a large practice.

He has also devoted a large portion of his time and attention to diseases of the nose and throat, in which he has been very successful. For a number of years he was assistant in the throat department of the Eye and Ear Infirmary. Since 1892 he has been very actively engaged as attending surgeon as well as one of the board of governors of the Women's and Children's Hospital. Having always been a close student and having a large capacity for work he has gained an enviable reputation, not only as a careful, successful physician and surgeon, but as a gynecologist.

Dr. Nash is a member of the Essex County Medical Society; he is also affiliated with Roseville Lodge No. 143, F. & A. M., Trinity Lodge No. 160, I. O. O. F., Roseville Council No. 144, K. of P., and Essex Council No. 161, J. O. U. A. M., serving as medical examiner for the last three named organizations. On July 21, 1893, in Washington, D. C., Dr. Nash married Miss Ella M. Elmer, of Morristown, New Jersey. They are both faithful and earnest members of the Roseville Methodist Episcopal church.

HENRY LEBER COIT, PH. G., M. D.—1883.

Dr. Henry Leber Coit of Newark, New Jersey, is a descendant of John and Mary Jenners Coit, colonial settlers of New England, who emigrated from Glamorganshire, Wales, in 1638, and many of whose lineal descendants were defenders of the country in the Revolutionary war. The family has also furnished many names prominent in educational and professional pursuits.

Nathaniel Coit, grandfather of Dr. Coit, and the first of the name in New Jersey, was born in New London, Connecticut, and when a boy of fourteen years, went to live in New York city. He served in the militia when the city was attacked in 1813; later he removed to Bloomfield, New Jersey, where he was prominently identified with the political and commercial affairs of the town for many years.

Rev. John Summerfield Coit, father of Dr. Coit, was a native of New Jersey, and acquired his education in Pennington Seminary, in which institution he was prepared for the ministry and was graduated with high honors. He became a clergyman of the Methodist Episcopal church, and continued in the active work of a pastor for the remainder of his life.

Dr. Henry Leber Coit was born in Peapack, New Jersey, March 16, 1854. He acquired his literary education in the public schools of Newark, afterward attending the College of Pharmacy in New York city, from which he was graduated in 1876 with the valedictorian honors of his class. Subsequent to his graduation from the College of Pharmacy he was engaged as a chemist in a manufacturing pharmaceutical laboratory for several years. Also after his graduation he became a tutor in the College of Pharmacy, which position he filled until 1880, when he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons and was graduated in the class of 1883 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. He established an office in Newark, in 1883, and engaged in a general practice of medicine and surgery until 1893, but since then he has devoted himself entirely to pediatrics, in which he has won an enviable reputation.

To Dr. Coit belongs the distinction of being known as the "father of certified milk;" the world-wide agitation of the milk question originated in New Jersey, and Dr. Coit was the leader in the movement. For eight years he labored unceasingly for the cause, and through the State Medical Society a committee of forty-two physicians was appointed to devise plans and means for securing the production of pure milk. The co-operation of the dairy commissioners, the board of agriculture and the board of health was secured, but no legislation could be obtained. However, the committee continued to work in sections, and the attention of the whole country was drawn to its work; finally the Essex county section chose a committee of disinterested physicians who secured legal control of a large dairy, in which, while they have no financial interest, or rewards, absolutely control its workings and certify to the purity of its products. Its success has been marvelous. This has been the first effort of the kind where purely professional objects and commercial interests have worked harmoniously. It is known to medical men and the leading dairymen throughout the world, and is used as a model in all efforts to secure pure dairy products. The United States government dairy exhibit at the recent Paris exposition, which won the gold medal, was taken from this dairy. The Nathan Strauss milk philanthropy of New York city and many similar enterprises throughout the world have been the result of the researches and operations pertaining to milk which have been made in Essex county, New Jersey, and no one knows better that his colleagues to what extent these splendid results have been due to the persistent, self-sacrificing work of the subject of this sketch. Another pediatric subject to which Dr. Coit has given much attention is that of milk modification, and he has done much to impress its importance upon the profession at large.

In 1896 he promulgated the movement which resulted in the founding of the Babies' Hospital of Newark, the second institution of its kind in the United States, and one which is greatly appreciated by those who are familiar with its workings. He is the attending physician to this institution and its medical superintendent, and its present prosperous condition is largely due to his efforts; a dispensary department has been added where needy persons can obtain bottled, certified, modified milk at cost, or where circumstances require it, free of charge. Another important adjunct of the hospital is a training school for nurses, where young women are fitted for taking charge of infants; many of the nurses who took advantage of the privileges of the school have excellent positions in the best families throughout the country.

Dr. Coit has written a number of monographs which were presented before the various medical societies of New Jersey, and before the pediatric section of the New York Academy of Medicine. He is a member of the Essex District Medical Society, the New Jersey State Medical Society, the Practitioners' Club of Newark, of which he is ex-president; the American Medical Association, and the New York Academy of Medicine. He is a member of St. John's Lodge No. 1, F. & A. M., of Newark, and has been for many years a member of Halsey Street Methodist Episcopal church, in which he has held official preferment since the age of twenty-one years.

PETER JOHN ZEGLIO, M. D.—1882.

Dr. Peter John Zeglio, of Plainfield, New Jersey, physician and surgeon, was born in Cranford, New Jersey, May 31, 1860, a son of John and Josephine (Duchini) Zeglio. John Zeglio was a native of Switzerland, as was also his wife. After coming to this country, he became one of the first seekers after gold in California. He crossed the Atlantic several times, and about 1853 settled in New York city, but on account of ill health was obliged to remove to New Jersey, where he engaged in farming. In April, 1866, he died, leaving a widow and four children, of whom Peter John was the youngest. Mrs. Zeglio with the aid of her children continued to cultivate the farm, and in this way she managed to preserve a home for herself and her children.

Dr. Zeglio acquired his preliminary education in the public schools of Mt. Bethel, New Jersey, and mastered the higher branches under private instruction. He was an ambitious youth and at the age of sixteen years had about decided to become a student in the office of his cousin, a prominent attorney in New York city. About that time he severely fractured his forearm, which resulted in permanent partial disability. His physician desiring an expert opinion in the case took him to the clinic of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, and on account of the very interesting nature of the case the professors requested that they be permitted to watch its progress. Their request was granted, the young man visiting the place many times and on several occasions was present during the entire sessions of the clinic. What he saw and heard made a deep impression upon him, which resulted in his making a choice of the medical profession for his life work. In due time he matriculated in the college where he had made the acquaintance of some of the faculty and in whose clinic he had received his first insight into the mysteries of medicine and surgery. He was a thorough, hard-working student and depended chiefly upon his own resources for the means of pursuing his course, but he allowed no obstacle to turn him from his purpose until in 1882 the degree of Doctor of Medicine was conferred upon him.

After his graduation Dr. Zeglio commenced the practice of his profession in Mt. Bethel, New Jersey, where he remained thirteen years. A large part of his patronage was in Plainfield, and in 1895 he removed to that city, where he has established one of the largest medical and surgical practices in the state of New Jersey. He is attending physician to the Muhlenburg Hospital at Plainfield, and from 1884 to 1888 was coroner of Somerset county, New Jersey. Dr. Zeglio has only his just reward in the high position which he now occupies in his chosen profession. The secret of his success has been hard work, coupled with a disposition, which he has always had, to do well whatever he has to do. His extensive patronage has come to him through his thorough knowledge of medicine and surgery, his marked ability in applying that knowledge, and his straightforwardness of manner, which win for him the confidence and friendship of all with whom he comes in contact. Although a very busy man, he is ever as ready to respond to the wants of the needy as to his more affluent patrons, and every patient who seeks his aid in the battle with death or disease, receives his best service.

EDWARD FRANKEL, M. D.—1868.

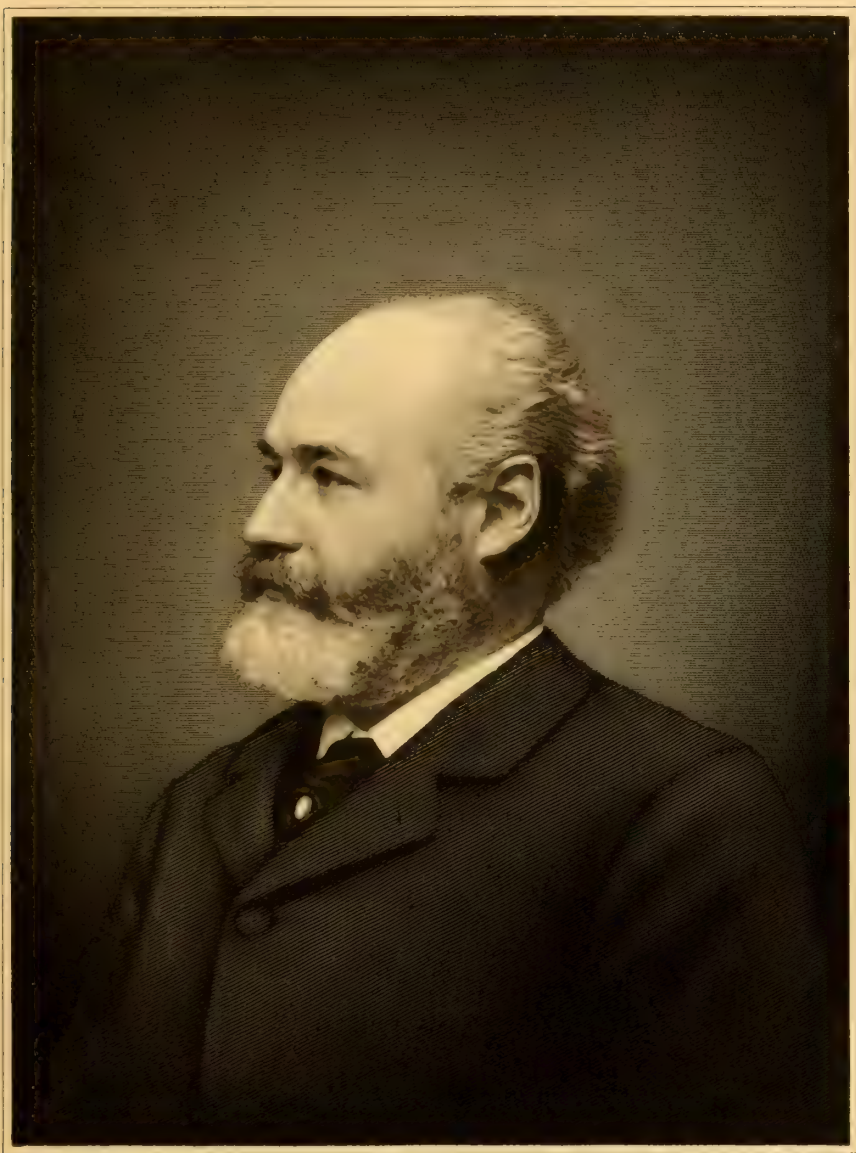

Edward Frankel was born in New York city, January 2, 1848. His father, Edward J. Frankel, a Prussian military surgeon (M. D., Berlin, 1837), was one of the amanuenses of Hufeland, and later distinguished himself by his advocacy of the "Expectant and Open-Air Treatment of Typhoid Fever," and of "Sanitary Reforms in Military Hospitals." He came to New York in 1842, was a general practitioner and sanitarian, and an active member of the council of the Sanitary Association from 1861-65. He died in 1881. Dr. Frankel's mother was of the Pommeranian family of Bresina, of Stettin and Ruegen. Her father and brother were well known theologians of the German Evangelical church.

Edward Frankel received his education chiefly in the public schools and under private tutors. He graduated in medicine from the College of Physicians and Surgeons in 1868, obtaining the first prize for a thesis on "Congenital Malformations of the Heart." He served in the New York Hospital from 1868-70. From 1871 to 1875 he was attached to the health department, devoting some special time to the preparation of a report on the adulterations of food. From 1871 to 1875 he was physician and surgeon to the Eastern Dispensary, and subsequently, until 1889, was one of its trustees. He was physician and surgeon to the New York Dispensary from 1874 to 1881, and in the same capacity to the City (Charity) Hospital from 1874 to 1890; also one of the promoters toward the establishment of the first training school for nurses, for which he prepared a well received "Manual of Nursing." In 1893 he was appointed honorary consulting surgeon to the hospital. He is a member of the County Medical Society and the Academy of Medicine, and also of Kane Lodge, F. & A. M., and Coeur de Lion Commandery. Dr. Frankel is married, and has one son, Edward Frankel, Jr.

JAMES PETER BOYD, M. D.—1871.

Dr. James Peter Boyd, of Albany, New York, who has for more than a quarter of a century occupied an honorable position in the ranks of his profession, is the bearer of a name which in the early part of the nineteenth century was distinguished in the annals of medicine, his father, Dr. James P. Boyd, having been a prominent and leading physician of Albany, a graduate of the medical department of the Pennsylvania University of Philadelphia.

James Peter Boyd, son of Dr. James P. and Mary A. Boyd, was born in February, 1847, in Albany, New York, and received his primary education in the Albany Academy, where he was prepared to enter Princeton University, from which he graduated in the class of 1867 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. He naturally chose for a life calling the profession of his father, under whose careful guidance he entered upon a course of preparatory study, which he further pursued in New York under the preceptorship of Dr. Willard Parker. After this exceptionally advantageous preliminary training, he matriculated in the Albany Medical College, and subsequently in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he graduated in the class of 1871. He then went abroad and for two and a half years continued his studies in the hospitals of Berlin, Vienna, Heidelberg and London. Returning thoroughly equipped for his future life work, he established himself in his native city of Albany, where for thirty years he has continued in the active practice of his profession, regarded by a large and constantly increasing circle of patrons and by the community in general as a skillful, successful and conscientious practitioner.

In 1873 Dr. Boyd was appointed on the staff of St. Peter's Hospital, and in 1876 on that of the Albany General Hospital. In 1876 he was appointed, and has since held the chair of professor of obstetrics and gynecology and diseases of children in the Albany Medical College, and in this position combines in a remarkable degree the faculty of not only expressing to those under his charge the facts and the ideas which he desires to communicate to them, but that of impressing on their minds, with force and clearness, the thought and the conviction by which he is animated. Dr. Boyd is a member of the Albany County Medical Society, the New York State Medical Society, the American Medical Association, the American Association of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, and the British Gynecological Society.

SAMUEL ROSEBURGH MORROW, A. B., A. M., M. D.—1878.

Dr. Samuel Roseburgh Morrow, general practitioner of Albany, New York, was born in that city, May 6, 1849, a son of the Rev. Samuel F. and Mary (Roseburgh) Morrow. He acquired his preliminary education at the Albany Academy, graduating in the class of 1866, after which he pursued the regular course in Yale University, from which he was graduated in the class of 1870 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts, and in 1874 he received the degree of Master of Arts from the same institution. Shortly after his graduation in 1870 he was appointed a teacher in the Hopkins grammar school, the Yale preparatory school, and afterward served as tutor in Yale College from 1873 to 1876. Determining to make the practice of medicine his life work, he placed himself under the guidance of Dr. James R. Wood of New York as preceptor and matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, and received his degree of Doctor of Medicine in the class of 1878. He received the appointment of interne in the Bellevue Hospital, where he served the full term of eighteen months, after which he went abroad and pursued his studies for one year in London, Halle and Vienna.

Upon his return to his native country in 1880 Dr. Morrow entered upon the active practice of his profession in Albany, New York, where he has since continued, and throughout the passing years he has enjoyed a large general practice, which is an indication of his ability, close application to duty, and deep professional interest in his work. Since 1882 he has been actively connected with the Albany Medical College, for fourteen years acted in the capacity of professor of anatomy and now holds the chair of practice of surgery and orthopedic surgery.

Although Dr. Morrow is now recognized as a skilled practitioner, he has never ceased to be a student, and by reading the best medical literature of the day is well informed on all matters pertaining to his calling. He possesses in a rare degree the faculty of not only expressing but impressing what he desires to communicate to those under his charge in hospital work. He has also contributed many valuable articles on the science of medicine and surgery, which have been read before the various medical societies. Dr. Morrow is a member of the Albany County Medical Society, the New York State Medical Society, and the American Academy of Medicine. He is also attending surgeon at the Albany, St. Peter's and Child's hospitals, and Hospital for Incurables in Albany, New York.

HUGO LANGE, M. D.—1889.

Dr. Hugo Lange, of 655 Bedford avenue, Brooklyn, New York, who makes a specialty of gynecology in addition to the general practice of medicine and surgery, was born in Germany, April 23, 1869. He grew to young manhood in his native country, and received a superior education in the schools and the gymnasium at Hagen, Westphalia, which he attended for nine years. In 1887, being then eighteen years of age, he came to the United States and began reading medicine with Dr. Fred Weygand as preceptor. Later he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which institution he was graduated in the class of 1889 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine.

Dr. Lange then returned to his native country and prosecuted his medical studies for nearly two years in Munich and Berlin under the competent preceptorship of Professor Winckel, the famous obstetrician of Munich, and Professor Martin, the eminent gynecologist. He then returned to Brooklyn, New York, and engaged in a general practice of medicine and surgery, but is now assuming a place among the most successful workers in the special practice of gynecology, wherein he has already rendered valuable service in both hospital and private practice, having held the Gynecological clinic in Brooklyn from 1892 to 1896. Dr. Lange is a prominent member of the Kings County Medical Society, and the German Physicians' Medical Society of Brooklyn, New York. In 1892 Dr. Lange married Miss Mary Van Slyck, of St. Paul, Minnesota.

SIMEON COLE BRADLEY, M. D.—1880.

Dr. Simeon Cole Bradley, a prominent medical practitioner of Bedford Park, New York, was born in Monroe county, New York, November 10, 1855. During his early childhood he removed to Middletown with his parents, who settled upon a farm, where Simeon acquired his primary education in the district school. Subsequently the family located in Newburgh, where young Bradley completed his primary education and commenced the active duties of life by learning the pharmacist business; he later continued his studies in New York city and was graduated from the New York College of Pharmacy in 1877.

The interest he took in the study of medicine and his acquaintance with the medical profession led to his decision to make the practice of medicine his life work. He then pursued a course of preparatory studies under the competent preceptorship of Dr. Daniel H. Smith, and later matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he was graduated in 1880 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. He spent an internship of eighteen months in the Infant Hospital on Randall's Island, and then entered upon a general practice of medicine and surgery in Middletown, Orange county, New York, where he remained two years in the enjoyment of a steadily increasing patronage. For the years 1884 and 1885 he was actively connected with the Woman's Hospital, and at the expiration of this period of time he located in Rochester, Monroe county, New York, where he remained until 1892, engaged in the general practice of his profession and meeting with a creditable degree of success. He then removed to Bedford Park, New York, where he has succeeded in obtaining the most gratifying recognition as a skillful and successful medical practitioner. He has a large general practice, and pays special attention to the treatment of diseases of women and children, having a natural aptitude for that branch of the profession. Dr. Bradley is a man of strong intellectuality, and in his chosen field of labor has attained distinction by his great energy and devotion to his work. He is a member of the County Medical Society, and the Physicians' Mutual Aid Association.

WILLIAM H. GREGG, M. D.—1855.

Dr. William H. Gregg, physician and surgeon of Port Chester, New York, was born in Elmira, Chemung county, New York, August 3, 1830, where he acquired his literary education in the common schools. He also unconsciously laid the foundation for a scientific education in his rambles among the fields, hills and streams, where he became acquainted with the different birds and minerals of his home land, so that in later years he was recognized as an authority on these subjects. Quite early in life he became interested in matters pertaining to the medical profession, and when he had attained the age of sixteen years he pursued a course in chemistry under the instruction of Professor James Hadley, of Geneva, and subsequently was made his laboratory assistant. He prepared for college under the able preceptorship of Dr. T. H. Squires and matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which institution he was graduated in the class of 1855. After graduating he was appointed assistant surgeon upon the medical staff of the Blackwell's Island Hospital by the board of ten governors, who then had charge of the charitable institutions of New York city.

He entered upon the active practice of his profession in Elmira, and shortly afterward was appointed regimental surgeon of the Sixty-ninth Regiment, New York Militia, and subsequently was promoted to the rank of hospital surgeon of the Eighth Brigade, New York State Militia. At the outbreak of the Civil war, when President Lincoln issued his first call for seventy-five thousand men, he was appointed senior inspecting surgeon. For some years after the termination of the war, he was engaged in practice in New York, where his skill and ability soon placed him in the front ranks of medical practitioners. During the years 1878 and 1879 he was in Europe, and a considerable portion of this time was spent in Italy, where he availed himself of the hospital experience of that country. Dr. Gregg has been very successful in his treatment of diphtheria, and has won high commendation from the Pasteur Institute of France for the success attending his efforts in the treatment of this disease. During President Arthur's administration he was appointed to fill the responsible position of assistant appraiser of the port of New York.

Dr. Gregg has always been a careful student of ornithology and ichthyology and in 1877-80 he published a catalogue in two editions of the birds of western New York. For many years he has been a contributor to the American Naturalist and other papers, and articles from his pen have received flattering commendation in European journals, also in the New York journals of medicine. He is also the author of several works of fiction. He is a fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

RUFUS BALDWIN WHITEHEAD, M. D.—1893.

Dr. Rufus Baldwin Whitehead, of Elizabeth, New Jersey, physician and surgeon, was born in Meriden, Connecticut, in 1871, a descendant on the maternal side from Lucius Baldwin, a native of Naugatuck, Connecticut, who was one of the noted abolitionists in the early times on anti-slavery agitation. He was subjected to physical violence on several occasions for the pronounced views he held on that subject. Emory J. Whitehead, father of Dr. Whitehead, was born in Winsted, Connecticut, in 1846, and married Miss Celia J. Baldwin, born in Naugatuck, Connecticut, in 1844. He is now president and general manager of the North American Mercantile Agency of New York.

Dr. Whitehead attended the public schools of his native town, and later entered Chappaqua Mountain Institute, a Quaker academy, situated at Chappaqua, New York, from which he was graduated in 1890. He immediately enrolled as a student in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, and in 1893 was graduated. He then served as interne in the General Hospital of Elizabeth for one year and as house surgeon in the Blake Memorial Hospital for Women, the gynecological and obstetrical annex of Elizabeth General Hospital, for six months, and on February 12, 1895, resigned from this position in order to enter into partnership with Dr. A. M. Mack, of Elizabeth, New Jersey. This association continued until the death of Dr. Mack, which occurred January 14, 1901; Dr. Mack at the time of his decease was acting in the capacity of mayor of the city, that being his second term. Dr. Whitehead has since continued to attend to the large practice that his partner and he had established. He was dispensary surgeon in the Elizabeth General Hospital from 1895 to 1902, and resigned from this to accept the position of attending surgeon to the same institution and obstetrician of the Blake Memorial Hospital. He has attained leading positions in the medical profession, as he has ever been an earnest and discriminating student, and his name can be placed among the representative physicians and surgeons of New Jersey.

Dr. Whitehead is actively connected with the American Medical Association; the Union County District Medical Society, of which he was the reporter for several years, and the Clinical Society of the Elizabeth General Hospital, of which he was the president in 1901. He is also a member of several fraternal and athletic societies. He is very fond of all outdoor sports, especially boating, fishing and hunting, and an interested student of natural history. On September 14, 1897, Dr. Whitehead was united in marriage to Miss Anna A. Warneke at Westfield, New Jersey. They have one child, Marguerite Whitehead.

CHARLES ALEXANDER CLINTON, M. D.—1887.

Dr. Charles A. Clinton, born in New York city, January 10, 1865, is a lineal descendant of Henry Clinton, Second Earl of Lincoln, whose great-great-grandson Charles was the first American member of the family, coming to the colonies from Ireland in 1729. Charles Clinton was the father of Major General James Clinton and Major General George Clinton of Revolutionary fame; George Clinton was the first governor of the state of New York, holding that position during the years 1777-1795, 1801-1804, and served in the capacity of Vice President of the United States from 1804 to April 20, 1812, dying in office. Dr. Clinton is descended from General James Clinton through his son Charles, his son Alexander, and his son Alexander James. De Witt Clinton was also a son of Major General James Clinton, and served as mayor of the city of New York during the years 1803-1807, 1808-1810, and 1811-1815, was governor of the state of New York from 1817 to 1823, and from 1825 until his death, which occurred February 11, 1828. Dr. Clinton is also related to the Hamilton family, descendants of Scotch nobility, through his grandmother, wife of the late Dr. Alexander Clinton.

Alexander James Clinton, father of Dr. Charles A. Clinton, retired from the active duties of life, served for many years in the capacity of president of the Eagle Fire Insurance Company and was also state treasurer of the Society of the Cincinnati, a hereditary society composed of the lineal descendants of General George Washington's staff officers. General Washington was chosen for its first president, and Marquis M. Lafayette was one of its honored members. Mr. Clinton was united in marriage first to Miss Sophie E. Vose, now deceased, and second to Miss Annie J. Nestell.

Dr. Charles A. Clinton obtained a practical education in the public and private schools of New York city, later was a student in the College of the City of New York, and his degree of Doctor of Medicine was awarded to him from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York in May, 1887. While a medical student he served as clinical assistant to the Chambers Street Hospital in 1886, and immediately after his graduation was appointed interne of the J. Hood Wright Hospital, a position he held for one year. In October, 1888, Dr. Clinton engaged in the active practice of his profession on the east side of Harlem, but in 1891 removed to the west side, where he has since resided; during the passing years he has won success and recognition, steadily advancing to a prominent position in the medical fraternity. From 1889 to 1891 he was the physician to the outdoor department of the Harlem Dispensary, and in 1890 was appointed surgical assistant to the Harlem Hospital Dispensary, and also clinical assistant to the J. Hood Wright Dispensary. Since 1891 Dr. Clinton has been connected with the department of health, and at the present time (1903) he is the acting diagnostician of the same department. He has written at various times a number of articles for presentation before the societies and for publication in the medical journals, among them being "Culture Work in Diphtheria," "The Preparation of Antitoxin," and "The Care of Infants in Summer." Dr. Clinton is a member of the State and County Medical associations, the Physicians' Mutual Aid Society, and the Harlem Medical Association, of which he was for several years the treasurer, and is at present (1903) president of the Alumni Association of the J. Hood Wright Hospital. Socially he is a member of the Bronx Automobile Club and of several other clubs. His favorite pastimes are driving, fishing and tennis.

On July 22, 1891, Dr. Clinton married Annette Quanz, of New York city, a daughter of the late Christian Quanz, who was a successful merchant of New York; her brothers are engaged in the importing business. The ceremony was performed in New York city by the Rev. Horace Cleveland. Their children are: Adele De Witt and Helen Sophie Clinton. Dr. Clinton and his family are members of the Protestant Episcopal church; for some time he was superintendent of the Sunday school connected with Holy Trinity church, and is now an active member of the Young People's Association of the same church. The home of the family is at 112 West One Hundred and Thirty-first street.

JOSEPH MEYER, M. D.—1877.

Dr. Joseph Meyer, for almost a quarter of a century engaged in the active practice of medicine and surgery in Brooklyn, New York, was born in New York city, October 2, 1854. His literary education was acquired at St. Francis Xavier's College. He was graduated in the New York College of Pharmacy, class of 1872, having secured the prize for materia medica and botany. Having the talent and inclination for a professional career he began the study of medicine under the personal guidance of Dr. J. Fuhs as preceptor and subsequently matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which he was graduated in the class of 1877.

After securing his diploma Dr. Meyer served an internship of eighteen months, from 1876 to 1878, in the Charity Hospital of New York, after which he went to Europe and prosecuted his medical studies in Munich under the supervision of Professor Oertel, a famous laryngologist, and he also pursued a course of instruction in Strassburg, where he gave special attention to the ear, nose and throat. After his return to his native country Dr. Meyer established an office in Brooklyn, New York, where for fifteen years he conducted a general practice, but relinquished the same in order to devote his attention to diseases of the ear, nose and throat, for which particular branch of the profession he had a natural preference, and in which his sanguine anticipations were more than realized. The professional career of Dr. Meyer has been marked by his learning and skill, his proficiency in medical practice, his honorable adherence to medical ethics, his personal integrity and prudent benevolence. For twenty-four years he has been actively connected with St. Catherine's Hospital, being second in rank on the medical staff, and at the present time (1902) is acting in the capacity of visiting and consulting laryngologist to the same, and also acts in a similar position at the German Hospital of Brooklyn.

Dr. Meyer is the author of a number of medical papers, the principal one being "Abortive Treatment of Peritonitis," published in the Brooklyn Medical Journal; he was also the inventor of a Post-Nasal Forceps. He is a member of the Kings County Medical Society, the Brooklyn Medical Association, the German Physicians' Medical Society of Brooklyn, and the Physicians' Mutual Aid Society. On November 17, 1880, he married Miss Maria Goetze, of New York, and the following named children were born to them: Albert, Charles, Josie, Martha, Lulu, Tillie and Walter Meyer.

GEORGE LONGKING MEREDITH, M. D.—1888.

Dr. George L. Meredith, general practitioner of Troy, New York, was born in Keeseville, Essex county, New York, October 30, 1857, a son of the Rev. Samuel and Ellen (Boomer) Meredith, the former named having been a clergyman of the Methodist Episcopal church, and he impressed his hearers with the conviction that he sought to aid them to a better personal life and a broader scope of mental vision.

The early years of Dr. Meredith's life were spent in the various cities to which his father was appointed to minister, and his literary education was acquired principally in the public schools of Albany and Troy. His professional training was begun under the direction of Dr. William Finder, Jr., and being an earnest and conscientious student, thoroughly in love with his work, he was soon qualified to matriculate in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which institute he was graduated with the degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1888. Thus fitted by thorough preparation for his chosen life work, Dr. Meredith entered upon active practice in Troy, New York, where he has won an enviable reputation as a skilled physician and surgeon. He carries on a general practice, has a very liberal patronage, which attests his superior understanding of the principles of medicine and his success in applying them to the needs of the suffering. He has acted in the capacity of coroner for Rensselaer county, New York, and at the present time (1902) is the assistant surgeon of the Samaritan Hospital of Troy, New York, having formerly acted as assistant physician to the same institution. Dr. Meredith is a member of the Rensselaer County Medical Society, the Rensselaer County Medical Association, and the New York State Medical Association.

In 1882 Dr. Meredith was united in marriage to Miss Elizabeth Yetto, of Troy, New York, and their children are: Eleanore J., Russell D., Laura M., and Clifford L. Meredith.

WILLIS NORTHUP BOYNTON, M. D.—1891.

Dr. Willis Northup Boynton, a physician of high standing in Brewster, Putnam county, New York, was born May 30, 1863, in Wayne county, New York, where he received his elementary education, which was completed by a course at the Brockport Normal School. His first choice of a profession seems to have been that of teaching; he held the position of principal of the high school of Charlotte one year, and served for three years in the same capacity in the Victor high school.

At length, however, Dr. Boynton arrived at the conclusion that teaching was not to be the work of his life, but that he should devote himself to the practice of medicine. With this end in view, he placed himself under the instruction of Dr. A. Mead, and after completing his preparatory studies, matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he graduated in the class of 1891. After serving for eighteen months as house physician of the New York Lying-in Hospital, he went in 1893 to Brewster, where he has already built up a large practice. Dr. Boynton's professional ability is unquestioned; he is a close student, a progressive thinker and an earnest worker, and is looked up to with respect and confidence by a large circle of patrons. Dr. Boynton purposes to become a member of the Westchester County Medical Society, there being no society of the kind in Putnam county. Dr. Boynton's reputation with his professional brethren is deservedly high.

FRANK W. ROBERTSON, M. D.—1895.

Frank W. Robertson, M. D., son of Jay and Laura (Wade) Robertson, was born in Owego, Tioga county, New York, December 10, 1868. He received a public school education, and after a preparatory course of medical reading with Dr. A. T. Pearsall, of Owego, he was admitted to the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York, and was graduated in 1895. He obtained a hospital practice at Bellevue Hospital, being assigned to different departments at various times. In 1896 he was placed in charge of the Pavilion of the Insane at Bellevue, where he remained until 1900, when he became senior physician to the Elmira Reformatory at Elmira, New York, which was founded in 1876, and is perhaps the most unique prison in the world in its methods of dealing directly with first offense criminals under thirty years of age. The inmates receive industrial training and their sentences are conditional, or indeterminate, as good behavior and progress in trade work and general education secure freedom after a limited time, while continued evil behavior causes their transfer to a state prison.

Willie H. Boynton

A little later in the same year, Dr. Robertson received the appointment of acting general superintendent in the same institution, and in 1901 succeeded Z. R. Brockway as general superintendent. That he was chosen as the successor of a man noted throughout the country for his knowledge of penal institutions and for his skillful management of the same, is a signal mark of the value in which his services were held. His experience of nearly five years in the Bellevue Insane Pavilion, New York city, has made him an expert in dealing with that class of individuals. In connection with his work he has studied thoroughly the problem of criminology and has solved many intricate points which were in doubt before. In his reports of the Elmira Reformatory for 1900-1903, he shows a thorough understanding of the needs and purposes of that institution. He gives his views with reference to the indiscriminate sentencing of individuals to reformatories without ascertaining their previous history or their present physical and mental condition, and he cites several instances which prove the practical value of his deductions. He recommends that in the case of criminals a history of each person should be obtained and an examination by a reputable physician be made before he is sentenced. This in many cases would prevent commitment to the reformatory of the insane, and markedly degenerate classes, which in his estimation is a place for the proper treatment of those still capable of reformation, and not a refuge for the criminally insane or for the hopelessly diseased. He has made many improvements in the reformatory and has greatly increased its efficiency in the special line of reformatory treatment which has been adopted. Greater attention has been paid of late to the proper quantity and quality of food, and to the filtering of the water, and all details making for good health; all of which has had a tendency to prevent disease, the death rate having fallen from eighteen in 1899, to six in 1902, with no cases of suicide. He has shown great judgment and discrimination in classifying the inmates. His knowledge of the insane has enabled him to discover many cases of that nature, and cause their removal to insane asylums, where they would have the proper care necessary to their condition. Those who need hospital care he has caused to be transferred to hospitals. He was instrumental in forming a new system for visiting the sick and for giving them prompt treatment. Prescriptions are now attended to by a regular apothecary, who has the whole charge of this department.

Dr. Robertson further advocated the scientific study of criminals by competent physicians, and argues that, as it is coming to be generally considered that crime is largely a disease, it should be treated as such, by increasing the number of physicians assigned to reformatories. He believes that only by individual treatment can there be individual improvement, and that reformatories, when conducted on the right lines by the intelligent co-operation of those who have the charge of them, are the only hope of restoring to a normal condition those who under careful treatment may become worthy members of society. It has been ascertained that seventy-nine per cent of the men discharged from Elmira become respectable and self-supporting citizens. This in itself is a sufficient indication of the remarkable management of this interesting institution. Dr. Robertson is a member of the American Medico-Psychological Association, a permanent member of the Alumni Association of Bellevue Hospital, a member of the National Prison Association and chairman of the committee for treatment of the criminal, of the New York State Conference of Charities and Correction.

JOHN ARCHIBALD SMITH, M. D.—1899.

Dr. John Archibald Smith, an extremely promising young physician of Peekskill, New York, was born in that city, June 11, 1877, and there passed his early years and received his primary education. Dr. Smith's decided predilection for the practice of medicine was early manifested, and after selecting that profession as a vocation for life, he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York in 1895, graduating in the class of 1899. Since his graduation Dr. Smith has not entered upon the active duties of his profession, but has devoted himself to the acquisition of an unusually wide range of experience in the Hudson Street Hospital, the Manhattan Eye and Ear Infirmary, the Good Samaritan Dispensary, the Post-Graduate Hospital, and the Lying-in Hospital.

Dr. Smith is married. It is his intention to devote himself to the active practice of his profession, and the thoroughness and enthusiasm which he has displayed in preparing himself for its duties have inspired in the minds of all his friends the brightest hopes for his future career.

LANSING BETTS WINNE, M. D.—1878.

Dr. Lansing B. Winne, for almost a quarter of a century engaged in the active practice of medicine and surgery in the city of Albany, New York, was born in that city October 2, 1856, a son of Charles Henry and Mary D. (Passage) Winne. The early educational advantages enjoyed by Dr. Winne were obtained in the Albany Free Academy, from which he graduated in the class of 1874; he then decided to take up the study of medicine, and in order to qualify himself for college he pursued a course of reading with Dr. Henry R. Haskins as preceptor; he then entered the Albany Medical College, where he further prosecuted his studies during the years 1874-77; he entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, in October, 1877, from which he was graduated March 1, 1878, with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. Dr. Winne then returned to his native city, where all his professional life has been passed, and within a few years he had built up a large and steadily increasing patronage, which he still enjoys. He has always been a hard worker, but despite his extensive practice has found time to read and study sufficiently to keep abreast of the times in the theories and practice of medicine and surgery.

Dr. Winne has acted in the capacity of dispenser of medicine in the Albany Hospital, Clinic Institute, and the Albany General Hospital; he has served as coroner's physician for the district for two years, and for twenty-eight months he filled the office of city physician. He was also examiner for the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company of Milwaukee. In the practice of his profession Dr. Winne has been conspicuous, being characterized by that clear perception which passes for intuition, and that care in diagnosis and treatment which insure thorough work and satisfactory results.

Dr. Winne is a prominent and useful member of the Masonic order, having been raised to the sublime degree of Master Mason in Temple Lodge No. 14, exalted a Royal Arch Mason in Temple Chapter No. 5, and created a Knight Templar in Temple Commandery No. 2. He is also a noble in the Ancient Arabic Order of the Mystic Shrine, his membership being in Cypress Temple. Dr. Winne is a Mason from principle and not from policy; his estimation of the standard of the order is high and he deprecates any course calculated to hinder its progress along this line. He has been a faithful and consistent member of the Church of the Holy Innocents, for which he acts in the capacity of vestryman and clerk of the vestry.

WILLIAM CLARK COOPER, M. D.—1884.

Dr. William Clark Cooper is recognized as one of the leading physicians of Troy, New York, where he was born October 1, 1858, a son of and fourth child in order of birth born to Dr. William S. and Sarah M. (Ives) Cooper, the former named being a native of Scotland, and the latter named a native of Rensselaer county, New York. The father, Dr. William S. Cooper, was one of the prominent representatives of the medical profession in the city of Troy, where he conducted a large and successful practice for the long term of forty-seven years.

Dr. William C. Cooper was reared in his native city, and was indebted to the public schools for an excellent literary education. Early in life he determined to become a member of the medical profession, and commenced his preparatory studies under the careful guidance of his father, and later pursued a course of study with Dr. E. D. Ferguson, of Troy, New York. He further prosecuted his studies in the Albany Medical College, from which he received the degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1881, after which he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which he was graduated in the class of 1884 and received his degree of Doctor of Medicine. Immediately after his graduation he returned to Troy and at once entered upon the practice of his profession; his close attention to business and skillful work have resulted in a more than ordinary degree of success. Dr. Cooper is a member of the Rensselaer County Medical Association, the New York State Medical Association, and the American Medical Association.

Dr. Cooper was united in marriage in 1893 to Miss Jeannie Lyman, of Troy, New York; they have one son, William Ferguson Cooper. Dr. Cooper has one sister, Isabella M. Cooper, who is a graduate of the Teachers' College and of Bernard College. They are the only surviving members of the family.

EDWARD FRANCIS DENNER, A. M., M. D.—1894.

Edward Francis Denner, located at 26 Church street, Paterson, New Jersey, was born in New York city, January 12, 1872, a son of John and Katherine (Dehm) Denner, the former being for many years one of the most prominent and successful real estate men of New York. Edward Francis Denner acquired his early education in the public schools of New York, and this instruction was supplemented later by his attendance as a student at St. Francis Xavier College in New York, from which he was graduated in 1891 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts and later received the degree of Master of Arts from the same institution. Subsequently he entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York city, from which he was graduated with the class of 1894. Dr. Denner began his active professional duties by serving in the capacity of an interne in St. Francis Hospital, New York, and later was attached to St. Joseph's Hospital, Paterson, New Jersey, in the same position.

Dr. Denner decided to remove to Paterson, where he entered upon the practice of his chosen profession. Aside from his private practice he is the visiting physician to the House of Divine Providence, Ridgewood, New Jersey. He is also actively identified with the Passaic County District Medical Society, the New Jersey State Medical Society, and the American Medical Association. On October 21, 1896, Dr. Denner was united in marriage to Miss Agnes Kerr, a native of Paterson, New Jersey, and two children have been born to them: John and Josephine Denner. Both Dr. and Mrs. Denner are very fond of music, being possessed of great talent in that art. They are members and attendants of the Catholic church of Paterson, New Jersey.

JULIUS C. BIERWIRTH, M. D.—1885.

Julius C. Bierwirth, M. D., 137 Montague street, Brooklyn, New York, was born in Bremen, Germany, September 11, 1856. His parents were Ernest and Helen (Hemken) Bierwirth, both natives of Germany. The schools of Germany, noted for their thorough and accurate system of instruction, gave young Bierwirth a solid groundwork for the scientific study in which he most excelled. He made a specialty of the subject of chemistry with the expectation of becoming a practical chemist. The line of study gradually awakened an interest in the applied science of medicine, and when he came to America in 1878, he naturally selected New York city as the place offering the greatest advantages in professional study. He had an opportunity to make considerable advancement in first principles with Dr. Francis Delafield, a son of Dr. Edward Delafield, and in 1882 became a student of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, graduating in 1885. After one year's practice in the Brooklyn Hospital, he opened an office in Brooklyn, where he first became known to many Brooklyn Heights citizens as a reliable and skillful family physician. He has retained and increased this reputation during his seventeen years' residence in Brooklyn, and by continued application in medical and scientific study.

together with strict attention to his professional duties, has won both private esteem and public approval.

He is a member of the American Medical Association, the New York State Medical Association, the Kings County Medical Association and the German Medical Society of New York. Dr. Bierwirth became connected with one of Brooklyn's most prominent medical families by his marriage in 1889, to Nettie Gerhardine Cocks, daughter of John J. Cocks, Esq., and granddaughter of Dr. Joseph C. Hutchinson, one of the most eminent physicians of his time.

JOSEPH MAURICE JACKSON, M. D.—1899.

Dr. Joseph Maurice Jackson, of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, was born in the city where he is now successfully practicing, his natal day being May 28, 1877. His father, Henry Jackson, was of German lineage, for his father was a native of Germany, and sailing for the new world took up his residence in New York city, where he engaged in merchandising. After arriving at years of maturity Henry Jackson wedded Elizabeth Levy, who was of English lineage, and they became residents of Pittsburg.

Here in the public schools their son Joseph Maurice began his education, which was continued in the Central high school, and in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York he prepared for the profession which he has chosen as a life work. He was graduated in 1899, and his professional career was begun as an interne in the Western Pennsylvania Hospital in Pittsburg, a position which he acceptably filled for sixteen months. His labors there were of a varied nature, and it was thus that he was well qualified by actual experience for the duties of a private practice when he opened his office in Pittsburg in 1901. Although but a brief period has since elapsed, he has gained a professional following that shows he is capable and conscientious in his work and his practice is constantly growing. He is now a visiting physician to the Infants' Home and Maternity Retreat and he belongs to the Allegheny County Medical Association and the Western Pennsylvania Hospital ex-Residents' Association. He is a fluent writer, and his articles which have appeared in medical journals are characterized by clearness and force.

PHILANDER COLLARD, M. D.—1882.

Dr. Philander Collard, for nearly twenty years a successful practitioner of Ossining, New York, was born in Chappaqua, Westchester county, New York, October 22, 1845, and received his elementary education in the schools of New York. In common with a number of others among his professional brethren, Dr. Collard, in early manhood, devoted himself for several years to the profession of teaching, but finally decided to make the practice of medicine his life work. After pursuing his preparatory studies under the guidance of Dr. Seth Shobe, he matriculated in the medical department of Yale University, where he remained one year, and then entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, graduating from that institution in the class of 1882.

Dr. Collard entered upon the active practice of his profession at Croton Lake, and in 1885 went to Ossining, where for many years he has occupied a prominent position in the ranks of the medical fraternity. Dr. Collard's career affords a good illustration of what may be accomplished by perseverance when supplemented by ability and determination, and may be cited as an object lesson to that large class of aspiring students who are endeavoring, under untoward circumstances, to reach the desired goal.

Dr. Collard is a member of the Westchester County Medical Society, of which he is also ex-president, of the New York State Medical Society, and is also registered as a physician in New York county. The last mentioned fact, testifying as it does, to Dr. Collard's unusually wide field of labor, affords the most incontrovertible proof, not only of his success as a medical practitioner, but of the confidence and respect inspired by his personality, which makes those requiring his services not only his patrons, but his lasting friends.

EDWIN HOLMES, M. D.—1895.

Dr. Edwin Holmes, of 44 West Forty-ninth street, New York city, was born May 6, 1866, in Hudson, New York, and is the son of the Rev. Dr. John McClellan and Frances (Van Vranken) Holmes. On the paternal side he is descended from George Holmes, one of the Pilgrims, who married a sister of Elder Brewster. His paternal great-grandfather was Dr. John McClellan, one of the first members of the New York State Medical Association, who died October 18, 1855. The Rev. Edwin Holmes was the grandfather of the present bearer of the name. His grandfather on the maternal side was Samuel Van Vranken, D. D., professor in Rutgers Theological Seminary, New Brunswick, New Jersey.

Dr. Holmes received his early education at the Albany Academy, and at Rutgers College grammar school. He graduated from Williams College in 1891, with the degree of Bachelor of Arts, and in that and the following year took a post-graduate course at Johns Hopkins University. He entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he graduated in 1895 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. He served as interne in the Hudson Street Hospital from February, 1897, to June, 1898, the last four months as house surgeon. In 1898 and 1899 he took a post-graduate course under Professor Virchow in the laboratory of the Berlin University, and on his return to the United States, in the latter year, acted for one year as attending physician in pediatrics to the Demilt Dispensary. He now holds the office of attending physician to the Baby-fold.

He is a member of the County, State and American Medical associations, and the New York Academy of Medicine, and belongs to the University Club. In politics he is a Republican. Dr. Holmes married, February 14, 1899, Frieda Boise. Two children have been born to them, John McClellan Holmes and Edwin Holmes, Jr.

WILLIAM CHAMPION DEMING, M. D.—1884.

Dr. William Champion Deming, one of the leading physicians of Westchester, New York city, was born September 1, 1862, in Litchfield county, Connecticut, and received his education in the schools of that town, at the Hartford high school, and at Trinity College, Hartford. His choice of the medical profession as a vocation for life partook of the nature of a foregone conclusion, his father, Dr. William Deming, holding a foremost place in the ranks of the profession, and William Champion Deming, in his preparatory studies, enjoyed the benefit of the careful and enlightened guidance of his father. At the end of his period of preparation, he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he graduated in the class of 1884. As a preparation for the active duties of his profession Dr. Deming was peculiarly fortunate in having a hospital experience of unusual thoroughness and scope, holding the positions of house surgeon of the New York Hospital, and assistant physician to the State Emigrant Hospital on Ward's Island, which latter position he occupied for two years and a half.

In 1890 Dr. Deming moved to Westchester, and there entered upon the active practice of his profession, in which he has built up a reputation for progressive thought, advanced methods and scientific skill in their application, which causes him to be recognized as a leader in the professional circles of his town and county. Dr. Deming is a member of the Medical Society of the County of New York, the Hospital Graduates' Club, the Alumni of the New York Hospital, the Physicians' Mutual Aid Association, and of the Country Club of Westchester.

EDWARD STERLING HODGSKIN, M. D.—1893.

Dr. Edward S. Hodgskin, successfully engaged in the practice of medicine and surgery in Brooklyn, New York, with residence at 13 Seventh avenue since 1894, was born in the city of Brooklyn, September 4, 1870, and his educational advantages were acquired in the Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute. Shortly after his graduation from that institution he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which he was graduated in the class of 1893.

After securing his degree of Doctor of Medicine, Dr. Hodgskin, being well qualified both by study and research for the active duties of his profession, established an office in Brooklyn, where he has practiced with a large amount of success ever since, owing to his professional skill, energy, ability, and devotion to the needs and sufferings of his patients. In addition to the duties that devolve upon him in attending to his large private practice, Dr. Hodgskin was appointed to the position of surgeon of the Brooklyn Heights Railroad Company, which duties he conscientiously performs. He is a member of the New York State Medical Association, the Kings County Medical Association, and the Long Island Medical Society, the International Association of Railway Surgeons and Society of the Associated Physicians of Long Island.

EMIL RAUTH, M. D.—1886.

Dr. Emil Rauth, for many years actively engaged in the practice of medicine and surgery, and whose present residence is at 695 Lafayette avenue, Brooklyn, New York, was born in Brooklyn, April 2, 1861, and his preliminary education was acquired in the public and high schools of his native city; later he was placed under private tuition and he also pursued a course of study in Cooper Institute, New York. Shortly after the completion of his studies he commenced his business career as a pharmacist, and his familiarity with this vocation, combined with his acquaintance with various members of the medical profession, was an incentive that led to his adopting his present calling. He began the study of medicine under the personal guidance of Dr. Joseph Meyer, and after pursuing the regular course of reading in the latter's office matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which he was graduated with the degree of Doctor of Medicine in the class of 1886.

Dr. Rauth entered upon the active practice of his profession in the city of Brooklyn, where his skill and ability soon won for him a liberal patronage, and the profession accorded him a foremost place in its ranks. He has ever continued a close student of the principles of medical science, and therefore his knowledge is broad and accurate. He is a member of the Brooklyn Medical Society, the German Medical Society of Brooklyn, the Kings County Medical Association, and the New York State Medical Association.

SAMUEL RANDOLPH FORMAN, M. D.—1857.

In the death of Dr. Samuel R. Forman, of Jersey City, which occurred February 19, 1900, the medical profession was deprived of one of its most accomplished and highly honored members. He came from a family which has been conspicuous in the history of New Jersey from the time when it was an infant British colony. His ancestor, John Forman, was driven from Scotland, a victim of religious persecution, and with others of his countrymen found an asylum in Monmouth county, and there aided in laying the foundations of civil order, religion and education. John Forman, great-grandfather of Dr. Forman, was sheriff of the county during the Revolutionary war; a brother of the same John Forman was an aide-de-camp to General Washington; and David Forman, a kinsman of these brothers, was a brigadier general of Monmouth County troops during the war, and was subsequently a member of the council of state, and for many years a judge of the court of common pleas.

Dr. Forman also came of a line of physicians, who were men of prominence in the profession. His grandfather, Dr. Samuel Forman (whose uncle and several other relatives were also practitioners), practiced at Freehold for more than half a century, was president of the State Medical Society in 1814, and one of the incorporators of the Monmouth District Medical Society in 1816; he was president of the latter named body in 1821, and served as treasurer for several terms. He died at the ripe age of eighty-two years. His son, John Fisher Forman, who followed agricultural pursuits, married Frans-anchi Smock, a descendant of Hendrick Malysen Smock, who came from Holland in 1654; these were the parents of Dr. Samuel R. Forman.

Samuel R. Forman was born in Freehold, New Jersey, May 22, 1834. He received a liberal education in his native town, and then entered the College of New Jersey at Princeton, from which he was graduated in 1854, before attaining his majority. He studied medicine in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, and was graduated from that institution with the class of 1857. He served as interne in Bellevue Hospital for nearly two years, and then established himself in Hoboken, New Jersey, where he was busily and successfully engaged in practice until the outbreak of the Civil war. In April, 1862, he received from President Lincoln a commission as assistant surgeon in the United States navy, and was assigned to the Gulf squadron under the renowned Farragut. His arduous duties were performed with ability and he was accorded much credit for his part in preserving the health of the fleet when the most dreadful of tropical diseases were apprehended. When peace was restored, Dr. Forman returned to civil practice, locating in Jersey City Heights. His abilities found speedy recognition, and he cared for a large and lucrative practice for about one-third of a century; he retired with the satisfaction of leaving a son as his successor.

In addition to the exactions of his private labors, his activities were extended to various public institutions and causes. He was at various times attending physician to the City Hospital and Christ Hospital, and for several years a member of the board of education. He was an active member of the Hudson County District Medical Society, of the Grand Army of the Republic and of the Royal Arcanum. A Presbyterian in religion, he was for twenty-five years an elder in the church, and for thirty years superintendent of the Sunday school. His political affiliations were with the Republican party.

Dr. Forman was married, October 4, 1860, to Miss Mary W. Alling, of Newark, who survives him. Three children were born of the marriage: Helen Randolph, who became the wife of Professor Henry Goodwin Smith, D. D., of Lane Seminary, Cincinnati, Ohio; Howard S. and May Alling Forman.

HOWARD SINNICKSON FORMAN, M. D.—1896.

Dr. Howard S. Forman, only son of Dr. Samuel R. Forman, was born in Jersey City, New Jersey. He was prepared for college in Hasbrouck Institute, and was graduated from Princeton College in 1893. Inheriting the intuitions of his long line of physician ancestors, and under the inspiration of his talented father, his tastes led him to medicine, and he entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons, from which he received his diploma in 1896, forty years after his father had been graduated from the same institution. In 1899 he completed a two years' interneship in the Methodist Episcopal Hospital of Brooklyn, and entered upon practice in Jersey City, succeeding his father. From the beginning he displayed marked aptitude for his profession, and has acquired an excellent practice. For some years he has served as assistant surgeon of Christ Hospital and as surgeon to the signal corps of the New Jersey National Guard. He is a member of the Hudson County District Medical Society, the Practitioners' Club, the University Club, the Golf Club and the Tennis Club, all of Jersey City. In religion he is a Presbyterian and is an elder in the First Church of Jersey City.

EDWIN REYNOLDS, M. D.—1877.

Edwin Reynolds, M. D., of Brooklyn, was born at Warwick, New York, in 1846, and is a descendant of two old and prominent families. His paternal ancestors came from England in 1630, where they had been active in both the civil and military affairs of the country. The Reynolds family were Puritans and first settled in Massachusetts, and afterward aided in the formation and settlement of the New Haven colony. During the Revolutionary war many members of the family did active service both as private soldiers and military leaders. The great-grandfather of Dr. Reynolds was captured in a skirmish with the Indians, and was held captive by them for some years. During the Revolutionary war he participated in the battles of Saratoga, Monmouth, and Indian battles in western New York, was captured at Fort Stanwix, and after peace was declared, was awarded a medal of merit by Congress for patriotism and bravery.

The father of Edwin Reynolds was Dr. Abram Lockwood Reynolds, a well known physician of Orange county. He married Katherine Elizabeth Du Bois, whose father, Dr. Elisha Du Bois, was, as a lad, a great favorite with General Lafayette, who, with General Washington, was on more than one occasion the honored guest at his father's hospitable home in Ulster county. Dr. Du Bois was a soldier in the war of 1812. His maternal ancestors were Huguenots and belonged to the once powerful family of Du Bois, one of whom was the Duke of Artois. On account of the horrible persecutions to which they were subjected, the family first fled to Holland, and came to America in 1660. It is a singular coincidence that one of his maternal ancestors was also an Indian captive.

Dr. Reynolds was one of thirteen children; two were physicians, one was professor of classics in a western college; only four of the family survive. He graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons in 1877, and after a short hospital experience took a post-graduate course in the Ecole de Medicine, Paris, and spent much time abroad in the study and observation of medical subjects. After traveling quite extensively over the different countries of Europe, he returned and settled in Brooklyn, and entered into the active practice of his profession, devoting himself chiefly to diseases of the respiratory organs. He is prominently identified with the Brooklyn Home for Consumptives, one of the largest charitable institutions for the exclusive treatment of phthisis in the country, and has been chairman of its medical staff for the last twenty-two years. He is also a member of the American Medical Association, New York State and Kings County societies, Medico-legal Society, Psi Sigma Kappa, and various philanthropic and patriotic organizations.

J. LIVINGSTON ROSEBOOM, A. B., M. D.—1880.

Dr. J. Livingston Roseboom, general practitioner of Rochester, New York, was born at Roseboom, in Otsego county, New York, April 9, 1853, the son of Henry and Cornelia R. (Livingston) Roseboom. Dr. Roseboom pursued his preliminary education in the public schools of his native county, and afterward continued his studies in different schools and institutes in Northampton, Massachusetts, and subsequently graduated from Yale College with the degree of Bachelor of Arts in the class of 1876. When his literary course was completed he decided to enter upon the study of medicine, and accordingly placed himself under the efficient instruction of Dr. David Little, of Rochester, New York, as preceptor, and later matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which he was graduated in the class of 1880. Previous to his graduation Dr. Roseboom served for one year in the capacity of interne in the Rochester City Hospital, and after receiving his diploma he accepted the position of assistant physician at the Kings County Hospital, at Flatbush, Long Island, where he completed his term of service excepting a brief period, having contracted the typhus fever while in service.

He then entered upon the active practice of his profession at Utica, New York, where for two years he was successfully engaged in attending to the needs of a large and steadily increasing patronage. At the expiration of this period of time Dr. Roseboom went abroad, spending about two years in Marburg, Vienna, Paris and London, the greater part of which was passed in Vienna where he availed himself of the best opportunities for perfecting his professional equipment. After his return to his native country Dr. Roseboom established an office in Rochester, where he has since been engaged, being now looked upon as one of the most successful representatives of the medical profession in the city. In addition to his general practice, he gives much time and attention to the science of dermatology, and acts in the capacity of dermatologist to the Rochester City Hospital. He formerly served as city physician, and was also a member of the United States pension board of examiners. Dr. Roseboom is an honorary member of the Hospital Medical Society, a member of the Rochester Pathological Society, also a fellow of the Rochester Academy of Science, a fellow of the Rochester Academy of Medicine, is a member of the Monroe County Medical Society, and a delegate to the Medical Society of the State of New York. He is also prominently affiliated with the Free and Accepted Masons.

JOHN FRANKLIN SOUTHMAYD, M. D.—1892.

Dr. John F. Southmayd, of 979 Lexington avenue, New York city, was born in Middletown, Connecticut, August 27, 1868, the son of George Moon and Caroline Burge (O'Neill) Southmayd, and traces his ancestry on the paternal side to William Southmayd, who settled in Gloucester, Massachusetts, in 1640; and to Elder William Brewster, who was born in 1566, was one of the passengers on the Mayflower in 1620, was elder of the church at Plymouth, and his death occurred in 1644. Other paternal ancestors were prominently identified with the political and commercial affairs of Massachusetts and Connecticut, and the family have been largely represented in the Revolutionary war, war of 1812, Civil war and also the Spanish-American war. On the maternal side he is a descendant of Bernard O'Neill, who was a prosperous merchant of New York city during the early part of the nineteenth century.

Dr. Southmayd pursued his literary education in the Johnson grammar school and Middletown high school of Middletown, Connecticut, and under the private instruction of the Rev. C. P. McCarthy, D. D., after which he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which institution he was graduated in 1892. The following year he was appointed physician to the out-patient department of the Presbyterian Hospital, New York city, retaining this position until 1895, after which he received the appointments of surgeon to the Ontario, Peerless Jennie, Pauper's Dream, Richmond and the Eureka mines of Montana. He served in this capacity until 1897, and during his residence in Montana, from 1895 until 1897, he was a director of the Ontario Mining Company of Montana; he also filled the position of president and director of the Westport Sanitarium at Westport, Connecticut, from 1890 to 1897.

Dr. Southmayd is a Republican in politics, and was the candidate for assembly in 1899 of the twenty-sixth assembly district, and is also a prominent member of the Republican club connected with that district. He is a vestryman and treasurer of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the Resurrection in New York city, president of the Tavern Club of New York city, and from 1894 to 1895 served in the capacity of surgeon to the New York division of the Sons of Veterans. On January 23, 1895, he married Kate Isabelle Farrer; they have one daughter, Katharine Southmayd.

FREDERICK AUGUSTUS LYONS, M. D.—1876.

Dr. Frederick Augustus Lyons, of New York city, was born November 2, 1854, in Toronto, Canada, and is the son of Joseph and Jane Sophia (Burnett) Lyons. His ancestors, on both the paternal and maternal sides, came from Kent, England. Barrow Burnett, his maternal grandfather, was a planter in the island of Jamaica, who, on the emancipation of the slaves in the British colonies, settled in Philadelphia as a retired merchant.

Dr. Lyons received his early education in the public schools of New York city, afterward entering the College of the City of New York, from which he graduated in 1873, with the degree of Bachelor of Arts, receiving, in 1876, the degree of Master of Arts from the same institution. He entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he graduated in 1876, with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. His thesis on genito-urinary diseases was awarded the Otis prize, and he graduated as class valedictorian. During his college course he studied under Dr. Willard Parker, and after graduation was associated for several years with his preceptor as assistant in the latter's regular practice. He served as interne in the Colored Hospital for one year, after which he spent another year in study in Vienna, Berlin and Paris. In 1879 he opened an office in New York city, where he has since remained. He has never become a specialist, preferring to devote himself to the work of a general practitioner. From 1876 to 1878 he was lecturer on chemistry to the American Veterinary College of New York, and from 1877 to 1882 adjunct professor of materia medica and therapeutics in the same institution. He was surgeon to the outdoor department of Bellevue Hospital for ten years, and attending surgeon to the Foundling Hospital for about seven years. He is now pathologist to the New York Throat and Nose Hospital, and has held, since 1895, the position of surgeon to the New York fire department.

Dr. Lyons is a member of the New York County Medical Society, the New York Academy of Medicine, the Physicians' Mutual Aid Association, the New York Medico-Surgical Society, and is a fellow of the American Academy of Medicine. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, affiliates with the Democratic Club, and formerly belonged to the New York Athletic Club. In politics he is a Democrat. Dr. Lyons has contributed to medical journals various articles on genito-urinary diseases. He was editor of the Hospital Gazette throughout the period of its existence, and has translated and edited a valuable treatise. Dr. Lyons married, May 8, 1888, Hattie Minerva Hoyt, of Danbury, Connecticut. They have two children, Barrow Burnett and Lawrence Vosburgh.

WHITMORE SNIVELY, M. D.—1866.

Dr. Whitmore Snively, who for more than a third of a century has practiced his profession in Pittsburgh, and has easily maintained a foremost position in the ranks of the medical fraternity here, is numbered among the native sons of Allegheny county, Pennsylvania, having been born here May 25, 1844. His parents were Christian and Mary (Stotler) Snively, and he comes of German ancestry. He began his education in the public schools of his native county and later continued his studies under the direction of a private tutor, John Beatty, who prepared him for college. His father was a civil engineer and the son assisted him in that profession for two years, or until he began preparing for the practice of medicine as a student in the medical department of the University of the City of New York. In 1865, however, while a student there, he, on becoming of age, offered his services to the government, and, passing the examinations, was appointed an assistant surgeon in the Union army, so that he obtained practical knowledge in his profession at the same time he was rendering valuable aid to his country. Upon the close of the war he returned to the north and matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, where he remained until his graduation in 1866.

Immediately afterward Dr. Snively came to Pittsburgh and opened an office, and it was not long before the public recognized his claim to a fair share of the public patronage, because of his understanding of the principles of medical science and practice and his unfaltering devotion to his professional duty. He seems to have inherited the scientific turn of mind of his German ancestry. At all events he is a physician of broad learning and is constantly adding to his knowledge by reading and research. He organized the health department of Pittsburgh in 1870, thus rendering important service to the city. In 1887 he became professor of the practice of medicine and clinical medicine in the Western Pennsylvania Medical College, the medical department of the Western University of Pennsylvania, while for about twenty-five years he has been physician to the Western Pennsylvania Hospital. He is a member of the American Medical Association and of the County and State Medical Societies, and in the discussions of these bodies he often contributes valuable thought and information, gleaned from his personal work. He has written numerous articles for medical journals and no man has stricter regard for the ethics of the profession.

In October, 1884, Dr. Snively was united in marriage to Miss Anna M. Richards, and to them have been born the following children: Olive, Philip Richards, Beatrice, Flora and Louis. The doctor votes with the Republican party and keeps well informed on questions of the day, political and otherwise, but has no time for political work. In matters of citizenship, however, he is progressive and enterprising and withholds his support from no measure for the general good, while at the same time he has kept abreast with the advance in his profession, and combined modern learning with broad experience.

EUGENE ALEXANDER FREIS, M. D.—1885.

Dr. Eugene A. Freis, for many years engaged in a general practice of medicine and surgery in Brooklyn, New York, was born in West Point, New York, September 13, 1860, a son of Andre and Augusta (Meyer) Freis, the former named being of French origin and the latter a descendant of a New York ancestry.

The educational advantages enjoyed by Dr. Freis were acquired at the Newburgh Institute and St. Stephen's College, from which he was graduated in the class of 1880. He began the study of medicine under the capable preceptorship of Dr. Alexander Clarke, and matriculating in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, he pursued a full course of study and was duly graduated from that institution in 1885 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. After a wide and varied experience in hospital work on Wards Island, Dr. Freis was transferred to the out-door department of Chambers Street Dispensary, where he remained for a short period of time. He then established an office in Harlem, where he commenced the practice of his profession and also continued his study in medicine, striving to keep abreast of all genuine progress made in the healing art. In 1889 he removed to Brooklyn, and on account of his success and skill in the treatment of disease has acquired an enviable reputation as a physician, and now enjoys a large and lucrative general practice among some of the leading families of Brooklyn, New York. He is also the attending physician in general medicine and diseases of the Children Central Throat Hospital, and the Polyclinic Dispensary, and a prominent member of the Brooklyn Medical Society.

On April 30, 1889, Dr. Freis was united in marriage at West Point, New York, to Miss Elizabeth McKay, a daughter of Dr. McKay, a leading physician and surgeon of Rochester, New York. One daughter has been born of this union, Elvira Freis. The family home is at 1301 Bushwick avenue, Brooklyn.

HEYDON STARRETT, M. D.—1880.

Dr. Heydon Starrett, for a number of years actively engaged in the practice of medicine and surgery in Brooklyn, New York, was born in New York city, May 12, 1859, and was there reared to manhood. He enjoyed the educational advantages afforded by the public schools of his native city, and desiring to enter a professional career, he began the study of medicine under the competent preceptorship of Dr. Breakell, and subsequently he pursued a course of study with Dr. Kemp as preceptor. After this course of instruction he was well qualified to enter college, and accordingly he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which he received his degree of Doctor of Medicine in the class of 1880.

Immediately after his graduation Dr. Starrett established an office in New York city, and engaged in the active and successful practice of his profession until 1891, when he removed to Brooklyn, and being of that able and energetic class of progressive physicians who love their profession and quickly and efficiently apply in practice what they have learned by close application and thorough study, he soon secured a liberal and select patronage among the leading families of the section of Brooklyn in which he located, and during the passing years this has steadily increased until now his practice extends over a large area of the city. Dr. Starrett resides at 805 Herkimer street, Brooklyn.

HENRY RICHARD HUMPHRIES, M. D.—1896.

Dr. Henry Richard Humphries was born in Brooklyn, New York, April 4, 1872, and is the son of Henry Richard and Mary Jane (Keen) Humphries. The former came to New York from Birmingham, England, where he had followed the profession of a musical director, in which he is still engaged. He was formerly professor of music in St. Mary's school for young ladies, and now holds the position of musical director of the New York Banks Glee Club and other musical organizations.

In his boyhood Dr. Humphries attended the public schools of his native city, and later became a student in the College of the City of New York, and at Trinity College, in Hartford, Connecticut. He then entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he received, in 1896, the degree of Doctor of Medicine. During the five years immediately succeeding his graduation he was resident physician in the Manhattan State Hospital for the Insane, and at the same time filled the position of clinical assistant at the New York Ophthalmic and Aural Institute. Since 1901 he has been actively engaged in practice as a specialist in nervous and mental diseases. He is assistant in neurology in the Vanderbilt Clinic, Columbia University, and examiner for the Craig colony for epileptics. Dr. Humphries is a member of the New York County Medical Society, American Medico-Psychological Association, and in politics affiliates with the Democratic party. He makes his home at 15 East One Hundred and Twenty-ninth street, New York.

HENRY ALEXANDER MacGRUER, M. D.—1898.

Dr. Henry Alexander MacGruer, of Syracuse, New York, who has won for himself an assured position as a skillful and successful medical practitioner, was born September 3, 1874, in Ogdensburg, New York, and is the son of John and Ida May (Wells) MacGruer.

His youth was passed at his birthplace, his primary education being received in the public schools of Ogdensburg, the DeVeaux Collegiate Institute at Suspension Bridge, St. Paul's School at Salem, Washington county, New York, and at St. John's School at Manlius. At the age of twenty years he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he was graduated in the class of 1898, which was the first class of the then newly instituted four years' course. He entered upon the active practice of his profession in Syracuse in 1901. His experience while in New York was especially valuable, being acquired through his connection with the Vanderbilt Clinic at St. Bartholomew's Hospital, and at the West Side German Clinic. Dr. MacGruer is a member of the Syracuse Academy of Medicine, and the Onondaga County Medical Society.

HENRY SPENCE, M. D.—1892.

Dr. Henry Spence, of Jersey City, New Jersey, a practitioner in general medicine and surgery, and occupying various important positions in leading professional institutions, is one of a family of physicians, and the third in lineal descent to embrace the calling. His paternal grandfather, for whom he was named, Dr. Henry Spence, graduated in medicine about 1820. He became a most capable surgeon, particularly as an oculist, and was well known as a teacher of medicine: several who enjoyed the advantages of his tutorship (in a day when medical schools were few and poorly equipped) rose to eminence in the profession.

Dr. Byron Spence, son of Dr. Henry Spence, was also a physician, was graduated from the University of New York in 1850, and was for many years engaged in practice in Starkey, New York. Two of his sons, Henry and Thomas B., the latter of whom located in Brooklyn, a nephew, three cousins and a brother-in-law, all became medical practitioners. Dr. Byron Spence married Miss Susan Beardslee, and of this union was born Henry Spence, in Yates county, New York, December 30, 1865.

Henry Spence received his literary education in Penn Yan Academy. He took preparatory medical courses in Cornell University and in the University of Vermont, and completed his professional studies in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York city, from which he was graduated in 1892. During this period he entertained a strong dislike for surgery, but he overcame this repugnance and has come to be known as one of the most skillful young surgeons in the state. His first year after graduation was devoted to work in the Christ Hospital of Jersey City, New Jersey, after which he engaged in general practice in the same city. He has retained his connection with the Christ Hospital from the time of his first service with that institution, and has been advanced to the position of attending surgeon, at the same time serving as president of its Alumni Association of Internes.

He is also a member of the American Medical Association, of the Hudson County District Medical Society, of which he was president in 1897, and of the Practitioners' Club of Jersey City, of which he was president in 1898. In all his professional relations he is known as thoroughly capable and conscientious. Dr. Spence is a member of the University Club, the Union League Club, the Carteret Club, Bergen Lodge No. 47, F. & A. M., and Woodland Lodge, K. P. He was married June 26, 1895, to Miss Clara L. Barber, of Penn Yan, New York, and of this marriage was born a daughter, Natalie Spence, and a son, Henry Donald Spence.

OTTO ALBERT WEIGAND, M. D.—1890.

Otto Albert Weigand was born in North Bergen, New Jersey, August 10, 1868, and was educated in the public schools of his native town. He later matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York city, and upon the completion of the full course there in 1890, soon after he had attained his majority, he was given the degree of M. D. He at once entered upon the general practice of his profession in Jersey City, and in the following year was appointed resident physician of the Hudson County Almshouse, the duties of which position he discharged most acceptably until 1893. And besides his general practice he has for several years past been the examiner for the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company at Jersey City Heights.

Dr. Weigand is ex-president of the North Hudson County Medical Society, is a member of the Hudson County District Medical Society, and a member of the Society for the Relief of Widows and Orphans of Medical Men of New Jersey.

ALFRED SWIFT HOUGHTON, M. D.—1880.

Dr. Alfred Swift Houghton was born in Franklin county, Vermont, January 21, 1855. On the maternal side he is a descendant of Richard Warren, who was the twelfth man to sign the compact on board the Mayflower, that illustrious ship which conveyed the Pilgrim fathers from the religious persecution they were forced to endure in their own country to this land of freedom; on the maternal side he can also trace his ancestry back to General Sedgewick, the colonial governor of Massachusetts.

Alfred Swift Houghton acquired his elementary education at the Barre (Vermont) Academy, and entered Dartmouth College, but before graduation from that institution he removed to Brooklyn, New York. Deciding to make the study of medicine his life work, he pursued a course of preparatory study under the guidance of Dr. William Swift, who was well qualified to impart this instruction, as he was a pupil of Dr. Willard Parker, who was one of the most distinguished and successful physicians of the city of New York. Subsequently Alfred S. Houghton matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he was graduated in the class of 1880. Previous to his graduation he served in the out-door department of the Chambers Street Hospital, and this experience proved of great value to him during his professional career. Immediately after receiving his diploma he opened an office in Brooklyn. He accepted the position of surgeon to the construction department of the Milwaukee, Lake Shore & Western Railroad in Wisconsin and Michigan, where he remained for two years; he then returned to New York, and in 1895 took an examination, and was appointed medical examiner in the civil service department by Mayor Strong.

JUDSON PHILBROOK PENDLETON, M. D.—1898.

Dr. Judson P. Pendleton, physician and surgeon of Brooklyn, New York, was born in the state of Maine, September 25, 1873. His early literary education was received in the common schools of his native town, and later he was a student in the East Maine Conference Seminary, class of 1894. After completing his course of instruction in that institution, he decided to become a member of the medical profession and matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which he was graduated with the degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1898. The following year he commenced the practice of his profession in Brooklyn, New York, and being endowed by nature with many of the qualities that distinguish the true physician, and having carefully prepared himself for the duties of his calling, Dr. Pendleton soon won the confidence of the community in which he settled and already has a large and constantly increasing general practice. Dr. Pendleton takes an active interest in everything that concerns the advancement of his profession, and he has connected himself with the Medical Society of the County of Kings, and the Kings County Medical Association, and is a member of the staff of the Brooklyn Central Dispensary. Dr. Pendleton's residence is at 42 Seventh avenue, Brooklyn.

JOHN DUFF McBARRON, M. D.—1892.

Dr. John Duff McBarron was born June 9, 1867, in New York city, and is the son of James William and Eliza Bell (Duff) McBarron. The former is a native of the north of Ireland, whence he was brought to New York in 1825 by his father, Patrick McBarron. James William McBarron, being at this time only six months of age, was educated in New York city, and became afterward prominently identified with educational affairs, holding for thirty-five years the position of school trustee and commissioner. For fifty-five years he was engaged in business as a manufacturer in New York, where he is still living, though having retired some time since from active commercial life. The maternal great-uncle of Dr. McBarron, James Mills, a native of New York city, served in the war of 1812, in the New York line, with the rank of captain.

Dr. McBarron received his preparatory education in the public schools of his native city, afterward becoming a student in the College of the City of New York, from which he graduated in 1889, with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. He then entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, receiving from that institution, in 1892, the degree of Doctor of Medicine. After graduation he became an interne in St. Francis Hospital, in which he served for three years as house surgeon. Since 1895 he has been engaged in general practice, making a specialty of gynecology. For five years, from 1897 to 1902, he held the position of medical school inspector for the health department.

Dr. McBarron is a member of the New York County Medical Society, the Academy of Medicine, the West End Medical Society, the Society of Medical Jurisprudence, and the Physicians' Mutual Aid Association. In politics he is a Democrat. He married, June 9, 1898, Minnie Estelle Adams; they have no children. Their home is at 872 West End avenue, New York city.

WILLIAM CARL SCHOENIJAHN, M. D.—1894.

Dr. William Carl Schoenijahn, a physician in good practice in Brooklyn, New York, was born in that city, October 1, 1872, and received his education in the grammar and high schools of his birthplace. Early in life he formed the intention, not to say the resolution, of adopting as the object to which his most earnest and lasting efforts should be consecrated, the science of medicine. As the first step toward the accomplishment of this aim, he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which institution he graduated in the class of 1894. An internship of eighteen months in the Norwegian Hospital of Brooklyn efficiently supplemented the thorough scientific training which Dr. Schoenijahn had received within the walls of the college, and at its conclusion he opened an office in Brooklyn, where he engaged in general practice. His success has been extremely satisfactory, and he enjoys in a high degree the respect and confidence of both patrons and professional brethren. Dr. Schoenijahn is a member of the Long Island Medical Society, and the Associated Physicians of Long Island, the Kings County Medical Society, and is chief of clinic for children, outpatient division, Seney Hospital.

GUSTAVUS ELIOT, M. D.—1880.

Dr. Gustavus Eliot, of New Haven, Connecticut, was born March 22, 1857, in North Haven, Connecticut. He is the son of Whitney and Emma E. (Benton) Elliott, and a descendant of the Rev. John Eliot, "the apostle to the Indians," who came from Widford, England, on the ship Lion, and settled in Boston, in 1631, and whose son, Joseph Eliot, was for many years the minister of Guilford, Connecticut.

Dr. Eliot was fitted for college in the Hopkins grammar school of New Haven, and entered the academic department of Yale University, from which he graduated in 1877 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. The same institution conferred upon him, after an examination, at the end of a year of non-professional study, in 1882, the degree of Master of Arts. On completing his academic education he entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he received in 1880 his M. D., having been during the winter preceding his graduation a member of the private quiz class conducted by Dr. Joseph E. Winters. After one year's experience at the workhouse, almshouse, and incurable hospitals, he returned to New Haven, where he has been engaged in the practice of medicine since February 13, 1882. For four years he was attending physician to the New Haven Dispensary.

Dr. Eliot is the author of numerous articles which have appeared from time to time in the medical journals, treating, for the most part, of mental and nervous diseases and of fevers. He is a member of the New Haven County Medical Association, and the New Haven Medical Association, in both of which he has held the office of president. He also belongs to the Connecticut Medical Society, the American Medical Association, and the Graduates' Club, of New Haven, and is a member of Trinity Protestant Episcopal church. Dr. Eliot married, April 21, 1887, Mary A. Forbes, of New Haven. Three children were born to them: Ruth Forbes, Margaret, and Esther Harrison. Mrs. Eliot died November 30, 1896.

RUSSELL STORY FOWLER, M. D.—1895.

The inheritance of mental gifts and special aptitude for a profession certainly find exemplification in Dr. Russell Story Fowler, of Brooklyn, whose father, Dr. George R. Fowler, is one of the world's most illustrious surgeons. Russell Story Fowler was born in Brooklyn, New York, May 1, 1874, and received his professional education and was brought into intimate acquaintance with surgical science under the careful guidance of his talented father. Graduating at the Polytechnic Institute in 1890, he soon after matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University, and was graduated in the class of 1895 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine.

As a result of a competitive examination he secured first place on the interne staff of St. Mary's General Hospital of Brooklyn, but for professional reasons did not accept the appointment. In August following his graduation he became connected with the out-patient department of the House of Relief, where he continued until March, 1896. Since 1896 he has been attending surgeon to the out-patient department of the Brooklyn Hospital, and has been adjunct to the surgeon in chief of that institution. He was for four years connected with the New York Polyclinic Post-Graduate School and Hospital, being clinical assistant in surgery for the first year and instructor in surgery for the following three years. He was also lecturer on anatomy and surgery in the Union Missionary Training Institute in 1897-8. From June, 1898, to February, 1899, he was acting attending surgeon to the Methodist Episcopal Hospital of Brooklyn, where he has since been first assistant surgeon, and has held a similar position in the German Hospital since 1899. In 1898-99 he was adjunct surgeon to the Bushwick Hospital, and in the latter year was appointed consulting surgeon to the Southern Dispensary and Hospital. In 1902 he was appointed a member of the Aertzlicher Collegium of the German Hospital.

This large amount of dispensary and hospital work, with continuous surgical service in the Brooklyn and German hospitals, has given Dr. Fowler a most splendid equipment for his chosen field of labor, which, together with a pleasing personality, has won for him a large and select patronage. During the winter of 1902-03 he made a tour of the principal hospitals of Europe in order to familiarize himself with the work of foreign surgeons. He is the author of several monographs on surgical subjects, chief among which are "Partial Enterocoele," "Interscapulo-thoracic Amputation," "Echinococcus Cyst of the Liver," "Empyema," "Tumors of the Liver," "Femoral Hernia," "Separation of the Epiphysis," "Fracture of the Patella." He has in course of preparation a work on the after treatment of surgical cases.

Dr. Fowler is a member of the Medical Society of the State of New York, the Medical Society of the County of Kings, the Brooklyn Surgical Society, the Brooklyn Pathological Society, the Associated Physicians of Long Island, the Brooklyn Medical Society and the German Hospital Society. He was married December 26, 1894, to Miss Nellie S. White, daughter of J. Frank and Lucy E. (Sammis) White, of New York.

CHARLES DEMAREST KLINE, M. D.—1892.

Dr. Charles Demarest Kline, physician and surgeon of Nyack, New York, was born in Rockland county, New York, November 13, 1866. He acquired his preliminary education in the public schools of Nyack, and later pursued his preparatory studies under the competent preceptorship of Dr. G. Blauvelt; he then entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which institution he graduated in the class of 1892 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. He spent one year and a half in St. Francis Hospital, thus putting to a practical test the theoretical knowledge he had obtained in his collegiate course.

With a broad and comprehensive understanding of the principles of the science of medicine, and with the varied experience which came to him in his hospital work, Dr. Kline located in Nyack and for six years was associated with Dr. J. O. Polhemus in caring for his extensive and select patronage. He soon demonstrated his ability to cope with the difficult problems that confront the medical practitioner, and in a short space of time won the recognition and approbation of his professional brethren. In 1900 he opened an office for himself, and although he is one of the younger representatives of the profession in the city, he has already built up a large practice, owing to his skill, ability and close application to duty. Doctor Kline is a member of the Rockland County Medical Association, the New York Medical Association and the American Medical Association; is one of the attending physicians and surgeons to the Nyack Hospital; also one of the managers and treasurer of the institution.

FREDERICK ADAMS SMITH, M. D.—1891.

Dr. Frederick Adams Smith, a well established physician of Troy, New York, belongs by inheritance no less than by birth to the state of which he is at the present time a citizen, both his parents being natives of New York. He was the son of William A. and Marietta (Otis) Smith, was born January 3, 1868, in Addison, Steuben county, New York, and received his primary education in the public schools of his native town, graduating at the Addison high school, where he was prepared to enter Cornell University. In this institution he pursued his studies for a time, but did not graduate, owing to a change in his plan of life. Having made choice of the practice of medicine as a life calling, he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he graduated in the class of 1891.

After an experience of nearly eighteen months in the Manhattan Eye and Ear Hospital, he settled in Troy, where he engaged in the active practice of his profession. Having a natural preference for the work of an ophthalmologist and aurist, he caused his studies and training to serve as a means of preparation for that department of medical science, and as a practicing physician he has devoted himself mainly to this specialty, in which he has been extremely successful. He holds the position of ophthalmologist and aurist in both the Samaritan Hospital and the Troy Orphan Asylum, finding in these institutions a field alike for the exercise of his scientific knowledge and practical skill, and of his kindly and benevolent disposition. Dr. Smith married, in 1897, Miss Mary A. Pease, a native of Troy, New York.

SAMUEL WOOD THURBER, M. D.—1894.

Dr. Samuel W. Thurber, of New York city, was born in Walpole, Massachusetts, September 4, 1867, a son of Edward Gerrish and Sarah Augusta (Wood) Thurber, whose ancestors were among the early settlers of New England. After residing for many years in the New England states, the paternal grandfather of Dr. Thurber removed to Monroe, Michigan, where he acted in the capacity of judge; his maternal grandparents settled in West Lebanon, New Hampshire, along the Connecticut river, where they were prominently associated with every worthy enterprise.

Dr. Samuel W. Thurber acquired an excellent literary education in the Madison grammar school of Syracuse, New York, which he attended from 1873 to 1881, in the polytechnic school of Hanover, Germany, where he was a student from 1881 to 1883, and in the Syracuse high school, where he was enrolled as a pupil from 1883 to 1886. He then entered Princeton University, from which institution he was graduated in 1890, with the degree of Bachelor of Science; the same year Dr. Thurber went abroad and commenced the study of medicine in the Ecole de Medicine, Paris, France, where he remained for one year. After his return he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, which institution bestowed upon him the degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1894. The first two years of his professional life were spent in the Presbyterian Hospital, where he served in the capacity of interne, after which he filled a similar position.

from August, 1896, to November, 1896, in the Sloane Maternity Hospital. Dr. Thurber was appointed in February, 1899, assistant physician in the department of diseases of the Nose and Throat of the Presbyterian Hospital and Dispensary, and in April, 1900, received the appointment of clinical assistant in the department of laryngology of the Vanderbilt Clinic, which positions he has occupied ever since. He also has a large and successful private practice. He is a member of the Alumni Society of the Presbyterian Hospital, the Alumni Society of the Sloane Maternity Hospital, the Quiz Medical Society, the Riverside Practitioners' Society and the West End Association.

Since June, 1899, Dr. Thurber has acted in the capacity of director of the American and Foreign Christian Union, director of the West Side branch of the Young Men's Christian Association since October, 1900, and filled a similar position in the New York Bible Society since December, 1901. On June 9, 1897, Dr. Thurber married Bertha Fisk, of New York, and their children are: Evelyn and Louise Wood. They reside at 104 East Thirty-ninth street.

JAMES ROBINSON ENGLISH, M. D.—1890.

Dr. James Robinson English, of Newark, New Jersey, a practitioner and public-spirited citizen, is descended from a family several members of which, in the different generations, have been prominent in the professional history of New Jersey. The race is of Scotch-Irish origin, and its representatives in the American branch have ever displayed those sturdy and forceful traits of character which have been from the earliest times so conspicuous in the original stock.

David English, great-great-grandfather of Dr. English, is the first ancestor who appears on the record. Whether he was the founder of the family in the sense of being the emigrant ancestor, it is impossible to say, as we are acquainted with no other detail of his history, except the fact that the name of his wife was Jane Robinson. James Robinson English, son of David and Jane (Robinson) English, married Alice Brower, and was a resident of Englishtown, New Jersey. From the fact that the town was named for the family, it is probable that this ancestor was among the earliest settlers. James Theodore English, son of James Robinson and Alice (Brower) English, was born, probably, in Englishtown, New Jersey, and was a graduate of Princeton University. He studied for the ministry, and was mainly instrumental in the building of the Presbyterian church in Liberty Corner, New Jersey, of which he was pastor for many years. The name of his wife was Mary Jobs. James Robinson English, son of James Theodore and Mary (Jobs) English, was born in Liberty Corner, New Jersey, and like his father, was a son of Princeton University, from which he graduated before entering upon the practice of the law, which he made his life calling. He married Sarah A. Redford, also a native of Liberty Corner, New Jersey.

James Robinson English, son of James Robinson and Sarah A. (Redford) English, was born August 8, 1865, in Elizabeth, New Jersey, and received his preparatory education in that city, where he attended the private school of which Dr. Pingaree was principal, afterward graduating from Lafayette College. Deciding to devote himself to the practice of medicine, he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which institution he graduated in the class of 1890. After serving one year as an interne in the Elizabeth General Hospital, and thereby gaining the practical experience so invaluable to a young practitioner, Dr. English entered upon the active duties of his profession in his native city; shortly afterward he removed to Irvington, New Jersey, where he was quickly and increasingly successful, earning for himself the reputation of a skillful and conscientious practitioner. At the end of eight years, Dr. English removed, in 1899, to 800 Clinton avenue, Newark, New Jersey, where he has a large and lucrative practice. During the Spanish-American war, Dr. English filled the position of surgeon to the First Regiment, National Guard, State of New Jersey, and rendered valuable service in personally examining every man who enlisted from that state.

Dr. English is connected with the clinic of St. Barnabas Hospital, and is a member of the Union County District Medical Society, the Essex County District Medical Society and the New Jersey State Medical Society. He is prominent in Masonic circles, being a member of Franklin Lodge No. 10, F. & A. M. He served for three years as master of this lodge, and received from the members the gift of the first past master's Masonic jewels ever presented by the organization. He is a thirty-second degree Scottish Rite Mason, and is also a member of Clinton Lodge, I. O. O. F., of Irvington Council, J. O. U. A. M., and of the Royal Arcanum.

The circle of Dr. English's sympathies embraces not only his professional interests, but every movement having for its object the advancement of the community in which he resides. This was exemplified during his residence in Irvington, where he served for five years as president of the board of education. He is possessed of artistic tastes, being a member of the Irvington Art and Camera Club, and is much interested in athletics, belonging both to the Newark Athletic Club and the Irvington Athletic Club. He is of a markedly social nature, holding membership in the Union Club of Newark, and the Clinton Hill Club. Dr. English married, June 16, 1892, Miss Janet C. Maddock, of Trenton, New Jersey, and of the three children born to them only one daughter, Bella Smith English, is now living.

CHARLES ABBOTT LIMEBURNER, A. M., M. D.—1879.

Dr. Charles Abbott Limeburner, of Jersey City, New Jersey, a successful general practitioner and holding professional relations with various important public institutions, was born November 18, 1854, on board the clipper ship Samuel Russell, during a voyage between the United States and China, the vessel being commanded by his father, Captain Joseph Limeburner, who was a native of Maine, and a life-long seafaring man of great capability and wide reputation in maritime and commercial circles. For some years following 1856, Captain Limeburner was in command of the Great Republic, the first four-masted clipper ever built and the largest sailing vessel built up to that time, and of which vessel he was part owner, after he had been for many years in the employ of A. A. Low. He married Miss Maria Potter, a native of Ulster county, New York.

Charles Abbott Limeburner was afforded an excellent literary education. He completed a course in the New Paltz Academy in New Paltz, New York, and then entered Rutgers College at New Brunswick, New Jersey, from which he was graduated in 1876, just after attaining his majority, and three years later his alma mater conferred upon him the degree of Master of Arts. In the year of his graduation in his literary course, he completed his course of study in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, and received the degree of Doctor of Medicine. He began the practice of his profession in Brooklyn, where he served in the out-patient department of the Eastern District Hospital as assistant to the late Dr. George R. Cutter. He was also assistant to Dr. Cutter in St. Catherine's Hospital, and was a member of the Kings County Medical Society. In September, 1880, he removed to Jersey City, New Jersey, where he acquired an extensive and lucrative practice. He was also called to the position of visiting physician to the Jersey City Hospital, and became a member of the Hudson County District Medical Society. He is now in the prime of life and has a laudable ambition to continually add to his professional knowledge, and is constantly extending the sphere of his usefulness.

Dr. Limeburner has attained to high rank in the Masonic order, and is a member of Bayview Lodge No. 146, Amity Chapter No. 31, Hugh de Payens Commandery No. 1, and Sovereign Consistory of the Scottish Rite for the state of New Jersey, and is affiliated with Mecca Temple of the Mystic Shrine of New York. He is also a member and medical examiner of Centenary Lodge No. 100, K. of P., and of the Greenville Yacht Club, and was formerly connected with the University Club of Jersey City and with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He is still examiner for the last named order, and also for the Grand Fraternity, of which he is a member. In a business way he was one of the organizers of the Rutgers Gold Mining and Reduction Company, of which he is the president, and is a director in the Consolidated Fuel Devices Company. On September 18, 1884, Dr. Limeburner was married to Miss Evelyn Frances Edwards, of Brooklyn, New York.

WILLIAM WATSON LAING, M. D.—1894.

Dr. William W. Laing, practicing physician and surgeon of Brooklyn, New York, residing at 1 Cambridge Place, was born in that city August 9, 1871, where he secured an excellent literary education first in the public schools, then at the Polytechnic Institute and later at the Adelphi College. After his graduation from the latter named institution he began the study of medicine under the careful guidance of Dr. G. R. Fowler, as preceptor, and subsequently matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which he was graduated in the class of 1894 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. Dr. Laing then had a hospital experience of one year in St. John's Riverside Hospital, Yonkers, New York, where he put to a practical test the theoretical knowledge he had acquired.

In 1896 Dr. Laing entered upon the active practice of his chosen calling in Brooklyn, New York, where his patronage has steadily grown in volume and importance. During his whole career he has been active, energetic and successful, having taken great pains to thoroughly equip himself for his duties; he also keeps well informed on all advances or improvements in the science to which he has devoted all his time and energy. Dr. Laing uses the best and most approved appliances known to the medical profession, and owing to his great skill and uniform success has attained high standing in his vocation. He also acts in the capacity of assistant surgeon to the orthopedic dispensary of St. Mary's General Hospital, and he is a prominent member of the Kings County Medical Society, the Brooklyn Medical Society, and the Brooklyn Pathological Society.

ALFRED BELL, M. D.—1895.

Dr. Alfred Bell, a well-known physician of Brooklyn, New York, was born in Brooklyn October 14, 1873, and received his primary education in public school No. 16, from which he graduated in the class of 1888. He then became a student at the Columbia grammar school, graduating from that institution in the class of 1891.

Having decided to adopt the profession of medicine as his life work, he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he was graduated in the class of 1895. Without delay Dr. Bell entered upon the active practice of his calling, opening an office in his native city of Brooklyn. His fellow citizens have testified to their appreciation of his medical skill by according to him the most liberal patronage, and he is regarded with respect by his brother practitioners for the able and conscientious manner in which he fulfils the duties of his profession.

Dr. Bell is a member of the Kings County Medical Society, the Associated Physicians of Long Island, and the Brooklyn Medical Society. Of this last named body he is corresponding secretary, being actively engaged in all matters pertaining to his calling, and also in the social circles of his native city. Dr. Bell was married, June 7, 1899, at Peekskill, New York, to Miss Emelie Smith, and one child, a son, was born of their union.

CHARLES FREDERICK BUCKLEY, A. B., M. D.—1898.

Dr. Charles Frederick Buckley, a practicing physician of Brooklyn, New York, was born October 18, 1872, in the city of which he is now a resident. His primary education was received in the public schools of his birthplace, and later he became a student at the Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute, from which he graduated in the class of 1891, having been thereby prepared to enter Columbia College. After completing his course at this last named institution, he graduated, in the class of 1895, with the degree of Bachelor of Arts.

Having decided to devote himself for life to the practice of medicine Dr. Buckley matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he graduated in the class of 1898. During the years 1899 and 1900 Dr. Buckley served as interne in the Methodist Episcopal Hospital of Brooklyn, and in 1901 began a career of private practice in his native city. He holds the positions of attending surgeon to the Dispensary, of clinical assistant to Dr. George R. Fowler, and is clinical photographer to the pathological department, all in connection with the Methodist Episcopal (Seney) Hospital. Dr. Buckley is a member of the Kings County Medical Society, the Brooklyn Surgical Society, and the Society of Ex-Internes of the Methodist Episcopal Hospital.

ARTHUR WALTER BINGHAM, B. S., M. D.—1896.

Among the many young physicians of East Orange, none has been more successful than Arthur Walter Bingham. He was born in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, May 19, 1870, and six months later his parents moved to Depere, Wisconsin. His parents were Webster A. and Fannie H. (Bird) Bingham, natives respectively, of Watertown, Wisconsin, and Cambridge, Massachusetts. At one time his father was a merchant, but later became president and general manager of the Pacific Clay Manufacturing Company; he died in 1902.

Dr. Bingham was an only son, but he has two sisters living in Los Angeles, California. His education was acquired in the public and high schools of Depere, in the University of Wisconsin, and he was graduated from Cornell University in 1893 with the degree of Bachelor of Science, and from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York in 1896. For sixteen months he was interne in the New York Cancer Hospital, now the General Memorial Hospital of New York; later he was resident physician of the country branch of the New York Infant Asylum, and was, for four months, connected with the Sloane Maternity Hospital of New York.

Dr. Bingham is a member of the dispensary staff of the Orange Memorial Hospital, the Essex County District Medical Society, Orange Practitioners' Society, New Jersey State Medical Society and William Pierson Medical Library Association. He was married, April 18, 1900, to Miss Mary Condit Dodd, of East Orange; their union has been blessed with one child, Annie Dodd Bingham. Both Dr. Bingham and his wife are members of the Munn Avenue Presbyterian church.

FREDERIC COLTON CURTIS, M. D.—1870.

Dr. Frederic Colton Curtis, for many years one of the leading and most highly respected physicians of Albany, New York, where he is still engaged in the active practice of his profession, comes of New England ancestry, both his parents having been natives of Lenox, Berkshire, Massachusetts.

Frederic Colton Curtis, son of the Rev. Lupton Warner and Elizabeth (Colton) Curtis, was born October 19, 1843, in Unionville, South Carolina, whither his father, who was a Presbyterian clergyman, had gone in search of health. Although born in a southern clime, Dr. Curtis was practically reared in the north, receiving his literary education in Beloit College, Wisconsin, the president of the college being an uncle by marriage. Before the time arrived for his graduation, the Civil war caused Dr. Curtis to abandon his studies in order that he might enroll himself among the defenders of the Union. In 1864 he enlisted as a private in the Fortieth Wisconsin Regiment of Volunteer Infantry, and served until mustered out. He then resumed his college course, graduating in the class of 1866, with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. Having decided to devote himself to the practice of medicine, he began his preparation by matriculating in the medical department of the Michigan State University at Ann Arbor, and subsequently in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he graduated in the class of 1870. He then supplemented his studies by a year's experience in the hospitals of Europe, principally in those of Vienna, after which he returned to his native land, and entered upon the active practice of his profession in Albany, New York, where he has since remained, gaining for himself, in the course of many years, during which he has been in the enjoyment of a lucrative practice, the reputation of a thoroughly practical, scientific and high-minded physician.

While still a student at the College of Physicians and Surgeons Dr. Curtis received from Beloit College, where he had graduated, the degree of Master of Arts. His professional positions are very numerous. In 1876 he became connected with the staff of the Albany Medical College, in which he holds the professorship of the chair of dermatology. He is a member of the Albany County Medical Society, in which, in 1872-73, he filled the office of secretary, and later that of president; of the New York State Medical Society he has likewise been a member, and since 1889 has held the office of secretary. He also belongs to the American Public Health Association, and the American Academy of Medicine. Dr. Curtis takes an active interest in everything relating to the welfare and improvement of the city in which he resides, especially on professional lines, and was for twelve years connected with the board of health of the city, serving at one time as health officer. In addition to the professional organizations with which he is connected, Dr. Curtis is also a member of the Society of the Mayflower Descendants, the Sons of the Revolution and the Grand Army of the Republic. He is a contributor to current medical literature, serving for fifteen years as editor of the "Transactions of the State Medical Society," and for ten years as editor of the Albany Medical Annals. Dr. Curtis married, in 1881, Miss Charlotte E. Bancroft, of Albany, New York.

PHILIP EDWARDS JOHNSON, M. D.—1894.

Dr. Philip Edwards Johnson, of Tuxedo Park, New York, a physician of wide and varied information and undisputed ability, was born, May 1, 1869, in Boston, Massachusetts, and passed his boyhood on Staten Island, New York, receiving his primary education in the schools of New Brighton on that island, and afterward becoming a student in Columbia University, New York, where he graduated in the class of 1891 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. Dr. Johnson decided to make the practice of medicine his profession, and with this end in view matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, graduating from that institution in the class of 1894.

He acquired the preliminary experience so necessary to a young physician in the Hudson Street Hospital, the Home of Relief, and the Sloane Maternity Hospital. This was further supplemented by an extensive European tour, and in 1900 Dr. Johnson went to Tuxedo Park, where he has taken an honorable position among his professional brethren. As a practitioner Dr. Johnson possesses a thorough equipment, and his natural endowments peculiarly adapt him to the calling he has chosen.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN OCHS, M. D.—1886.

Dr. Benjamin F. Ochs was born in New York city July 27, 1862, a son of Martin B. and Hannah (Köhler) Ochs, the former named being a native of Bath Homburg, Germany, from whence he came to this country in 1849 and settled in East Houston street, New York, where he established a drygoods trade, which he conducted successfully until 1888, when he resigned from the active duties of a business life; his wife, also a native of Germany, came to America in the year 1854.

Dr. Ochs prepared for college in the public schools of New York, entered the New York City College, where he pursued a three years' course, later was a student at Columbia College; the following two years were spent in the School of Mines, and finally he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which institution he received his diploma in the class of 1886. Shortly after his graduation Dr. Ochs went abroad and for two years and a half continued his medical studies, twelve months of the time acting in the capacity of assistant to Dr. Isidore Neuman, professor of dermatology in Vienna. After his return he acted as assistant to Dr. L. D. Bulkley, of the New York Hospital, and for six years and a half filled a similar position in the dermatological department of the DeMilt Dispensary in New York city. He is a member of the New York County Medical Association, the New York State Medical Association, the Harlem Medical Association, the Manhattan Dermatological Society and the German Medical Society. The residence of Dr. Ochs is located at 120 West One Hundred and Twentieth street, New York.

HUGH MACDOUGAL HART, M. D.—1894.

Dr. Hugh Macdougall Hart, general practitioner of Newark, New Jersey, was born in that city, October 10, 1872, a son of Joseph and Mary (Macdougall) Hart, natives of Scotland, the former named being engaged in mercantile pursuits in Newark; he has been connected with the same firm since 1860. Dr. Hart prepared for college in the Newark Academy, and after completing his course there matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he was graduated in 1894 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. After six months passed in general hospital work in Glasgow and Edinburg, he returned to his native land and spent an internship of one year in the City Hospital of Jersey City. He then chose Newark for his future field of work, and being well equipped for his chosen calling, at once began the practice of his profession and built up a large and rapidly increasing business. He won his way to public favor by giving evidence of the possession of superior ability in his line, and he now maintains a place among the leading practitioners of the city. His time and attention are exclusively given to his profession, of which he is a close and earnest student, doing all in his power to perfect himself in his chosen work. For the past seven years he has served as district physician of Newark, having the seniority in point of service in that position, and for the past two years he has been given complete charge of the Smallpox Isolation Hospital.

Dr. Hart is a member of the Essex County District Medical Society, and he is affiliated with Northern Lodge No. 25, F. & A. M. On October 17, 1900, Dr. Hart was united in marriage to Miss Mary Doremus, daughter of Henry M. Doremus, ex-sheriff of Essex county, now mayor of Newark and prominently identified with the commercial interests of Newark, New Jersey. Both Dr. Hart and his wife are earnest and consistent members of the Dutch Reformed church of Newark.

LEARTUS CONNOR, M. D.—1870.

The first American of this branch of the Connor family was Jeremiah Connor, who emigrated from the county of Westmeath, Ireland, and settled in Massachusetts in 1640, in Exeter, New Hampshire. In 1664 the direct line to Dr. Leartus Connor, from Jeremiah, is as follows: Jeremiah, the second, Dr. Samuel, John, William, Hezekiah, Leartus. John moved to Orange county, New York, in 1766, and William and Hezekiah remained there during their lives. Jeremiah the second was a captain, active in the French and Indian wars. His son, Dr. Samuel Connor, was lieutenant as well as surgeon in the siege of Louisburg, in 1745. His son, John, was a soldier in the battles of Crown Point and Ticonderoga; later, as sergeant, he took an active part in the war of the Revolution. John's son, William, was a soldier in the war of 1812, and William was the father of Hezekiah, who married Caroline, the daughter of Phineas Corwin, a soldier in the war of 1812; she was a cousin of Thomas Corwin, of Ohio, congressman for three terms, a United States senator, and secretary of the treasury under President Fillmore; and she was seventh in descent from Mathias Corwin, who emigrated from England and settled at Ipswich, Massachusetts, in 1633, and in 1640 at Southold, Long Island. From the union of Hezekiah and Caroline (Corwin) Connor there was born in Coldenham, Orange county, New York, January 29, 1843, Leartus, whose career is the principal subject of this biography.

He was prepared for college at Wallkill Academy, Middletown, New York, and in June, 1865, was graduated with the degree of A. B. from Williams College, receiving the degree of A. M. from the same institution in 1868. He was assistant principal of Mexico Academy, Mexico, New York, from 1865 to 1867, and commenced the study of medicine in 1865 under Dr. George L. Dayton, of Mexico; attended one course of lectures and did laboratory work in the department of medicine and surgery of the University of Michigan, and two courses at the College of Physicians and Surgeons in the city of New York, graduating from this institution in 1870. For about seven months following he practiced medicine in Searsville, New York, and then removed to Detroit, Michigan, where he has devoted himself exclusively to ophthalmology and otology since 1878.

Dr. Connor was lecturer on chemistry, including practical laboratory work, in Detroit Medical College during the years 1871-72, and professor of physiology and clinical medicine in the same institution from 1872 to 1879; professor of didactic and clinical ophthalmology and otology from 1878 to 1881; attending physician to St. Mary's Hospital, Detroit, from 1872 to 1878; was ophthalmic and aural surgeon to Harper Hospital, Detroit, 1881-94, and consulting ophthalmologist since that time; ophthalmic and aural surgeon to the Detroit Children's Hospital since 1887; consulting ophthalmologist to the Woman's Hospital since 1886. From 1871 to 1895 Dr. Connor edited a medical journal known successively as the Detroit Review of Medicine and Pharmacy, the Detroit Medical Journal, the Detroit Lancet, and the American Lancet.

He was secretary of the American Medical College Association from 1876 to 1883; secretary of the Detroit Medical College from 1875 to 1881; president of the Detroit Academy of Medicine during the years 1877-78 and 1888-89, and its secretary, 1871-72; president of the American Academy of Medicine, 1888-89; chairman of the ophthalmological section of the American Medical Association, 1891; vice-president in 1882-83, and trustee of its journal, 1883-89, 1892-94; president of the American Medical Editors' Association in 1894. Dr. Connor is an active member of the Detroit Academy of Medicine, the Wayne County Medical Society, the Detroit Quarter of Century Medical Club; was president of the Michigan State Medical Society in 1901-02, and chairman of its council, 1902-03; member of the American Academy of Medicine, the American Medical Editors' Association, the Michigan Academy of Science, Detroit Ophthalmological Club, American Association for Advancement of Science, American Social Science Association. From 1892 to 1894 he was a member of the committee appointed by the American Medical Association to revise its code of ethics and its constitution and by-laws. He was a member of the council of the ophthalmic section of the Ninth International Medical Congress, and was a member of the Pan-American Medical Congress.

Among his contributions to medical literature are: "Glaucoma Produced by Mental Disturbances," "Causes of Glaucoma," "Management of Glaucoma," "Syphilitic Diseases of the Eye," "Some Sources of Failure in Treating Lachrymal Obstructions," "Reproduction of the Membrana Tympani," "The Value of Hot Water in the Management of Eye Diseases," "Tobacco Amblyopia," "Primary Inflammation of the Mastoid Cells," "Eye Complications in a Case of Cerebral Tumor," "Drifting—Who, How,

Whither?" a medical sociological study; "The True Principles on Which the Medical Profession should be Associated, and the Character of the Resultant Organization," "The Development of the Sections of the American Medical Association," "The American Medical Journal of the Future, as Indicated by the American Medical Journals of the Past," "The First Twenty Years of the Detroit Academy of Medicine," "The American Academy of Medicine—Its Objects, Field of Work, and Suggestions for Increase in its Efficiency," "Memorial Remarks on James Fanning Noyes," "Needs for and Value of Public Health Work," and "Diseases of the Lachrymal Passages—Their Causes and Management." He is also the author of "Notes on the Treatment of Trachoma by Jequirity," "Strabismus as a Symptom; Its Causes and Its Practical Management," "The Technique of Tenotomy of the Ocular Muscles," "Ampliyopia from Suppression, Congenital Imperfections or Diseases; Which, or All?" "Remarks on the Management of Glaucoma," "Mumps as a Cause of Sudden Deafness," "How we can Obtain and Preserve the Eyesight and Hearing," "The Giant Magnet in Eye Surgery," "The Michigan State Medical Society—Its First Eighty-three Years—Its Present Wants and Suggestions for Their Supply," "President's Address, 1902; address at laying cornerstone of the Science Building at Ann Arbor, October, 1902, discussing "The Medical Department—Its Foundation—Its Growth as an Organization and Its Products as a Factor."

Dr. Connor is actively identified with the social, political, religious and business interests of the city of his residence, being a member of the Detroit Club, the Michigan (Republican) Club, the Bankers' Club of Detroit, Lake St. Clair Fishing and Shooting Club, North Chamut Fishing Club, Sons American Revolution, New England Society; is an elder in the Fort Street Presbyterian church, and a director in the Home Savings Bank, etc. On August 10, 1870, he was married to Miss Anna A., the oldest daughter of the late Rev. Charles and Nancy P. (Page) Dame, of Exeter, New Hampshire. Mrs. Connor is a graduate of Mount Holyoke College, class of 1866; is a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution, of the Society of Colonial Dames, and is president of the Michigan Mount Holyoke Alumnae Association; she is a collateral descendant from Sir Francis Drake. Their children, Guy Leartus and Ray, were graduated together in the class of 1897 from Williams College, each with the degree of A. B., and from Johns Hopkins Medical School, 1901, with the degree of M. D. Guy Leartus has since graduation practiced medicine in Detroit, Michigan, while Ray has served as house physician at Manhattan Eye and Ear Hospital, New York city.

JAMES BURNSIDE WANDS LANSING, M. D.—1885.

Dr. James Burnside Wands Lansing, general practitioner of Tenaflly, New Jersey, was born at Lishas Kill, Albany county, New York, January 18, 1858, and is a descendant of an old and honored Holland family. In the public schools of Albany county, New York, Dr. Lansing pursued his preliminary education, and this was further supplemented by a course of study in the Union Classical Institute of Schenectady, New York, from which he was graduated in 1879. He then entered Union College, but resigned at the end of his junior year to become a student in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which he graduated with the degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1885. Immediately after his graduation he went west and settled in Bay City, Michigan, and practiced his profession for a few months; he was then offered the position of assistant physician in the Eastern Michigan Asylum for the Insane, in Pontiac, Michigan, which he accepted, and remained in that capacity for the period of four years. In 1891 he removed to the state of New Jersey and located in the town of Tenafly, where he has built up a select and lucrative patronage. He has gained an enviable reputation among the representative members of the medical fraternity of New Jersey. In addition to his large private practice he acts in the capacity of visiting physician to the Englewood Hospital, holding this position since 1893.

Dr. Lansing is prominently identified with the American Medical Association, the American Academy of Medicine, the New Jersey State Medical Society and the Bergen County District Medical Society. Socially he is a member of the Holland Society. On January 8, 1890, Dr. Lansing was united in marriage to Miss Sarah H. Treadway, of Pontiac, Michigan. They have two children, Sanford Green Lansing and Charles Rumpf Lansing.

EDGAR BRONSON SMITH, M. D.—1880.

Dr. Edgar Bronson Smith was born December 23, 1853, in Winsted, Connecticut, and is the son of Jesse and Priscilla J. (Bradford) Smith, being a lineal descendant on the maternal side of William Bradford, first governor of the colony of Massachusetts Bay. In the autumn of 1871 Dr. Smith entered Lapham Institute at North Scituate, Rhode Island, from which he was graduated in June, 1874. In September of that year he entered Brown University, but was obliged, owing to a combination of circumstances, to leave college at the end of two years. In the autumn of 1876 he began the study of medicine in the office of Dr. George P. Baker, of Providence, Rhode Island, and a year after entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he was graduated in March, 1880, with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. In the autumn of 1880 he opened an office in Providence, Rhode Island, where he has since continued to practice. He was appointed surgeon to the Rhode Island Hospital, and in 1900 surgeon to St. Joseph's Hospital, both of which positions he still holds.

J. FRANK VALENTINE, M. D.—1879.

J. Frank Valentine, M. D., deceased, was born in New York, November 15, 1856. After the death of his mother in 1861, he lived on a farm on Long Island until he was twelve years of age, when he returned to New York and began his educational training at Public School No. 15, or "The old Fifth Street School," as it was called at that time. When his father died some years later, he was placed at the Weston Military Institute at Weston, Connecticut, where he remained two years. Having decided to prepare himself for the medical profession, he next entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York. During his course there, he acted as ambulance surgeon at the Eastern District Hospital in 1877, and as house surgeon at St. Catharine's Hospital in 1878. After he had secured the degree of M. D. in 1879, he served as surgeon to St. Catharine's Hospital for fourteen years. For twelve years he was surgeon of the Thirty-second Regiment, National Guard State of New York. He held the position of coroner's physician during the entire terms of Coroners Hesse and Nason; he was one of the visiting surgeons of St. John's Hospital, Long Island City, and was consulting surgeon to the Nassau Hospital at Mineola, Long Island; from 1890 till his death he was chief surgeon of the Long Island Railroad Company. He was a member of the Queens-Nassau Medical Society, and ex-president of the New York State Association of Railway Surgeons.

Dr. Valentine had a long record as a Mason and a high position in Masonic circles, having become a member of Greenpoint Lodge No. 403, in 1879, of which he was elected master in 1887. He has served as high priest of Altair Chapter, R. A. M., as commander of St. Elmo Commandery No. 57, K. T., and in 1902 was elected potentate of Kismet Temple, Ancient Arabic Order, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. He was a member of the Brooklyn Council, R. S. M., and a grand representative of the Grand Commandery of Louisiana. Among other associations in which he held membership were the Black Prince Lodge, K. P., and Montgomery Lodge, Knights of Honor, of which he was grand vice director in New York state. He lived at Richmond Hill, Long Island, with his wife and two children, and there his death occurred February 5, 1903.

HERMAN PETER GERBERT, A. B., M. D.—1883.

Dr. Herman Peter Gerbert, a general practitioner, was born July 18, 1858, in the house which is now his residence, 329 Main street, Orange, New Jersey. His parents were Peter and Anna (Cadmus) Gerbert. The father was born in the town of Faulquemont, Loraine, France, in the year 1804, coming to America in 1836. He is still active and enjoying vigorous health. His wife, Anna Cadmus, born in Bloomfield, New Jersey, in 1822, and died in 1890, was descended from an old Jersey Dutch family, the daughter of Thomas Cadmus, and granddaughter of Colonel Thomas Cadmus, an officer in the Revolutionary army.

Dr. Gerbert received his preliminary education at the Orange high school and was prepared for college by the Rev. John Oven (Columbia, '69). He then entered Columbia College and was graduated from that institution in 1880, an honor man, taking the scholarship in chemistry. He began the study of medicine under the preceptorship of the late Dr. William Pierson, of Orange, and in 1883 was graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city. After some study at the Post-Graduate School and service at St. Michael's Hospital, Newark, he entered into practice in his native place, Orange, where he is now engaged in active practice.

Dr. Gerbert is attending physician and president of staff of the Orange

Memorial Hospital Dispensary. He was one of the founders and is at present (1903) president of the Orange Mountain Medical Society. He is a member of the William Pierson Medical Library Association, and several other organizations and societies, the one in which he probably feels the most interest being the Orange Camera Club, of which he was one of the founders in 1892. He attends the First Presbyterian church. In politics he is a Republican, with independent leanings.

VICTOR ARTHUR ROBERTSON, M. D.—1883.

Dr. Victor Arthur Robertson, 834 Union street, Brooklyn, New York, was born April 19, 1861, in Brooklyn, New York, and is the son of John and Mary (Troop) Robertson, both natives of Scotland. He received his early education in private and public schools of his native city, and later attended the Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute. After a course of preparatory study under the guidance of Dr. A. W. Shepard of Brooklyn, he entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University, from which he received the degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1883. After a competitive examination he was appointed to a position in the New York City Hospital, where he served a full term in the surgical division, under Dr. Markoe, Dr. W. A. Bull, and Dr. Robert F. Wier. He then entered the Kings County Hospital in Flatbush, where he served until June, 1885, when he went abroad for one year, continuing his studies in Heidelberg, Vienna, Berlin, London and Edinburg. On his return he engaged in practice in Brooklyn, where he has since remained.

Dr. Robertson is a member of the Medical Society of the County of Kings, the Kings County Medical Association, the Brooklyn Pathological Society, the Associated Physicians of Long Island, the Alumni Association of the New York Hospital, the Alumni Association of the Kings County Hospital, and the American Medical Association. He married, in 1890, Maria L., daughter of Dr. Alexander Cochran, a graduate of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University, and a resident of Brooklyn, where for a half a century he has been engaged in the practice of medicine.

EDGAR CALVIN SEIBERT, M. D.—1896.

Dr. Edgar Calvin Seibert, a general practitioner, surgeon and specialist of Orange, New Jersey, is one of a prominent family of physicians, and was born in Newark, New Jersey, April 5, 1872. He is the son of the Rev. George C. Seibert, Ph. D., D. D., a German, who came to this country during the Civil war. Rev. Seibert has been connected with the Bloomfield Theological Seminary for the past thirty years; he is also the author of several theological works, through which he has become well known in this country and Europe. The degree of Ph. D. was conferred on him at Marburg, and that of D. D. by Princeton.

Dr. Seibert's mother, Alice (Orth) Seibert, is of Revolutionary stock, being descended from Captain Orth, who assisted in the capture of the Hessians at the battle of Trenton; Captain Orth's five sons also fought in the same war. One of Mrs. Seibert's brothers was United States representative from the state of Indiana for several terms and a close personal friend of the late ex-president, Benjamin Harrison.

Dr. Edgar Calvin Seibert was educated at the Newark Academy and Princeton College; he also took a course at the universities of Berlin and Marburg, where he gave special attention to surgery and diseases of the stomach. He is a member of the dispensary staff of the Orange Memorial Hospital and since 1900 has been city physician; he was one of the organizers, and during 1901 president of the Orange Practitioners' Society; he is also a member of the Essex County District Medical Society, New Jersey State Medical Society, American Medical Association and the William Pier-son Medical Library Association. He was president of the board of education from 1900 to 1902.

On January 18, 1899, Dr. Seibert was married to Miss Marie McQuade, of Princeton, New Jersey. One of his brothers, Henry Seibert, Ph. D., D. D., is pastor of the Morton Street Presbyterian church of Newark, and another brother, August Seibert, M. D., is professor of pediatrics in the New York Polyclinic Post-Graduate School.

JOHN TARLETON LUCK, M. D.—1868.

Dr. John Tarleton Luck, general practitioner of the town of Union, Hudson county, New Jersey, was born February 1, 1838, in a small settlement which is now the city of Dubuque, Iowa, and he is the oldest white man now living that was born in that state. He is the son of Larkin Philip and Catherine (Bright) Luck, the former named being a native of Virginia, where he was a manufacturer of farmers' wagons, for which there was a continual demand; he was one of the early settlers of the state of Iowa. His wife was a native of Kentucky.

Dr. John Tarleton Luck acquired his early education in the private schools of his native town, and later was a student in Harvard Medical School, from which he would have graduated in 1862. But in December, 1861, he entered the medical service of United States navy as assistant surgeon, and served in that capacity for five years; he was commissioned assistant surgeon by Abraham Lincoln, who was then the president of the United States. In 1865 Dr. Luck was promoted to passed assistant surgeon, ranking as captain of the United States army. During the progress of the war Captain Luck was assigned to duty on more than a score of different vessels. While performing his duties he was taken prisoner and confined for one year, three months of that period having been spent in Libby Prison, where one of his fellow prisoners was Dr. John Shrady, of New York. During his term of service he acted in various surgical capacities. Being stationed for some time in New York city, he had an excellent opportunity to complete his medical course in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, from which he was graduated in 1868 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. He resigned from the United States navy in 1868, and after several years located in the town of Union, New Jersey, as a general practitioner of medicine. Dr. Luck is a member of the staff of the North Hudson Hospital. He has the advantage of being quite a linguist, having acquired his knowledge of the foreign languages while in the service of the navy. He can converse to some extent in several languages, and he could visit almost any country in the world and in two or three weeks converse with the natives; this seems to be a natural gift.

Dr. Luck is president of the North Hudson County Medical Society, the Hudson County District Medical Society, and the American Medical Association. He was formerly a medical director for the Grand Army of the Republic of the state of New Jersey; he now acts in the capacity of chaplain of Ellsworth Post, G. A. R., of which he is past commander. Dr. Luck is a staunch adherent of the Democratic party; he takes an active part in all campaigns, but his interest is centered mostly in educational matters, having served for fifteen years as a member of the board of education. He and his family are members of the Episcopal church.

Dr. Luck married Miss Julia Carr, of New York city, whose brother, Gouverneur Carr, was one of the editors of the New York Tribune. Four children have been born to them: Arthur Cortlandt, who has been a resident of Nevada for many years, and is now the president of the First National Bank of Nevada and general manager of the Central Railroad of Nevada, being also greatly interested in mining stock; Mary Bright Luck; and the two other children died of malignant scarlet fever during infancy.

JEREMIAH NEIL MARTIN, A. B., M. D.—1895.

Dr. Jeremiah N. Martin, general practitioner of Mamaroneck, Westchester county, New York, was born in New York city, January 20, 1872, and was there reared to manhood. His educational advantages were obtained in the College of the City of New York, from which he was graduated in the class of 1892 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. Desiring to become a member of that profession which is one of the noblest to which a man can devote his life, he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which institution he secured his degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1895.

Immediately after his graduation Dr. Martin served an internship of one year on Randall's Island where he gained a varied experience in hospital work. In the autumn of 1896 he commenced the active practice of his profession in Mamaroneck, and his professional career from the first has been one of gratifying results, for he is thoroughly qualified both by study and experience for a physician, and has built up a reputation for superior skill and ability that is not merely local. Dr. Martin is prominently connected with the Westchester County Medical Society.

GUSTAVUS SCHLEGEL, M. D.—1883.

Gustavus Schlegel, M. D., was born at Hoboken, New Jersey, January 25, 1859. His parents were William and Emma (Rueff) Schlegel, who were born in Wuertemberg, Germany. The former is descended from August William von Schlegel, the celebrated German poet and critic, and on his mother's side from Swedish ancestors. William Schlegel came from Wuertemberg, Germany, to the United States in 1853, and settled in Rockland county, New York. Gustavus Schlegel began his education in a private school in New York city under the direction of Dr. Gerecke, afterwards attending public schools 55 and 35, and finally graduating from public school No. 35. After two years at the College of the City of New York, he spent five years in the study of pharmacy, graduating from the College of Pharmacy in New York in 1879. With this preparation he entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons in 1880 and was graduated in 1883. The next three years were given to the practical study and treatment of all diseases at the German Hospital, and in 1886 he entered upon the practice of medicine and surgery in New York city, where he is permanently located at the present time, at 151 West Ninety-first street.

His long connection with different hospitals has been in the line of surgery. He was surgeon to the West Side Dispensary from 1890 to 1894, and acted in the same capacity to the German Dispensary of the German Hospital from 1890 to 1893. He is medical examiner for the K. of H. Society, and for the K. and L. of H. Society. He is a member of the New York County Medical Society, the New York County and State Associations, the German Medical Association, and the Physicians' Mutual Aid Association. In politics he is a Republican. He was married to Mrs. Anna Schaeffler on January 9, 1887.

ANDREW MARTIN PIERCE, M. D.—1873.

Dr. Andrew Martin Pierce was born March 14, 1852, in New Bedford, Massachusetts, and is the son of Otis and Judith C. C. (Devoll) Pierce. The former traced his descent from Captain Michael Pierce, who came to America about 1645, and was brother to Captain William Pierce, one of the most celebrated masters of ships that came to New England. Captain Michael Pierce was the father of Ephraim, the grandfather of Ephraim, whose son Mial was the father of Nathan and the grandfather of Preserved, whose son, Martin, was the father of Otis mentioned above.

Dr. Pierce received his early education in the public schools of New Bedford, graduating at the high school in 1870. He studied medicine with Dr. Edward P. Abbè, and in 1873 graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University, with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. Before graduating he passed successfully a competitive examination for the position of assistant physician and surgeon to the Charity Hospital on Blackwell's Island. This position he filled from December, 1872, to October 1, 1874. He then took charge, for two months, of the Smallpox Hospital on Blackwell's Island. January 1, 1875, he began private practice in New Bedford, where he has since remained. Until July, 1882, he was associated with Dr. Edward P. Abbè, since which time he has practiced alone. In 1878 and 1879 he was physician to the "Poor Department" of New Bedford. Since the founding, in 1885, of St. Luke's Hospital of New Bedford, he has been connected with the staff as physician and surgeon.

Dr. Pierce has been a member, since 1875, of the Massachusetts Medical Association, in which for one year he held the office of vice president. He belongs to the South Bristol Medical Society, and has held all the offices of the society, in turn, in addition to serving for several years on the board of censors. He was at one time president of the local (New Bedford) medical society, and is a member of the American Medical Association. He married, October 17, 1878, Lizzie J. Macomber, and they are the parents of the following children: Edward Abbè, Elizabeth, Alice, and Curtis Macomber.

ROBERT LESLIE CARSON, M. D.—1890.

Dr. Robert Leslie Carson, of Rochester, New York, well known as a specialist in the treatment of diseases of the eye, was born September 15, 1864, in Canandaigua, Ontario county, New York, and is the son of Matthew R. and Elizabeth J. (Ostrom) Carson. He attended the Canandaigua Academy, where he was prepared to enter Williams College, from which he graduated in the class of 1886 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. Having decided to adopt as his life work the practice of medicine, his preliminary studies were pursued under the direction of Dr. John Van Duyn, of Syracuse, and after their completion he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which institution he graduated in the class of 1890.

He entered upon the active practice of his calling in Canandaigua, but shortly after accepted a position in the Training School for Feeble-minded Children at Elwyn, Pennsylvania, where he remained for one year, and then took up the study of diseases of the eye, for which he had developed a natural aptitude and preference. He spent six months at the Wills Eye Hospital, in Philadelphia, availing himself of clinical practice in this specialty, and then served for a time as interne in the New York Eye Infirmary. After this thorough course of preparation he engaged in practice in Rochester, devoting himself to the work of a specialist in diseases of the eye, in which he has attained a gratifying measure of success. He fills the position of ophthalmologist to the Rochester State Hospital for the Insane, and belongs to the staff of the out-patient department of the Rochester City Hospital. Dr. Carson married, in 1896, Miss Bertha M. Van Evra, of Fultonville, New York. Their family consists of two children, both daughters.

WALTER LEE KLINE, M. D.—1898.

Dr. Walter L. Kline, of Dayton, Ohio, is one of the younger members of the medical profession in that city, but has a reputation and practice which many an older physician might well envy. He is one of the native sons of Dayton, born February 24, 1872, his parents being Jonathan Henry and Masey (Stanfield) Kline. He is descended from German and English ancestry, and his entire life has been passed in the city of his birth, save for the period in which he was pursuing his education elsewhere. After attending the public schools of Dayton, he further continued his literary education in Union Academy at Union, Ohio, and next matriculated in Otterbein University, at Westerville, Ohio, in which he was graduated in 1894 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts; with a broad general knowledge, he began preparation for the practice of medicine in the College of Physicians and Surgeons at New York, where, on the completion of the regular course, he was graduated with the degree of M. D. in the class of 1898.

On the 1st of January, 1899, Dr. Kline opened an office in Dayton, where he has continued up to the present time with a constantly growing practice. He is well versed in the science of medicine and the use of remedial agencies and has been very successful in coping with the intricate problems which continually confront the physician. He has firm faith in the principles and policy of the Republican party and is a member of the McKinley Club of Dayton. He is also connected with the Garfield Club, with the Knights of Pythias fraternity and the Ancient Order of United Workmen and is medical examiner for the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company; and in the line of his profession he holds membership with the Montgomery Medical Society and the American Medical Association. At the present time he is serving as coroner of Montgomery county. He is widely and favorably known in his native city and is popular with many friends.

PORTER ROBERT McMASTER, A. M., M. D.—1892.

Dr. Porter Robert McMaster, of Syracuse, New York, where he has been for a number of years successfully engaged in the active practice of his profession, was born September 5, 1865, in Lockport, New York, and is the son of William S. and Mary (Reynolds) McMaster. In early childhood he was taken by his mother, his father having died when he was four years of age, to Greenwich, Washington county, New York, where he passed his boyhood and youth, receiving his preliminary education in the Greenwich union school, where he was prepared to enter Princeton University, from which he graduated in the class of 1888 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts, receiving in 1891 the degree of Master of Arts.

He began his preparatory medical studies under the guidance of Dr. Henry Gray, and later matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he was graduated in the class of 1892. He then received an appointment at the Presbyterian Hospital, where he remained eighteen months, serving for the last seven months as house physician. At the expiration of his term at the Presbyterian Hospital, Dr. McMaster became a member of the staff of the Midwifery Hospital in Broome street, and on closing his term of service at this institution went abroad for a time. Returning in 1895, he engaged in the active practice of his profession in Syracuse, where he is universally regarded as an able and experienced practitioner. Dr. McMaster has been for seven years connected with the medical department of the Syracuse University as lecturer on surgery, and is also visiting physician to the Hospital of the Good Shepherd.

Dr. McMaster is a member of the Syracuse Academy of Medicine, the Onondaga County Medical Society, the Princeton Alumni Association, the Porter R. McMaster.

University Club, the chamber of commerce, and a member of the board of trustees of Danforth Congregational church, giving proof by his membership in the two last named organizations that the duties and claims of his profession, absorbing as they are, are not allowed to consume all of his time, but that he reserves a portion for the maintenance of fraternal and social relations. Dr. McMaster was married February 6, 1896, to Miss Mary Tilford Robertson, of Cambridge, New York.

FREDERICK E. CLARK, M. D.—1873.

On another page of this work will be found mention of Dr. James G. Clark, the father of our subject and one of the honored physicians who have lived and labored as representatives of the medical profession on Staten Island, where also his father had been engaged in practice for many years, so that Dr. F. E. Clark is of the third generation to be here represented in this profession.

Dr. Frederick E. Clark was born at West New Brighton, Staten Island, New York, on the 23d of December, 1847, and was here reared to maturity, receiving his early educational discipline in the schools of this vicinity and in New York city. Early manifesting a desire to follow in the footsteps of his father and grandfather in choosing his vocation, he began his preparatory study under the preceptorship of Dr. John T. Metcalf, of New York, and then entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons, where he completed the prescribed course and was graduated as a member of the class of 1873, twenty-eight years subsequent to the date of his father's graduation in the same institution. After leaving college he was afforded the advantages of one year of travel in Great Britain and on the European continent, where he continued his professional study and investigation under most favorable auspices. Upon his return he engaged in the active practice of his profession on Staten Island, locating in West New Brighton. He has in recent years succeeded to the practice of his father and has enjoyed to a marked degree the high confidence and esteem which have been accorded the latter during his long and honorable professional career on the island. He is a member of the Richmond County Medical Society and is also a member of the staff of physicians of the Smith Infirmary.

GEORGE WAKEMAN OSBORN, B. A., M. D.,—1887.

Dr. George W. Osborn, of Bridgeport, Connecticut, is a descendant of one of the oldest families of New England, and his ancestry is of English origin. The line of descent in the mother country can be traced back to a member of the family who came to England in the train of William the Conqueror. His American ancestors have resided in Fairfield, Weston, and Easton, Connecticut, for the past two hundred and fifty years. Dr. Osborn is of the eighth generation in direct descent from Captain Richard Osborn, who came from London, England, to this country in 1634; on his mother's side he is also descended from an old and honored English and Revolutionary ancestry.

Captain Richard Osborn, at the age of twenty-two years, sailed from London, England, in the ship Hopewell bound for Barbados, February 17, 1634. He first settled in Hingham, Massachusetts, in 1635, in 1637 he participated in the Pequot war, and for the good services rendered during that period the general court of Connecticut granted him eighty acres of land in Fairfield. Prior to the year 1639 Mr. Osborn removed to New Haven, Connecticut, where he resided until some time between the years 1650 and 1653, when he located in Fairfield, Connecticut, purchased a large tract of land and became prominently identified with all the interests of the place, besides being a dividend land-owner of the town. In 1682 he deeded his property in Fairfield to his son John and his heirs, and removed to Westchester, New York, where he died in 1686. The name of his wife is unknown. His children were: John, David, Hannah, Priscilla, Sarah, Mary, and Elizabeth Osborn.

Captain John Osborn, eldest son of Richard Osborn, was born probably in New Haven, Connecticut, between the years 1640 and 1650. Subsequently he removed to Fairfield, Connecticut, where he became one of the prominent and influential residents of the town. He was united in marriage to Miss Sarah Bennett, daughter of James Bennett, and the following named children were born to them: Hannah, Samuel, John, David, Joseph, Elizabeth, and Sarah Osborn. Captain Osborn died in Fairfield, July 15, 1709, leaving a large estate for those times.

Joseph Osborn, youngest son of John and Sarah Osborn, was born in Fairfield, Connecticut, between the years 1680 and 1690. He resided there all his life, engaged in the occupation of farming, at which he was eminently successful. He married Miss Hannah Hubbell, daughter of Samuel Hubbell, and their children were: Elizabeth, Nathan, Hannah, Sarah, Abigail, Olive, and Peter Osborn. The father of these children died in Fairfield in 1731.

Peter Osborn, youngest son of Joseph and Hannah Osborn, was born in Fairfield, Connecticut, May 1, 1731, the year of his father's death. He was a farmer by occupation; he was married three times, and by his first wife, Lois, he had two children, Eunice and Ephraim; his wife died at the age of twenty-four years. He then married Miss Elizabeth Banks, who died at the age of eighteen years and two months. By his third marriage the following named children were born: Olive, Nathan, Sally, Lois, Peter, Polly, and Elisha Osborn. Mr. Osborn removed from Fairfield to Stephentown, New York, between the years 1783 and 1790, and thence to Kortright, Delaware county, New York, between the years 1790 and 1803. Here he probably died, but the date of his decease is unknown.

Ephraim Osborn, the son of Peter and Lois Osborn, was born in Fairfield, Connecticut, May 1, 1756. He resided in the parish of North Fairfield, later known as Weston and later still as Easton, in the locality now known as Aspetuck, where he was engaged all his life in agricultural pursuits. On March 2, 1780, he married Miss Mary Merwin, and the children born to them were: Elizabeth, David, Ephraim, Lois, and Betsy; the date of the death of his wife is unknown. Mr. Osborn then married, January 30, 1794, Miss Abigail Olmstead, and their children were: Peter, Mary, John W., Harriet, and Laurinda Osborn. The father of these children died in Weston, Connecticut, February 2, 1828.

David Osborn, the elder son of Ephraim and Mary Osborn, and grandfather of Dr. George W. Osborn, was born in the parish of North Fairfield, Connecticut, October 26, 1782. He resided in that part of Weston later known as Easton, Connecticut, where he devoted his time and attention to the tilling of the soil. He was a man of large stature and genial disposition, and for many years served as keeper of the town poor of Easton. He was united in marriage to Miss Priscilla Hull, daughter of Moses Hull of Weston, about the year 1807; she was born February 7, 1785. Three children were born of this union, namely: Malinda, born August 20, 1808, became the wife of John S. Thorp, of Easton; Sally, born February 18, 1814, died July 1, 1830; and David Hull, born January 20, 1821. Mr. Osborn died in Easton, Connecticut, July 26, 1871, aged eighty-eight years and nine months; his wife also died in the same town, January 15, 1857, at the age of seventy-two years.

David Hull Osborn, only son of David and Priscilla Osborn, and father of Dr. George W. Osborn, was born in Easton (then part of Weston), Connecticut, January 20, 1821. He resided in this town all his life, engaged in the occupation of farming, and being a man of great industry and economy, he was able to accumulate a comfortable competence from his labors. On June 14, 1857, he married Miss Melissa Banks, who was born in Easton (then part of Weston), Connecticut, September 15, 1835; she was a woman of genial disposition and great determination, also a zealous member of the Baptist church of Easton. Mrs. Osborn was of the seventh generation in direct descent from John Banks, a lawyer by profession and a highly educated and wealthy man, who came from England and became one of the first settlers of Windsor, Connecticut, but removed from there soon after 1643 to Fairfield, Connecticut, where he was prominent in all the exciting events of the period. The line of descent is through John, Benjamin, Benjamin, John; Nathan, grandfather of Mrs. Osborn, who was a soldier in the Revolutionary war; and Medad Banks, father of Mrs. Osborn, who was one of the prominent and successful farmers of Easton. The following named children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Osborn: George Wakeman, Orlando Banks, born January 1, 1868, engaged in agricultural pursuits in Easton, Connecticut, married Miss Edith Osborn of Easton; David Franklin, born July 20, 1873, also a farmer of Easton. Mr. Osborn died in the town of Easton, Connecticut, May 18, 1897, and his wife passed away in Bridgeport, Connecticut, June 14, 1900.

Dr. George W. Osborn, eldest son of David Hull and Melissa Osborn, was born in Easton, Connecticut, November 6, 1860, and his preliminary education was acquired at the district school of his native village and at the Easton Academy, where he prepared for college. In 1880 he entered Yale University, from which he was graduated in June, 1884, with the degree of Bachelor of Arts; he later matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which he was graduated with the degree of Doctor of Medicine in May, 1887. Dr. Osborn then served an interne-ship of one year as house physician of the Bridgeport Hospital, Bridgeport, Connecticut, and on June 1, 1888, established an office in Bridgeport, where he has since continued the active practice of his profession. In addition to the duties that devolve upon him by his large and constantly increasing patronage, Dr. Osborn acts in the capacity of medical examiner for many life insurance companies and benefit organizations. He also filled the office for about eight years of city physician and surgeon to the Emergency Hospital of Bridgeport, Connecticut.

Dr. Osborn is a member of the Bridgeport Medical Association, of which he was vice president in 1900; the Fairfield Medical Association, the Connecticut Medical Society, the American Medical Association, the American Academy of Medicine; and he is also prominently connected with the Bridgeport Scientific Society and the Alonquin Club. Dr. Osborn has also attained the thirty-second degree in the Masonic fraternity, being a member of Lafayette Consistory, Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite, of Hamilton Commandery No. 5, K. T., of Pyramid Temple, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, of the Foresters of America and a number of other fraternal organizations. In his political affiliations he is an adherent of the Democratic party, but has never aspired to any public office, preferring to devote his entire time and attention to his profession.

On December 27, 1888, Dr. Osborn married Miss Nellie Maria Boynton, of Peabody, Massachusetts; she was born in South Danvers, Massachusetts, December 16, 1862, a daughter of James A. and Ellen M. (Very) Boynton, of Peabody, and a direct descendant of William Boynton, of the Yorkshire (England) stock, who settled in Rowley, Massachusetts, in 1638, and whose ancestry can be traced back to the time of William the Conqueror. Mrs. Osborn obtained her early education in the public schools of Peabody, and this was supplemented by a course of study in the State Normal School, Salem, Massachusetts, from which she was graduated in January, 1881, after which she was engaged as teacher for several years in the public schools of Peabody, Massachusetts. Their children are: Lelius Boynton, born November 7, 1890, died July 3, 1891; Beatrice Melissa, born April 18, 1892, and Helen Eugenie, born February 20, 1897. In his leisure time Dr. Osborn's favorite pursuits are hunting and fishing. In 1900 Dr. and Mrs. Osborn made a tour across the continent of Europe and of Great Britain, visiting nine foreign countries.

EDWIN FIELD, M. D.—1873.

Dr. Edwin Field, of Red Bank, New Jersey, a long established and highly respected physician, is a representative of a family the founder of which emigrated from England and settled on Long Island in the early days of our colonial history; he traces his descent, on the maternal side, from ancestors who have been resident in New Jersey for two centuries. Whether the first member of the Field family whose name appears on the record was the emigrant ancestor, it is impossible to say, but from the fact that the present representative of the race is in the thirteenth generation of his lineal descendants, it appears probable that it was his son or grandson who founded the family in America. The record of the generations is as follows:

William Field (1), John (2), John (3), William (4), William (5), Robert (6), Robert (7), Elnathan (8), Robert (9), Elanathan (10). This last named ancestor removed from Long Island to Monmouth county, New Jersey, where he purchased a large tract of land and became a farmer. He married Mary Willet, and was the father of five children: Thomas, Elnathan, Caroline, Mary and Huldah. Mr. Field died in his ninety-seventh year.

Thomas Field (11), son of Elnathan (10) and Mary (Willet) Field, was born on Long Island, and after the removal of the family to Monmouth county, became a farmer there, in Middletown township. He married Rebecca, daughter of Captain Moses Shepherd, of the same township, who served in the Revolutionary war. Mr. and Mrs. Field were the parents of the following children: Joseph, Thomas S., Mary, who became the wife of Daniel West; Caroline, who married James L. Wilson; and Rebecca, who was the wife of Elnathan Field. The early generations of the Fields were members of the Society of Friends, but whether their connection with that body was formed before or after the emigration from England, is not stated. It would seem, however, that, in the twelfth generation, the family no longer belonged to the society, for we are informed that Joseph, eldest son of Thomas and Rebecca (Shepherd) Field, served in the war of 1812.

Thomas S. Field (12), second son of Thomas (11) and Rebecca (Shepherd) Field, was born in Monmouth county, New Jersey, and married Martha T. Taylor, a native of the same state. Of their family we know only that they had four sons, one of whom, Edwin Field, is mentioned at length hereinafter, and one, Joseph T., served in the Civil war with the rank of major.

Edwin Field (13), son of Thomas S. (12) and Martha T. (Taylor) Field, was born May 2, 1849, in Middletown, Monmouth county, New Jersey, and was prepared for college in Wilbraham, Massachusetts, later becoming a student in Rutgers College, New Brunswick, New Jersey. On making choice of the profession of medicine, he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, where he graduated in the class of 1873, after which he enjoyed the benefit of the thorough preparation for his future duties afforded by two years' experience as an interne in the Brooklyn City Hospital. At the end of this time he spent seven months in West Stockbridge, Massachusetts, where he took charge of the practice of a physician of that place, during the latter's absence in Europe, after which, his health having become somewhat impaired, he spent a year in Florida.

In the autumn of 1876 Dr. Field settled in Red Bank, where for a quarter of a century he has enjoyed a large practice. In the discharge of the active duties of his profession, Dr. Field has benefited not only his large and increasing circle of patrons, but the community in general, by the interest which he has manifested in everything which concerns the public welfare. He has exerted himself greatly in behalf of the Monmouth Memorial Hospital of Long Branch, where he fills the position of senior surgeon and chairman of the medical board. During the Spanish-American war he served for nine months as major surgeon of the Fourth Regiment, New Jersey Volunteers, and for five months of that time was in charge of the Second Division Hospital in Greenville, South Carolina. Dr. Field's contributions to the literature of the profession have been in the form of scientific papers presented at various times before medical societies and afterward published.

Dr. Field is a member of the Monmouth County Medical Society, the New Jersey State Medical Society, the American Medical Association, the Practitioners' Club of Eastern Monmouth County, and an honorary member of the Massachusetts Medical Society. His military services have not been limited to those rendered in time of war, but for several years he has been a member of the Seventy-third Regiment, National Guard State of New Jersey, and is now captain of the Second Cavalry Troop. Dr. Field is prominent in Masonic circles, having been seven times master of Mystic Lodge No. 21, F. & A. M. Five of these terms were in an order of uninterrupted succession, and Dr. Field is at present the incumbent of the office. He is past high priest of Hiram Chapter No. 1, R. A. M., past commander of Carson Commandery No. 15, and a member of Lulu Temple, Mystic Shrine, of Philadelphia. Dr. Field takes an active part in the social life of the community, being one of the organizers of the Monmouth Club. Dr. Field married, February 1, 1875, Miss Alice M. Hance, of Shrewsbury, New Jersey.

JOHN McCLARAN WATSON, M. D.—1821.

John McClaran Watson, son of Peter and Elizabeth Watson, was born November 20, 1798, in Wentworth, Rockingham county, North Carolina. His mother, a native Virginian, became a widow when very young, but with abundant means. This surviving parent was tenderly remembered for her piety, doting solicitude and graceful manners; but the son never claimed to have been thoroughly educated even in the schools of the neighborhood, although aided by his own bias acquired a very competent knowledge of mathematics and the Latin language. The Greek tongue he never heard pronounced save in a desultory manner, although he mastered it without a teacher after he was grown, even to the extent of aptly quoting from Homer.

His mother removed to Williamson county, Tennessee, when he was ten years old. His patrimony being sufficient in early manhood, he was placed in the office of Dr. Hosack and in due time was graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York. His return to Williamson county introduced him at once to a large and ever increasing practice, to which a fine presence and gracious manners are said to have materially contributed.

Comparatively early in his career he became a preacher, but did not abandon medicine. He settled at Murfreesboro, Tennessee, and rose to distinction as a surgeon, with a leaning towards obstetrics. Having invested, as he thought, with rare prudence, he lost his entire estate and was reduced to poverty, when more than fifty years of age. Deprived of wife, fortune, and without children, he appeared in Nashville, Tennessee, and established his lodgings and library in the medical college. He worked hard for its interests, improving himself in anatomy, and was later on solicited to be its president, but his other arduous duties compelled a declination of the honor.

It is said of him that he would make distant professional visits, leave at daylight and be in the city in time for his breakfast. Everything went well with him and thus he was enabled to acquire a residence of his own with spacious grounds. During the Civil war his parlors were converted into smallpox wards, a fine estate went into dilapidation, and when sixty years of age he became a wanderer, as it were, on the face of the earth. He died a widower for the second time September 19, 1866, near Nashville, Tennessee, from cancer of the stomach, loved, honored and respected, but in an impoverished community and without immediate heirs.

A. LINCOLN LEATHERMAN, M. D.—1893.

A. Lincoln Leatherman, physician and surgeon, was born September 30, 1864, in Versailles, Ohio, a son of Godfrey and Emily (Atwood) Leatherman. The great-grandfather of Dr. Leatherman, Eli Atwood, was commander of the English fleet at Halifax during the war of 1812, and his son, grandfather of Dr. Leatherman, was born on his flag-ship.

The early education of Dr. Leatherman was acquired in the public schools of Versailles and at the Ohio Wesleyan University at Delaware, Ohio, and later he studied medicine under Dr. H. C. Pearce, of Urbana, Ohio, after which he entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, being graduated from that institution in 1893 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. After graduation, that same year Dr. Leatherman began the practice of his profession in Indianapolis and has continued in that city ever since, making a specialty of surgical cases.

Dr. Leatherman is a member of the State Medical Society, the Marion County Medical Society and the American Medical Association, and is a contributor to various medical journals on matters pertaining to general practice. Fraternally he is connected with the Masonic and Knights of Pythias orders. In politics he is a Republican.

Dr. Leatherman married Lucy Horter, and three children have been born to them, as follows: Pauline Octave, who died in 1902; Emily, who died in 1895; and Hunter Lincoln.

MERLIN ZENO ALBRO, M. D.—1887.

Merlin Zeno Albro, M. D., a leading physician of Chicago, Illinois, was born at Poughkeepsie, New York, October 8, 1865, and is a son of Zeno and Mary Ann (Clark) Albro. The family record on the paternal side has been traced back to Ipswich, England, whence emigrated John Albro, a youth of seventeen years, in the year 1634. He located in the colony of Rhode Island, becoming the progenitor from whom all of the name in the United States seem to have descended. On the maternal side the family has come down from the families of Stacy Beaks, whose ancestors settled in Rhode Island in early colonial days, and of Vinson Clark, of Scotch-Irish extraction, who came to Orange county, New York, prior to 1750.

The early education of Dr. Albro was carried on in the public schools of Poughkeepsie, New York, from which he was graduated in 1881. After leaving the public schools, three years were spent in a drug store in Poughkeepsie, after which he entered the college of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, and was graduated from that institution in 1887 with the degree of M. D. During his college course he was fortunate enough to have as a preceptor Dr. Charles H. Wilkins, of New York city.

Dr. Albro began the practice of medicine in 1887 at Scranton, Pennsylvania, and continued it for five years in that vicinity, during which time he was for one year a physician for the city board of health, for one year the physician for the Silverbrook Coal Company, and for nearly five years was a regimental surgeon in the National Guard of the state. In 1892 he removed to Chicago, Illinois, where he has since been continuously engaged in general practice. While residing in Pennsylvania he was physician to in Pennsylvania Oral School for the deaf, and was also a member of the Lackawanna County Medical Society and the Scranton Medical Club. Since locating in Chicago, Dr. Albro has become a member of the Chicago Medical Society, the Illinois State Medical Society and the American Medical Association. He has been a member of the Ancient Free and Accepted Masons for a number of years.

D. BRYSON DELAVAN, M. D.—1875.

Dr. Delavan is an honorary fellow of the British Laryngological Association, New York city, is a native of the city, born May 1, 1850, son of Edward C. and Margaretta (Bryson) Delavan. His father, descended from a prominent Huguenot family whose ancestor came to this country at an early date, was a lawyer, born in New York in 1813, and died in 1896.

He began his education at Tarrytown on the Hudson, attending Holbrook's Military School, then entering the academical department of Yale College, from which he was graduated with the degree of Bachelor of Arts in 1872. He prepared for his profession in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, under the preceptorship of the late Professor Willard Parker, and was graduated in 1875. In the following year he entered upon practice in New York city, where he has attained a high position as a laryngologist.

Dr. Delavan's connection with professional institutions began even before his graduation, and has extended to the present time. At the close of the second of his student years in the College of Physicians and Surgeons he was made an interne in the City Hospital, and he continued in that position until 1876, when he became an interne in the Presbyterian Hospital. In 1877 he was appointed to the department of diseases of children and general diseases in the New York Dispensary, serving in that position for three years, and during the same period was in charge of the throat department in the Eastern Dispensary. From 1878 to 1889 he was surgeon to the department of diseases of the throat in Demilt Dispensary, and for five years beginning in 1879 he was curator and assistant pathologist to the New York Hospital. For five years he was attending surgeon to the Work House and Alms-house hospitals. In 1877 he became associated with the department of diseases of the throat in the College of Physicians and Surgeons and from 1887 to 1898 he was its chief of clinic. He has been professor of laryngology in the New York Polyclinic since 1886, and is now consulting laryngologist to St. Luke's Hospital, the General Memorial Hospital, Mt. Sinai Hospital, the Hospital for Ruptured and Crippled, the McDonough Hospital, and the Skin and Cancer Hospital.

A. Myer Delavan.

Dr. Delavan is an honorary fellow of the British Laryngological Association, and a member of the American Laryngological Association, the New York Laryngological Society, the New York Academy of Medicine, the American Medical Association, the New York State Medical Association, the New York State Medical Society, the New York County Medical Society, the Pathological, Clinical and Hospital Graduates' societies, and the societies of the Alumni of the City and Presbyterian hospitals. He has at various times visited the European scientific centers, and was in Copenhagen in 1884, and attended the Berlin Medical Congress in 1890, and the British Medical Association in 1895. For twenty years past he has been an industrious writer on professional topics, and has contributed chapters to Buck's "Reference Handbook of Medical Sciences," Keating's "Cyclopedia of Diseases of Children," "The Annual of Universal Medical Sciences," by Sajous, Dennis' "System of Surgery," and Park's "System of Surgery," besides a multiplicity of articles to leading American and foreign professional journals. He has invented various instruments and devices for laryngological purposes, some of which are widely used by the profession. His social connections are with the Century Association, the University, Yale and St. Nicholas clubs of New York city, and the Delta Kappa Epsilon and Scroll and Key college fraternities. Dr. Delavan was married June 14, 1899, to Miss Marion Rumsey, of St. Louis, Missouri.

WILLIAM W. QUINLAN, M. D.—1891.

William Wheelock Quinlan, M. D., was born August 10, 1867, at Lake Forest, Illinois. His father was the late Dr. Charles Harvey Quinlan, American born of Irish parents, and was one of the oldest practicing physicians and surgeons of Chicago and Lake Forest. He was also the first man to manufacture chloroform and administer ether in Chicago. He married Miss Ruth Efner, of American birth, but of Holland Dutch extraction, at Buffalo, New York, in 1846, when they removed to Chicago.

Dr. William Wheelock Quinlan removed with his parents from Lake Forest to Evanston, Illinois, in 1875, where he attended the grammar and high schools. During his early years he showed great interest in the study of chemistry and physiology, which finally culminated in the study of medicine. In 1887 he entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he was graduated in 1891. The following October he became an interne in Charity Hospital on Blackwell's Island, New York, remaining in that institution until April 1893, when he returned to Chicago, where he has since remained in practice.

Dr. Quinlan became house physician to the Maurice Porter Children's Hospital of Chicago in 1894, and in 1899 was appointed an attending physician to the same institution. In 1900 he was appointed associate professor of pediatrics in the Chicago Polyclinic, both of which appointments he still retains. He is also a medical examiner of the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York and has been since 1899.

Dr. Quinlan devotes the greater portion of his time to pediatrics and is a recognized authority upon this branch of his profession. Politically he has always been Republican in all national and state issues. Fraternally Dr. Quinlan is a member of the American Medical Association; the Illinois State Medical Society; the Chicago Medical Society; the Chicago Pediatric Society; the Chicago Medical Examiners' Association; the Physicians' Club; and the Chicago Athletic Association, and has always taken great interest in athletics.

CONSTANTINE RICHARD SCHAEFER, M. D.—1892.

Constantine Richard Schaefer, M. D., was born November 9, 1869, at Worms-on-the-Rhine, Germany, and is a son of Constantine and Anna M. (Thomas) Schaefer, both natives of Germany. Constantine Schaefer, Sr., was editor and proprietor of a newspaper at Worms-on-the-Rhine.

The literary education of Dr. Schaefer was obtained at the gymnasium in Worms. After locating in America, for seven and one half years he was connected with a drug store in Indianapolis, during which time he pursued his medical studies, and he was graduated from the Medical College of Indiana in 1890 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine, and from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city in 1892. After graduating he began the practice of his profession in Indianapolis and has continued successfully in that city to this day.

Dr. Schaefer is professor of therapeutics and materia medica in the Medical College of Indiana and attending physician at the Protestant Deaconess Hospital. He belongs to the State Medical Society, the Marion County Medical Society and the American Medical Association. Fraternally he is a member of the Masonic order, having taken the thirty-second degree, and is also a member of the Mystic Shrine. In his political opinions he is an independent.

SPENCER COLEMAN GROVES, M. D.—1884.

A number of the graduates of the College of Physicians and Surgeons have made St. Louis the scene of their life work, and they take rank among the leaders of the profession in that city. One of the prominent general practitioners is Dr. Spencer Coleman Groves, who is not only engaged in active practice but gives much attention to the scientific and didactic side of his work and holds a lectureship in one of the leading medical colleges of St. Louis. His ancestral history is connected with old colonial families, originally from Virginia, where Benjamin Groves had settled before a united nation was thought of. And George Owens Groves was a Kentuckian and married Miss Kizzie Hood, a daughter of John B. Hood and the sister of General J. B. Hood, of Civil war fame.

Spencer Coleman Groves was born to these parents in Montgomery county, Kentucky, on June 6, 1858. He was sent to a private school and later attended Center College at Danville, but from there came to Cornell College, where he was graduated in 1880. As he had already decided to study medicine, he entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons at New York and was graduated in 1884. For the following eighteen months he was an interne in the Charity Hospital in New York, and with this ample preparation he opened his office in St. Louis in 1886, so that he has been one of the surgeons of the city for over sixteen years.

Dr. Groves is professor in Beaumont College of operative surgery, and held a professorship in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of St. Louis on fractures and dislocations for one year. He is a member and vice-president of the St. Louis Medical Society, is a member of the Missouri State Medical Society, the American Medical Association, the Mississippi Valley Medical Society, and of the University Club at St. Louis. He has also contributed many scientific articles to the various medical journals, and is recognized as an authority on surgery. He holds to the Democratic party. He has never been married. He is very popular in professional and social circles.

FREDERICK FORCHEIMER, M. D.—1873.

Dr. Frederick Forcheimer, of Cincinnati, was born in this city, September 25, 1853, and is of German ancestry. His parents were M. S. and Fanny (Veith) Forcheimer, and under the parental roof he spent his boyhood days, entered the public schools at the usual age and therein continued his studies until he had taken the high school course. He prepared for the profession in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he was graduated with the class of 1873, and he has also been a student in the University of Würzburg and the University of Strasburg, in Germany. His private reading has also been broad and comprehensive, and he is continually adding to his knowledge and thus promoting his capability to cope with disease in the various forms in which it is manifest. He opened an office in Cincinnati, in 1875, and where his entire life has been passed Dr. Forcheimer has so directed his ability and efforts as to gain recognition as one of the representative members of the medical fraternity.

Dr. Forcheimer was united in marriage to Miss Edith Williams Perry, and to them have been born three children: Frances Elizabeth, Frederick and Landon Longworth. He is a man of social and kindly nature and has won many friends among those with whom he has been brought in contact outside the strict path of professional duty. His chief attention, however, is directed to his work as a member of the medical fraternity and he keeps in touch with the advanced thought of the day through membership in the American Medical Association, the American Pediatric Association and the Cincinnati Academy of Medicine. He has been officially connected with the Medical College of Ohio, the medical department of the Cincinnati University, and his work as a teacher has been in harmony with his work as a practitioner, characterized by superior ability and broad learning. He has also contributed for publication various articles on professional subjects.

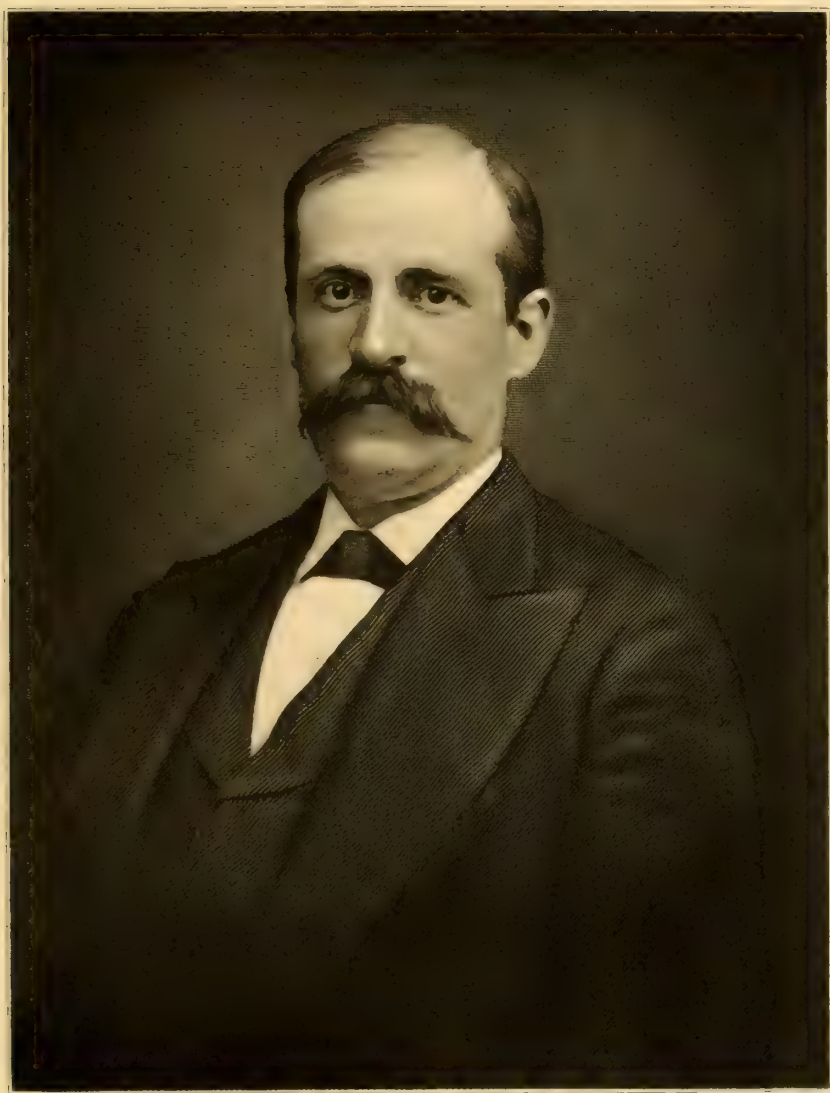

GEORGE MATTHIAS SWAIM, PH. G., M. D.—1870.

Dr. George M. Swaim, deceased, was a descendant of a family by the name of Schwayme, who emigrated to this country from Holland about the year 1669. The first American progenitor of the family was Anthony Swaim and the line of descent is as follows: Matthias Swaim, son of Anthony Swaim, had a son by the name of John Swaim, and his son Matthias Swaim, grandfather of Dr. Swaim, was united in marriage to Sally Baldwin, and lived to be almost one hundred years of age. His son, Ezra Baldwin Swaim, father of Dr. Swaim, was an architect and builder and erected several of the churches in Newark, New Jersey; he married Mary Jane Cross, daughter of George and Ruth (Hatch) Cross, the former named being the son of John Cross and the latter a daughter of Heman and Jennie (Baker) Hatch. Heman Hatch enlisted in the Revolutionary war when about sixteen years of age, and was at West Point, New York, when Major Andre was captured.

Dr. Swaim obtained an excellent literary education at the South Market street public school, Newark, New Jersey, began the study of medicine under the competent preceptorship of Dr. O'Gorman, of Newark, New Jersey, graduated from the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy in the class of 1867, and from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city in 1870. Shortly after his graduation he was appointed interne at St. Michael's Hospital, Newark, New Jersey, where he remained for a short period of time. The following four years he was engaged in a general practice of medicine and surgery in Newark, New Jersey, and then went out west and devoted his attention to prospecting for a number of years. He finally returned to the state of New Jersey, settled at Chatham and for twenty-five years devoted his whole time and attention to the duties of a physician as well as pharmacist and chemist. He was a member of the Morris County District Medical Society. He was an earnest and thoughtful student, spent many hours with his microscope, being noted for his microscopical tests, was fond of music and instructed himself on the piano, violin and flute. He also took pleasure in driving and bicycling, delighted in the beauties of nature and in the study of the stars. When a young man, he united with the Central Methodist Episcopal church of Newark, New Jersey, but after his removal to Chatham, was a regular attendant of the Presbyterian church.

On August 11, 1862, Dr. Swaim enlisted in Company D, Thirteenth Regiment, New Jersey Volunteers, being then only seventeen years of age. He participated in the battle of Antietam, Maryland, September 17, 1862, but on October 20, 1862, was removed to the hospital at Washington, D. C., returning to duty in March 1863. The following month he was sent to the hospital at Fairfax Seminary, Virginia, returning to duty February 28, 1864; on May 21, 1864, he was detailed as acting hospital steward, and July 1, 1864, was promoted to that position, which he retained until he was honorably discharged from the service of the United States. Dr. Swaim was with General Sherman on his memorable march from Atlanta to the sea.

At Chatham, New Jersey, October 17, 1894, Dr. Swaim married Louise Gardiner Purdy, daughter of Alsop and Sarah Pierson (Gardiner) Purdy, Geo. M. Swain.

of Chatham, New Jersey; she was a great-great-granddaughter of Captain William Day, who served in the Revolutionary war. Mrs. Swaim's ancestors were noted for their longevity; her great-great-grandfather lived to be ninety-three years of age; her great-grandmother was almost ninety years old at the time of her decease; her grandmother, who died in July, 1898, was ninety-five years old; her mother is now eighty-one years old; her father was eighty-five years old when he was killed on the railroad, July 20, 1894, and his father was eighty-seven years of age at the time of his death. Mrs. Swaim is very active in church work, having held office in the Ladies' Aid Society for over fourteen years, in the Sunday school for twelve years and an equal time in the Women's Christian Temperance Union.

WILLIAM H. McKELVY, M. D.—1866.

Dr. William Henry McKelvy is not only widely known in Pittsburg as a successful practitioner of medicine, but also as a valued citizen to whom the city is greatly indebted for the part which he has taken in advancing the educational interests. He deserves much credit for the upbuilding and improvement of the schools, and at the same time he has never been neglectful of his professional duties, and through thirty-five years has successfully practiced medicine and surgery in the city and surrounding districts.

He was born in Allegheny county, Pennsylvania, September 21, 1843, a son of James and Rosanna (Swisshelm) McKelvy. On the paternal side he comes of Scotch-Irish ancestry, and James McKelvy, the founder of the family in America, crossed the Atlantic from the north of Ireland in 1805, taking up his abode in Pennsylvania, upon a farm which is still in possession of the family. The Swisshelm family was established in the Keystone state at an early epoch by natives of Germany, and from colonial times down to the present representatives of the name have been numbered among the worthy citizens of the communities in which they have made their homes. John Swisshelm, the grandfather of Dr. McKelvy, served in the American army in the war of 1812.

In the public and private schools of Wilkesburg, Pennsylvania, Dr. McKelvy pursued his early education, and later was a student in the Western University of Pittsburg, and in Allegheny College at Meadville, Pennsylvania. It was while in the latter institution that he became interested in the subject of medicine and began reading along that line. Determining to engage in practice of medicine as a life work, he then entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, where he was graduated with the class of 1866. In the succeeding fall he returned to that institution and pursued another course of lectures, and throughout his professional career he has continually kept abreast with the advancement that is ever being made by the medical fraternity in their efforts to understand the problems of health and disease. In July, 1867, he opened his office in Pittsburg, where he has remained to the present, and the fact that he has never changed his place of residence stands in evidence that his career has been a successful one, and that the demands made upon his professional labors have fully occupied his time class of 1893, and next he entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, completing the regular course in that institution in 1896. Immediately afterward he came to Pittsburg, and almost from the time when he opened his office he has enjoyed a good practice and an enviable reputation as one whose skill and ability have made him worthy of the public confidence, and therefore the public patronage.

Dr. Easton married Ellen Holdon, on the 15th of November, 1900. He votes with the Republican party and in his fraternal relations is a Mason, while in the line of his profession he is connected with the Allegheny County Medical Society.

GEORGE PECK, M. D.—1847.

Dr. George Peck, for more than forty years a Surgeon and for ten years a Medical Director in the United States Navy, is a native of New Jersey and a descendant of one of the oldest New England families. The American progenitor of his branch of the family, Henry Peck, came from England to Boston in 1637; he subsequently became one of the founders of the New Haven colony and was a signer of the "Fundamental Agreement." His grandson Joseph removed to New Jersey and acquired a large tract of land which as a neighborhood was designated "Pecktown," a part of East Orange. He married Lydia, daughter of Edward Ball of Newark. In the sixth generation, Dr. Peck's grandfather, James Peck, served with the Essex county militia during the Revolutionary war. He married Hannah, a descendant in the sixth generation from Mathew Canfield, the ancestor of the family of that name. Their second son, Aaron, was a man of strong personality, prominent in public affairs, an officer of the militia, and Master in Chancery. He became a successful manufacturer, a large landholder, and president and principal owner of the Sussex Railroad of New Jersey. He contributed liberally to the religious, benevolent and public enterprises of his day, and was the principal founder of the Roosevelt Presbyterian church of Newark, to which he gave the original site, and this was added to later by his children. He also gave the site of St. Barnabas Episcopal church in Newark and contributed to its building fund. He married Miranda, daughter of Bethuel and Mary (Condit) Pierson.

George Peck, son of the parents last named, was born July 9, 1826, in what was known then as Pecktown. He obtained his preliminary instruction in the district schools and his advanced literary and classical education in private schools and under private tutors. He studied medicine under Dr. S. C. Brewster, Professor Joseph M. Smith and Dr. John H. Whittaker, all of New York City, and completed his professional studies in the College of Physicians and Surgeons in the same city, from which he was graduated, March 6, 1847, just after attaining his majority. He then served for some months in the City Hospital and at Blackwell's Island. In 1857 he received the degree of Master of Arts from the College of New Jersey.

In 1851 he began his Naval career, and entered upon a life of activity and usefulness. After passing a creditable examination before a Board of

George Peck

Naval Surgeons he was commissioned, February 25, 1851, Assistant Surgeon in the United States Navy, and in August following was ordered to the ship Cyane, in which he cruised in the Gulf of Mexico, among the Antilles, and in the Caribbean Sea, crossed the Isthmus of Panama before a railroad was constructed; assisted the survivors of Strain's expedition to Darien; journeyed to the Pacific via the San Juan river and Lake Nicaragua to San Juan del Sur; and was present at the bombardment of San Juan del Norte. In September, 1854, he was ordered to the Naval Rendezvous at New York, in the following year was detached, examined and recommended for promotion. On September 20, 1856, he was assigned to the Frigate St. Lawrence, Flag Ship of the Brazil station, and was engaged in the Paraguay Expedition. July 2, 1859, he was ordered to the Receiving Ship North Carolina at New York, and on March 9, 1860, to the Steam Sloop Seminole on the Brazil station. He was commissioned Surgeon, May 30, 1861, a month after the breaking out of the Civil War, and during all that great struggle he was continually engaged in the duties of his profession. Returning to the United States in the Seminole, which joined the North Atlantic Blockading Fleet, he served on the Potomac river during the attempted blockade by rebel batteries and ambuscaders. He took part in the capture of Port Royal in South Carolina, Fernandina in Florida, Norfolk in Virginia, and of the rebel batteries at Sewell's Point, and witnessed the destruction of the rebel ram Merimac. On August 18, 1862, he was ordered to the Naval Marine Rendezvous at New York, and was then assigned to the Dictator, of the North Atlantic Blockading Fleet, in which he served till the close of hostilities. On September 2, 1865, he was ordered to the Vanderbilt, convoy of the ironclad Monadnock, and sailed via the Straits of Magellan to San Francisco, witnessing en-route the bombardment of Valparaiso and Callao by the Spanish fleet. After the latter action he volunteered to assist in caring for the Spanish wounded on board their ship Villa de Madrid, and he also visited the Peruvian Hospital ashore and tendered his services to the surgeons in charge. On June 28, 1866, he was detached from the Vanderbilt and accompanied Commodore John Rodgers from San Francisco to the Atlantic coast overland, under an escort of mounted infantry. He was ordered to the New York Navy Yard, April 1, 1867. On May 25, 1869, he was ordered to the Frigate Sabine, which received on board the graduated class from the Naval Academy and sailed on a practice cruise to Europe and Brazil. On September 15, 1870, he was ordered to the New York Navy Yard.

Surgeon Peck was commissioned Medical Inspector, May 28, 1871. On May 11, 1872, he was ordered to the North Atlantic fleet, and reported on board the Flag Ship Worcester at Key West for duty as Surgeon of the Fleet. February 25, 1874, he was assigned to duty as a member of the naval Retiring Board and to examine officers for promotion, and on December 1st following was appointed a member of the Naval Examining board. January 14, 1878, he was ordered to examination for promotion and was commissioned Medical Director, with the rank of Captain, to date from January 7, 1878. April 30, 1879, he was appointed to the Retiring Board and made president of the Medical Examining Board. September 3, 1879, he was made president of the Board of Physical Examination of officers for promotion; February 29, 1880, he was placed on duty on the Naval Medical Examining Board at Philadelphia, and on July 2d following was ordered to assume the duties of Medical Director in command of the Naval Hospital at Mare Island, California. He was on leave of absence from October 8 to December 15, 1883, when he was assigned to duty on the Naval Board of Inspection and Survey; was detached and placed on waiting orders, June 3, 1885; was appointed a member of a Court of Inquiry at Washington, June 20, 1884, and was on such duty till December 31, 1884. April 9, 1884, he was ordered as a delegate from the Medical Department of the Navy to the American Medical Association, and was similarly ordered to the session at New Orleans, April 23, 1885; also was ordered as a delegate to the Ninth International Medical Congress at Washington, August 28, 1887, and as a member of the Examining Board of the Navy Department, November 5, 1887. On July 9, 1888, in conformity with the law, Medical Director Peck was placed on the retired list on account of length of service. His entire term of official service had covered the long period of nearly forty years, including the most exciting epoch in the history of the nation. As a patriot and in the service he rendered his country, his name is written worthily in the annals of the times, and his record is a precious legacy to his family and the profession which he has so long adorned.

Dr. Peck is a member of the American Medical Association, American Academy of Medicine, American Public Health Association, New York Academy of Medicine, New York Society for the Relief of Widows and Orphans of Medical Men, Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States, Society of the Sons of the American Revolution of New Jersey, Washington Headquarters Association at Morristown, New Jersey, and of the New Jersey Historical Society. He is also a member of the Union League, the University and Princeton clubs of New York, and of the Essex County Country Club of Orange, and of the Essex Club of Newark, New Jersey. During his entire naval career he regarded East Orange as his home. After his retirement he took up his abode with his sister, Mrs. D. H. Pierson, at Elizabeth, New Jersey. Throughout his life his personal character has remained unsullied, and he has been habitually sympathetic and charitable, but his generous benefactions were made in such an unostentatious manner that they passed unheralded except by those grateful ones whose pathway in life he had smoothed by his kindly deeds. On September 27, 1847, Dr. Peck was married to Eliza Adelia Brewster, the daughter of Dr. Stephen Coffin Brewster and Adelia Louisa Kimball, and the granddaughter of Dr. Royal Brewster and Dorcas Coffin.

OSCAR GEORGE HARRISON, M. D.—1891.

Oscar George Harrison, an alumnus of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York, 1891, and clinical assistant surgeon of the New York Post-Graduate Medical School and Hospital, died in New York city, January 14, 1894, aged thirty years. The cause of his death was appendicitis.

STEPHEN E. FULLER, M. D.—1858.

Stephen E. Fuller, of Brooklyn, New York, died May 2, 1895, aged fifty-eight years, from chronic malarial hepatitis with renal complications. He was an alumnus of the New York College of Physicians and Surgeons (1858) and had been twenty-eight years a resident of Brooklyn. He was a member of the New York Academy of Medicine, of the Kings County Medical Society, and a long time member of the Brooklyn Central Dispensary staff, latterly in the position of consulting surgeon. He was a gentleman of refinement and force of character, which, with other traits, contributed much towards his position in his social and professional life.

EDWARD H. SQUIBB, M. D.—1881.

Edward Hamilton Squibb was born in Brooklyn, New York, September 30, 1853, a son of Dr. Edward Robinson and Caroline Lownds (Cook) Squibb. He graduated from the Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute in 1874, and took a course in languages in the University of Virginia in 1875-76. He then entered the natural history course of the Lawrence Scientific School, Harvard University, preparatory to the study of medicine, graduating as B. S. in 1878. He next entered the Harvard Medical School, but not obtaining the hospital advantages he desired for his studies in therapeutics, he withdrew at the expiration of two years, and completed his professional studies in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York city, from which he was graduated in 1881. He immediately entered general practice in Brooklyn, by registering in the county clerk's office, from which he withdrew in part after two years, upon the advice of his father, who desired to associate him with himself in order to continue and supervise the manufacture of standard medicinal preparations, believing greater benefits to the profession and the public would follow by such a course.

The elder Dr. Squibb (now deceased) was a native of Delaware, of Quaker parentage. He studied pharmacy in his youth, and subsequently entered Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, from which he graduated in 1845. He practiced in Philadelphia and was also an instructor in that medical college until 1847, when he was commissioned surgeon in the navy. While so engaged he served as assistant director under Director B. F. Bache, in the establishment and conduct of a government laboratory. Subsequently Dr. Squibbs (the elder) was induced to establish a similar laboratory at Louisville for the army, and to this end he resigned his commission in 1857. Late in 1858 he located in Brooklyn, where he opened a small laboratory in a four-story brick building at 149 Furman street, for the production of medicinal preparations for the army and the general market. On December 24 of the same year the building burned down, and its owner was so badly burned that he was confined to his house for many months, and was disabled for life. In the middle of 1859 he had rebuilt the property and resumed business. The great demand for medical supplies incident to the Civil war taxed the capacity of the house to such an extent as to necessitate the renting of additional premises, and in 1862 buildings were erected at 30 to 38 Doughty street, near Fulton Ferry, and extending through to Vine street. These were occupied about January 1, 1863, and formed the nucleus of the present establishment, said to be the most complete laboratories in the world for the manufacture of standard preparations. Among its early products offered at the time of the cholera epidemic was a cholera remedy prepared by Dr. Squibb, which yet enjoys its old-time prestige. Dr. Squibb was known as a most accomplished chemist, and he was a prominent member of various professional and scientific bodies in Europe as well as in the United States. He died October 25, 1900, having retired from active business about 1885, since which time the house which he founded has been managed by his sons, Dr. Edward Hamilton Squibb and Mr. Charles Fellows Squibb, under the name of E. B. Squibb & Sons, now incorporated.

Dr. Edward H. Squibb, while giving his constant personal attention to the conduct of the business which he cherishes with a sentimental regard which, in his estimation, far outweighs its commercial value, has never abandoned the profession upon which he entered in his youth. He is frequently called into consultation upon therapeutic questions, and he maintains his association in various medical societies—the American Medical Association; the New York State Medical Association, of which he has been treasurer for several years; the Kings County Medical Association; the New York Academy of Medicine; the New York Society for the Relief of the Widows and Orphans of Medical Men, in which he has long been a member of the board of managers; and the New York Physicians' Mutual Aid Society, in which he has been for some years a director. He has frequently read, before various of these bodies, papers upon professional topics, which have been published in their proceedings and in medical journals. For ten years past he has written a series of "Comments on Materia Medica, Pharmacy and Therapeutics," which have appeared in a periodical, "The Ephemeric." This publication owes its inception to Dr. Edward R. Squibb, who wrote upon the pharmaceutical side until his death, when that department lapsed. Dr. Edward H. Squibb has, from the beginning, treated upon medical topics.

Dr. Edward H. Squibb was married in 1884 to Miss Jane Graves Sampson, a daughter of the late George G. Sampson, of Brooklyn. Three children were born of this marriage: Caroline, George Sampson and Charles Graves Squibb.

NORMAN HAYES PROBASCO, M. D.—1898.

This general practitioner of Plainfield, New Jersey, was born in that city, September 7, 1876, and is a descendant on both the paternal and maternal sides from ancestors who were among the early settlers of New York and New Jersey. The history of the Probasco family has been traced to Spain, whence members of it went to Holland. The first American settler of the name was Christopher, who settled in New Amsterdam in 1654, where he served as judge in Kings county in 1693. In 1701 he was one of a party of Hollanders who purchased from William Penn a large tract of land on the Raritan river opposite New Brunswick, New Jersey. He married Ida Stry-ker, of New Lots, Long Island. Jacob Probasco, born in 1682, was a member of the first court of sessions for Middlesex county, New Jersey, under Queen Anne, in 1708; he was the son of Christopher and the great-great-grandfather of Dr. Probasco, and he died in 1755. Heendrick Probasco served as captain in the Revolutionary war, and his brother John, the great-great-grandfather of our subject, was a commissioner in various capacities during the Revolution. John Probasco married Dinah Van Wicklen, who was a descendant of Nicasius de Siele, the latter being "schout" of New York city from 1657 to 1661, and thus entitled to use the de Siele coat of arms. Jacob, the son of John, married Priscilla Smalley, a descendant of Governor Roberts, of New Hampshire. Jacob's son, John Smalley, married Mary Hand Bacon, who was a descendant of Major Jesse Hand of Cape May county, who had been an aide of General Washington and a member of the First and Second Provincial Congress of New Jersey.

Norman Hayes Probasco

Of this last union was born John B. Probasco. He attended Bucknell College, where his course was interrupted by a year's service in the Twenty-eighth Pennsylvania Volunteer Cavalry; upon his return from the Civil war he resumed his studies and was graduated in 1865. He then entered the University of Pennsylvania, where he was graduated in 1869 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. For many years he has conducted an extensive practice in Plainfield, where he is one of the well known practitioners, and is also favorably known throughout the state. He was one of the founders of the Muhlenburg Hospital at Plainfield and one of its attending surgeons, and is now one of its consulting surgeons. He is a member of the Phi Kappa Psi fraternity, a member of the American Medical Association, the New Jersey State Medical Society, the Union County District Medical Society, and the Plainfield Clinical Society. He has served for ten years as president of the board of education, besides holding numerous other local offices. He married Maria Boice, a native of New Jersey and a descendant of Jacob Boice, who came from New Utrecht, Long Island, to New Jersey in 1702; she was of a Holland family, and was also descended from Jeffery Manning, who came to America in 1635, and also from Fitz Randolph, who came here in 1610. Maria Boice's great-great-grandfather, Ephraim Fitz Randolph, fought and was injured in the battle of Monmouth; she was also descended from the Huguenot family of Stelle, whose first representative in America was Poncet Stelle, who came to America in 1660. Mrs. Probasco died September 25, 1896; her husband is a member of the First Baptist church of Plainfield.

Dr. Norman Hayes Probasco is the son of the last mentioned parents. He prepared for college in the high school of Plainfield, and after his graduation entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons at New York, from which he was graduated in 1898. He served two years' internship in Bellevue Hospital, New York, until July, 1900, and from then to July, 1901, acted as resident physician to the New York Infant Asylum in New York city. He commenced the practice of his profession with his father at Plainfield, and has devoted much time and attention to the diseases of children. In addition to his private practice he is the pathologist and bacteriologist to the Muhlenburg Hospital of Plainfield, and is a member of the staff of that institution. Dr. Probasco has gained his prominence in the medical profession by thorough and broad study, and his energy and enthusiasm have placed him in the front rank of the fraternity.

Dr. Probasco is a member of the New Jersey State Medical Society, the Union County District Medical Society, the Plainfield Medical Society, the Plainfield Clinical Society, the Alumni Society of Bellevue Hospital, the Alumni Association of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, and the Alumni Association of the New York Infant Asylum of New York. Socially he is a member of the Park Club, the Hillside Golf and Tennis Club of Plainfield, the Mendelssohn Glee Club of New York city, and the Phi Kappa Psi fraternity and club of New York city.

GEORGE ABSOLOM PETERS, M. D.—1846.

George Absolom Peters was the son of the Rev. Dr. Absolom Peters, a graduate of Dartmouth College and of Princeton Seminary, and who brought his family to this city when Dr. Peters was only four years old. The father died here May 18, 1869, at the age of seventy-six years. In 1838 Dr. Peters was admitted with one hundred and seven others to the freshman class of Yale College, but the condition of his father's affairs prevented his completion of the course. Then he spent a year with a mercantile house in Keeseville, New York, and another year in this city, assisting his father in the publication the latter was then editing, including the Biblical Repository and a religious magazine. He took a business situation in Liverpool, England, for another year, but mercantile life was distasteful to him, and he returned to New York. Here he took up the study of medicine and surgery under the supervision of Dr. Alfred C. Post, and in 1846 was graduated, not without distinction, from the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York. He then served the prescribed period on the house staff of the New York Hospital, and in March, 1859, was complimented with the appointment of attending surgeon. He retired from active service in December, 1863, but was consulting surgeon until January, 1872, when he was reappointed on the attending staff, and again retired from it in December, 1887. From then until his death he was consulting surgeon and president of the board.

He began the practice of medicine here more than forty-five years ago, at 12 West Twenty-ninth street, where he lived until four years ago, when he retired to a country house at Pelham, with his daughter, her husband and their two sons. A year and a half ago they returned to the city and made their home at the Buckingham Hotel. As a practitioner, with his alert intelligence and quaint humor, united with a repugnance for showy methods, he became known as a skillful, painstaking operator and a critical investigator, whose refined, gentle manners won many enduring friends. Never intrusive or aggressive, he preferred discussing with the house staffs of the New York, St. Luke's, St. Mary's, and the Women's hospitals, to directing clinics for medical students.

Dr. Peters had as partners at different times Drs. George G. Wheelock, William Jones, Charles McBurney and William A. Valentine. Even during the busiest part of his life he found time to perform much unremunerated surgery, and frequently became the advisor of his professional brethren when ill. He was a member of the County Medical Society and of the Academy of Medicine, of the Pathological Society, of the Physicians' Mutual Aid Association, of the Medical and Surgical Society and of the Surgical Society. He was one of the original members of the board of surgeons of St. Luke's Hospital, when it was established in 1856, and of the New York Hospital, to both of which he remained consulting surgeon until he died. To quote from the condolatory minute of the New York Orthopaedic Dispensary and Hospital, "In a critical period in the history of the hospital he made the path clear for the establishment of the methods of the Orthopaedic Hospital in St. Luke's." He was also consulting surgeon of the Woman's Hospital for the state of New York, to the Orthopaedic Hospital, to the Presbyterian Hospital and to St. Mary's Hospital. He was a member of the Union League and Century clubs, a trustee of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, also by virtue of his honorary degree of A. M., conferred by Williams College in 1851 and by Yale College thirty years afterwards, a member of the Yale Alumni Association, and a member of the University Club from the date of its reorganization in 1879, and its president for several years.

On April 10, 1849, Dr. Peters married Miss Julia, daughter of George Coghill, a prominent importer of New York city, who died in 1873. They had two children; a son, who died at the age of six years, and a daughter, who was married in 1878 to Horace H. Chittenden, a son of L. E. Chittenden, registrar of the treasury under President Lincoln.

Dr. Peters was taken dangerously ill at about noon of December 6, 1894, grew rapidly worse until three o'clock, when he passed away. He had been previously indisposed for many months with renal disease, and once while in Manchester, Vermont, his life was almost despaired of during the summer preceding his death. He rallied, however, and returned to his apartments in the Buckingham. His daughter and Dr. Frank H. Markoe were present during his last moments. His funeral was from the Protestant Episcopal church of the Incarnation.

WILLIAM HENRY TOBEY REYNOLDS, M. D.—1870.

William Henry Tobey Reynolds, son of the late John H. and Margaret A. Reynolds, an alumnus of Union College, 1866, and of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York, 1870, died in Albany, New York, December 9, 1894, from a fracture of the skull, the result of a fall from a belt-line motor car. The circumstances of the catastrophe seem to have been as follows: Having left his office, 66 South Hawk street, at about eleven o'clock, December 5th, he boarded a west-bound Hamilton street car. After a professional visit on Madison avenue he took an east-bound belt-line car, with the intent of alighting at Dove street for a call on another patient. He stood on the rear platform of the car, and as it passed from a single to a double track, the while taking the switch, the jar of the car caused him to fall backward over the usual guard and strike his head.

He was born April 26, 1846, his father being a prominent lawyer and afterward a judge of the commission of appeals. Having received his early education mainly at the Boy's Academy in Albany, he entered Union College in his sixteenth year, and in the autumn of his graduation (1866) began his medical studies in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York. On his return to Albany he pursued his course under the direction of Dr. Thomas Hun, and in 1871 was appointed assistant to Dr. M. Stinson, then acting health officer, and for nearly two years was resident surgeon at the almshouse there.

Though in the enjoyment of a lucrative practice among the wealthy, his advice and purse were at the command of the needy. Literary in his tastes and studious in his habits, he remained a bachelor, but with domestic tastes. He is survived by John H. and James A., brothers, and Mrs. Dr. Franklin Townsend, sister. He was buried in Kinderhook, New York, the place of his birth.

ROBERT BURNS GILMAN, M. D.—1867.

Dr. Robert Burns Gilman, of Jersey City, New Jersey, physician and surgeon, was born August 5, 1842, in Piermont, New Hampshire. The ancestry of the Gilman family has been traced to a Welsh prince who flourished several hundred years ago. Three brothers of the name came to America in the early part of the seventeenth century and settled in Massachusetts and later a branch settled near Exeter, New Hampshire, and from them are descended nearly all of the Gilmans in the country, among whom have been many who came to prominence in the field of science, commerce, politics and social affairs. Zeeb Gilman was a native of Vermont. He was a physician and practiced for more than forty years in Piermont, New Hampshire, and in Bradford, Vermont, and died in 1887 at the age of eighty years. His wife, who was Naomi McNeill, was also born in Vermont.

Robert Burns Gilman, son of the parents named, was educated in the public school of his native village, in Bradford, Vermont, and in New London, New Hampshire. He acquired his professional training in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which he was graduated in 1867, in the same class with his brother Zeeb. The latter practiced for several years in Brooklyn and in Iowa, and is now engaged in business in Redlands, California.

Dr. Gilman served for some months in the insane asylum at Blackwell's Island, New York, and then entered upon practice in Jersey City. In 1869 he entered the United States army in the capacity of acting assistant surgeon, with the rank of first lieutenant, and was stationed at Red River, Louisiana. After serving for one year he resigned his commission and resumed practice in Jersey City, at 85 Congress street, where he has been located to the present time, devoting his attention to general medicine and surgery, in both departments of which he has established a wide and lucrative practice, and won well deserved recognition of his ability and conscientiousness. From 1875 to 1889 he was surgeon to St. Mary's Hospital, attending daily, and performing a large amount of surgical work, all such labors devolving upon him and one other, Dr. Chabert. He was formerly a member of the Hudson County District Medical Society, a charter member of the New Jersey Academy of Medicine, and was president of the New Jersey Pathological Society at the time of its dissolution. Dr. Gilman was married, March 20, 1867, to Miss Lucy Phelps, of Auburn, New York, who died in April, 1887. A son born of this marriage, Robert Prescott Gilman, is a prominent attorney of Jersey City.

Robert Prescott Gilman, after studying in Hasbrouck Institute, Jersey City, attended Exeter (New Hampshire) Academy for a time, and then went to Weisbaden, Germany, where he was a student in a leading school for one and one-half years and for one year in France. Returning home, he was graduated from Andover Academy (Massachusetts), and then entered Yale College. Going to Europe for his vacation, he passed the time in study in the University of Leipsic, and then entered the University of Munich, where he remained for three years. During these periods he became an accomplished linguist, having acquired a fluent knowledge of French, German and Italian. Soon after returning home he entered upon the study of law, and completing his course in the law department of the University of Minnesota, he took a post-graduate course in the Harvard Law School, after which he located in his native town for the practice of his profession. While in Leipsic, Mr. Gilman married Miss Margaret von Kreckler Dres Mar, whose father came from a noble family and saw military service as a colonel in the German army. To this marriage were born five children, Lucy, Robert, Margery, Dorothy and Arthur Gilman.

JOHN CONDIT HALSEY, M. D.—1834.

John Condit Halsey was a graduate of Union College, New York, in 1830, and of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York city, in 1834, and for half a century an esteemed family practitioner in Brooklyn, New York, where he was born and where he died, aged eighty-three years, May 7, 1895. He retired about ten years before that date for reasons referable to physical disability, still maintaining his relations with the Kings County Medical Society and the Physicians' Mutual Aid Association.

EZRA MUNDY HUNT, M. D.—1852.

Ezra Mundy Hunt, of English-Welsh descent, was born in Metuchen, New Jersey, January 4, 1830. Educated at the College of New Jersey, Princeton, and in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York, he received his degree from the latter institution in 1852, and in the same year established himself in his native town. In 1854 he lectured on materia medica in Vermont Medical College, and two years later was elected professor of the same chair, but declined on account of his growing practice in his native state.

He became president of the New Jersey State Medical Society and chairman of the section of hygiene of the American Medical Association in 1877.

in addition to other honors conferred upon him by the New York State Medical Society, the Boston Gynecological Society and the Baltimore Medical Association. As a writer on medical subjects, and in earlier life on religious topics, he became widely known for his terse style and well considered statements.

In 1862 he was mustered in as assistant surgeon of the Twenty-seventh New Jersey Volunteer Infantry, and served as such until January 23, 1863, when he was appointed surgeon-in-charge of the Calvert Street Hospital, Baltimore, in which position he won much renown for his executive ability and the value of his governmental reports. He married, in April, 1853, Emma, daughter of Ezra Ayres, of Rahway, New Jersey. His death occurred in Metuchen, New Jersey, July 1, 1894.

WILLIAM JOHN SCOTT, M. D.—1871.

William John Scott, son of Samuel and Eliza Scott, was born in Enniskillen, Ireland, December 15, 1847, and came with his parents to America during his childhood. He was educated in the public schools and under private teachers up to his matriculation in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York, from which institution he was graduated in 1871. After a year of post-graduate study he became, in due time, a house surgeon in the Jersey City Hospital. His health failing, a fact which he considerably concealed from relatives and friends, he went into business first as a druggist in White Plains and afterward as a dry-goods superintendent for his father, the owner of three stores. He was reasonably successful in all these undertakings, but worked much beyond his ability.

At one time he resided in Capeville, Virginia, but subsequently became widely identified with the religious interests of White Plains, New York, and was a popular member of the community in consequence of his many attractive qualities. He died from phthisis, January 25, 1895, at Taylor's Hotel, Jersey City, while on his way to South Carolina. He left a widow, the daughter of the late Rev. Benjamin M. Genung, a son and daughter.

HARRIS GRAY SHERMAN, M. D.—1880.

Dr. Sherman, of Cleveland, Ohio, is descended from old colonial stock. His paternal ancestor was Captain John Sherman, who came from Dedham, England, to Watertown, Massachusetts, on the ship Priscilla, in 1630. Nineteen descendants of this early immigrant are enrolled on the present record in the State House in Boston as having served in the Revolution. Grandfather Captain Harris was a captain in the Massachusetts militia.

Dr. Harris Gray Sherman is the son of Aaron Morgan and Harriett Adelia (Gray) Sherman, and was born at Garrettsville, Ohio, June 6, 1856. His father, who took the name of Morgan from the family of Nathaniel Green on the maternal side, was a surgeon in the Civil war. Dr. Sherman was educated in the graded and high school of Kent, Ohio, and then attended Buchtel College at Akron, Ohio, of which his father is a trustee; he was a student in Michigan University for awhile, in the academic department, and graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city in 1880. In 1879-80 he was clinical assistant in the New York Eye and Ear Hospital and spent one year at the Marine Hospital at New York. This preparatory training was supplemented by two years spent abroad in London, Paris, Vienna and Berlin, and in 1883 he opened practice in Cleveland, Ohio, as a specialist in eye and ear diseases.

Dr. Sherman's prominence in his profession and in social life is shown by his membership in many of the professional, political and social organizations of the city and state. He is president of the Cleveland Academy of Medicine, treasurer of the Cleveland Medical Library Association since its foundation; is consultant surgeon at the City Hospital, "Lieutenant and Surgeon" of the Second Battalion of the Naval Reserves; is a member of the American Medical Society, the Northeastern Ohio Medical Society and the Ohio State Medical Society, and assistant of military surgeons; is a thirty-second degree Scottish Rite Mason of Lake Erie Consistory; and is a member of the following clubs: Union, Colonial, Road Side, Bass Lake, Shooting and Crane Creek, and is vice-president and trustee of the Shorelands Club. He is a Republican in politics. Dr. Sherman is also a frequent contributor to the various medical journals on professional subjects. He married Miss Jennie Bates, of Boston, and their children are Roger, Mildred, Harris, John, Louis and Howard.

BERNHARD W. GRUNHUT, M. D.—1870.

Bernhard W. Grunhut was lost at sea, August 22, 1894, from on board the steamship Bothnia, on her voyage from Liverpool to Boston. The vessel reached port on August 25, 1894. He was a graduate of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York, of the class of 1870, and at the time of his death was forty-eight years old, having given up his profession in New York city for the real estate business about four years before. In his will, executed June 12, 1894, two days before he sailed for Europe, Dr. Grunhut left to Mt. Sinai Hospital and the Hebrew Benevolent Society of New York fifty thousand dollars, both of which bequests became subjects of litigation. The estate has an estimated value of one hundred thousand dollars. A widow, a brother and a sister were his survivors.

ALPHONSE MICHAEL WALLACE, M. D.—1888, AND WILLIAM BURRY WALLACE, M. D.—1871.

Dr. William B. Wallace, fifty-three years old, a well known physician, died suddenly, June 7, 1895, from pneumonia, after an illness of fifteen days, at his home, 144 East Sixtieth street, New York city. Exactly eleven hours later his oldest son, Dr. Alphonse M. Wallace, twenty-seven years old, without knowledge of his father's demise, died in the next room, also from pneumonia.

Dr. Wallace, Sr., was born in Limerick county, Ireland, and was educated in England and also at Dublin. He married a Miss Hannah M. Hickey in 1865. In the seventies he came to this country, and studied medicine at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, in New York city. He was appointed school commissioner under Mayor Grace. He carried on a large practice in New York city and was a member of the Medico-Legal Society, Catholic Club and United Federation. When Parnell visited this country in 1879, Dr. Wallace had charge of the preparations for his reception. Of late years he traveled extensively throughout the country, organizing Land League societies.

The younger Dr. Wallace was born in New York city and was educated at the public schools and St. Francis Xavier's College. He studied medicine at his father's alma mater and secured his diploma in 1888. He was house physician at St. Vincent's Hospital, and for the last three years had been with the department of charities and correction as one of the examining physicians. It was while attending at his father's sick-bed that he was stricken with pneumonia, a touching instance of filial devotion.

LEVI FARROW, M. D.—1865.

Dr. Levi Farrow, physician and surgeon of Hackettstown, New Jersey, was born in Bethlehem, New Jersey, April 25, 1844, a descendant of Captain James Farrow (or Farrar, as the name was sometimes spelled), who won considerable fame during the Revolutionary war. The family were among the earliest settlers of America; some of its members were residents of Massachusetts, and others located in Pennsylvania. Dr. Farrow is the son of Moses Farrow, who was born March 9, 1809, and received his education in the schools of the neighborhood and commenced his business career quite early life in a drug store in New York city. Later he taught school and became connected with the drug business in Bethlehem, New Jersey, where he remained for the balance of his life. On November 15, 1834, he married Miss Caroline Smith, who was born November 16, 1818. Her death occurred September 7, 1850, and for his second wife Mr. Farrow married Mrs. Rebecca (Smith) Bass, a half sister of his first wife and the widow of Charles Bass; she was born December 22, 1825, and died December 15, 1893. Mr. Farrow was a prominent citizen and a leader in the ranks of the Democracy, where he exerted a forceful but conservative influence. He was a warm supporter of the war for the preservation of the Union and was appointed to minister to the wants of the families of volunteers while they were at the front. He was elected to the offices of freeholder, collector and to other positions of trust and responsibility in the township and county. His death occurred August 1, 1891, when he had reached the age of eighty-two years, four months and twenty-two days.

Levi Farrow acquired a liberal education, and choosing the medical profession as his future calling, began a course of reading in the office of Dr. John Blaine, of Perryville, Hunterdon county, New Jersey. Subsequently he became student in the medical department of Columbia College at New York, now known as the College of Physicians and Surgeons, from which he was graduated in March, 1865. He then associated himself with Dr. Blaine, an ex-senator and major general of the militia, with whom he remained till February 5, 1866, when he removed to Middle Valley, Morris county, New Jersey. Here he entered upon a successful business and social career, and remained till July 8, 1900, when he located in Hackettstown, where he has erected a handsome and comfortable home in the central part of the town. His practice covers all departments of general medicine, and he has always enjoyed a large and influential patronage. In addition to his private practice he has found time to write scientific papers, which have been read before various medical societies. On December 8, 1874, Dr. Farrow became identified with the Morris County District Medical Society, of which he was twice president and was secretary for the years 1886 to 1902. He is a permanent delegate to the New Jersey State Medical Society, is a member of the American Medical Association, and was one of the three organizers, and president for the year 1901, of the Tri-County Medical Association, which comprises Morris, Sussex and Warren counties.

In his political affiliations Dr. Farrow was a Democrat up to the year 1884, when he became dissatisfied with the position of the party on the liquor question, and identified himself with the National Prohibition party. He was one of the founders of the Morris County Journal, at that time the only prohibition weekly in northern New Jersey; he served as president, business manager and director of the company and for nearly two years wrote its editorials. The Church and Home is the successor of the Journal, and Dr. Farrow regularly writes a column for this periodical. In early life Dr. Farrow became a member of the German Valley Presbyterian church, and from May 26, 1872, until 1901 served as one of the ruling elders. He is now actively connected with the Hackettstown Presbyterian church, of which he was elected a ruling elder in 1902.

On October 20, 1869, Dr. Farrow was united in marriage to Miss Alice Trimmer, who was born in 1850, a daughter of Anthony and Mary (Wise) Trimmer; she died in 1892, and since then Dr. Farrow has made his home with his married daughter, Mrs. George J. Osmun. Five children were born of this union. Joseph Rusling Smith was born October 2, 1870, attended Hackettstown Institute, Brewster's private preparatory school at Chester, New Jersey, and began a course of medical reading with his father; he then entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons and later graduated from the Long Island College Hospital in 1892. He located in German Valley, New Jersey, where he acquired a large practice; he was a member of the Morris County District Medical Society, was prominently identified with the Knights of Pythias and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and was also a consistent member of the German Valley Presbyterian church. On October 23, 1895, he was married to Miss Anna. T. Swackhamer, a daughter of William and Emma (Trimmer) Swackhamer, and their only child and son, Levi, was born September 8, 1896. Dr. J. R. S. Farrow died June 23, 1898; his had been a brief life, but was well rounded out, and he died a Christian gentleman, with a Christian's inspiring hope. The second child of Dr. Farrow is Frank Pierce, who was born April 1, 1872; after a special preliminary training in the institutes at Chester and Dover, New Jersey, he graduated from the Pennsylvania College of Dental Surgery in 1893, and soon after located at Washington, New Jersey, where he has built up a very gratifying practice. On June 20, 1895, he married Miss Edna Crevling, daughter of Jacob and Hattie Crevling of Washington, New Jersey, and they have two children, Alice Carolyn and Frank Pierce, Jr. John W. and Charles A. Farrow, the third and fourth sons of Dr. Farrow, both died in infancy. The only daughter of the family is Luella B., the wife of George J. Osmun of Hackettstown, New Jersey.

BERNARD E. VAUGHAN, M. D.—1887.

Bernard E. Vaughan, born in Maine thirty-two years ago, went when a lad to Worcester, Massachusetts, where he continued his studies until 1884, when he came to New York city to enter the College of Physicians and Surgeons, in the class of 1887. As a hard-working student he soon won recognition and graduated with honors. Immediately thereafter he became a member of the house staff of St. Luke's Hospital, and after fulfilling his term of service at once began practice. On June 4, 1890, he was married to Miss Maud Phillips Kniffen, of Worcester, Massachusetts.

Dr. Vaughan was, at the time of his death, assistant attendant physician at the New York Cancer Hospital, physician at the New York Dispensary, an instructor at the Post-Graduate Hospital, and one of the medical staff of the New York Life Insurance Company. He died at St. Luke's Hospital, March 4, 1895, from the shock after an operation for appendicitis. He was taken ill at his home, 209 West Fifty-fifth street. "Cordial in his social relations and able in his scientific work," was the voiced sentiment of the Hospital Graduates' Club, of which he was a most loyal supporter. His funeral was from the Protestant Episcopal church of Zion and St. Timothy, and his interment at Worcester, Massachusetts.

WILLIAM AUGUSTUS MUHLENBERG WAINWRIGHT, M. D.— 1867.

Dr. Wainwright, born in New York city, August 13, 1844, was the youngest child of Bishop Jonathan Mayhew Wainwright and an alumnus of Trinity College, Hartford, Connecticut, (1864), and of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York, (1867). Two years' service as an interne of the New York Hospital preceded his settling in Hartford, where he continued to practice until his death, September 24, 1894.

A handsome man, of commanding presence, of scrupulous honesty and strict integrity, he was successful in social circles, while his keen perceptions, good judgment, and skilful treatment made him a leader in his profession. As a president of the Hartford County Medical Association he delivered the official address in its centennial year. At the time of his death he was visiting surgeon of the Hartford Hospital and medical visitor of the Retreat for the Insane. He left a widow, two daughters and two sons.

HARLAN P. ALLEN, M. D.—1879.

Harlan P. Allen, of Columbus, Ohio, a member of the American Medical Association since 1888, died in the Roosevelt Hospital, New York, May 2, 1895, to which he had gone for an operation for appendicitis. He was a graduate of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York (1879), and professor of ophthalmology and otology in the Columbus Medical College.

JOHN MARSHALL HAWKES, M. D.—1890.

John Marshall Hawkes, of New York city, a native of East Windsor, Maine, and an alumnus of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York, died at his home, 1343 Lexington avenue, May 25, 1895, aged forty-seven years. He was known to the profession as an adept in the so-called paper jacket method for the relief of disease of the spine. He was a widower, and is succeeded in practice by his son and former co-partner, Dr. Roy Harlan Hawkes, who was graduated three years later than his father.

WILLIAM RHAME, M. D.—1876.

Dr. William Rhame, who has been actively engaged in his profession for a quarter of a century in the thriving village of Wantagh, in the town of Hempstead, Nassau county, Long Island, now in his bodily and mental prime, and giving promise of many more years of usefulness, is a native of Long Island, born at East Rockaway, October 13, 1854.

His parents were Samuel S. and Charlotte (Davison) Rhame. His paternal grandfather was born in the province of Alsace, on the river Rhine, was a soldier under the first Napoleon, accompanied that great general in his wonderful march to Moscow and was one of the survivors in the disastrous retreat therefrom. After leaving the army he came to the United States, settling in Pennsylvania. His son, Samuel S., born in the latter named state, came to Long Island when a youth fifteen years of age. He engaged in a mercantile business, also marketing immense quantities of oysters in many boats in which he held an interest, and operating a grist mill. He was an earnest Congregationalist and held official position in his church, and he served some time as town assessor. Of his marriage with Charlotte Davison, daughter of Alexander Davison, were born nine children: Mitchell D., residing in Minneapolis, Minnesota; Alice, wife of Charles L. Phipps, of East Rockaway; Alexander; William; Ada; Samuel S.; Edward D.; Caroline P.; and Charlotte, wife of Henry Langhaur, of Brooklyn. All the children named, unless otherwise mentioned, are residents of East Rockaway, and Samuel is a merchant in that place. Mr. Rhame died in 1896, surviving his wife by some seven years.

William, fourth child and third son of Samuel S. and Charlotte (Davison) Rhame, received his common school education in his native town, completed an academical course in Union Hall Academy, in Jamaica, Long Island, and pursued a special course in the Polytechnic Institute, Brooklyn, receiving the diploma of that institution in 1873. He then entered upon the study of medicine in the New York College of Physicians and Surgeons, from which he was creditably graduated in 1876. For a year following he was engaged in practice in East Rockaway and then removed to the village of Wantagh, which has since been his place of residence and the central point of his professional labors. He is a member of the Queens County Medical Association, and affiliates with the Masonic brotherhood through Morton Lodge No. 63, at Hempstead.

Dr. Rhame was married October 25, 1881, to Miss Mary E. Foote, daughter of John Foote, of Bellmore, Long Island. Two children have been born of this marriage, John F. and Frank P. Rhame, of whom the first named is a student in the class of 1905, United States Military Academy at West Point, his appointment being gained on a competitive examination.

CHARLES HOSMER SCRIBNER, B. S., M. D.—1890.

Dr. Charles Hosmer Scribner, general practitioner of Paterson, New Jersey, was born in Rosendale, Wisconsin, July 17, 1862, a son of William and Mary C. (Hill) Scribner, natives of Norwalk, Connecticut; their antecedents settled in that state in the early part of the seventeenth century. Dr. Scribner prepared for college in the Ripon College Preparatory School, later attended Ripon College, from which he was graduated in 1886 with the degree of Bachelor of Science; for one year he was a student in the medical department of the University of Michigan, and he then entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York city, from which he was graduated with the degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1890. After one year spent as interne in St. Joseph's Hospital of Paterson, New Jersey, he located in that city, and being well equipped for the practice of his profession, soon acquired a large patronage, which he has enjoyed for many years. He commands the highest esteem of the profession and laity of the community in which he has labored so long and earnestly.

Dr. Scribner is prominently identified with the Passaic County District Medical Society, the New Jersey State Medical Society, the American Medical Association. He is also a member and medical examiner for the Knights of Pythias, the National Union and the Heptasophs; in a social way he is connected with the North Jersey Country Club and the North Jersey Automobile Club. He was united in marriage, October 12, 1892, to Miss Annie Doremus, daughter of John P. Doremus, of Paterson, New Jersey, and three children have been born to them: Eleanor, Annie Dorothy and Charles Hosmer Scribner, Jr.

DAVID C. ENGLISH, M. D.—1868.

David Combs English, physician, New Brunswick, New Jersey, son of David Combs English, M. D., and of Henrietta (Green) English, was born in that city, March 2, 1842, and comes from a family whose ancestors on both sides were prominent in the history of England and of this country, some of whom are known to have belonged to the gentry and the nobility of the former country as far back as the time of Richard II. James English, the first of the family in this country, came to New Jersey about the year 1700. He and his brother owned nearly all the land whereon now stands Englishtown (named after the family) and Tennent. His son James dug the first spade of earth for the foundation of the old historic Tennent church, and bought the third pew in the middle aisle, which has been owned and occupied by his descendants to the present time. The above father and son were actively engaged in the guerrilla warfare that was so effective in New Jersey during the Revolutionary war, and Dr. James English, of the next generation (Dr. English's grandfather), was a commissioned surgeon in the war of the Revolution.

A. H. Scribner

Dr. English's maternal grandmother, Sarah Forman, was a lineal descendant of William Forman, of Gainsborough, Lincolnshire, England, who lived on a large landed estate about the year 1450, and whose grandson was Sir William Forman, knight, lord mayor of London, 1538-39. His great-grandson was William Forman, vicar of Buckinghamshire, whose son was Robert Forman, the first in this country. He was driven from England by religious persecution and sought refuge in Holland. In 1645 he removed to America, and obtained a patent from the government of the New Netherlands for a town on Long Island, which he named Flushing, in honor of the place in Holland which gave him refuge. He was appointed by Peter Stuyvesant a magistrate, December 9, 1655. Subsequently he was magistrate of Oyster Bay. He had three sons, Moses, Aaron and Samuel. Dr. English's line comes down through Aaron, whose son was Samuel Forman, high sheriff of Monmouth county, 1695-96. General David Forman, of Revolutionary war fame, was one of his descendants. Dr. English's maternal grandfather, Henry Green, was an early settler in Monmouth county, and his father owned the land whereon now stand West End, Hollywood and Elberon. They were descendants of the Rhode Island Greens. Dr. Thomas Dunn English, physician, poet and late member of Congress, and Hon. William H. English, who was a candidate for vice president of the United States on the ticket with General Hancock, were of another branch of the same family.

Dr. English received his preliminary education in private institutions and in the Rutgers College Preparatory School at New Brunswick. His medical course was taken at the College of Physicians and Surgeons (Columbia College), New York city, from which institution he graduated with the degree of M. D. in 1868, commencing practice the same year at New Brunswick in association with Dr. Clifford T. Morrogh. A year later he established his own office, attending subsequently Dr. Morrogh's practice while the latter twice visited Europe.

Dr. English is a member of the Middlesex County Medical Society, of which he was president and has been treasurer since 1876; a member of the Medical Society of New Jersey, of which he was a member of the standing committee four years and its chairman two years, and vice president three years, president during 1897, and is now one of its fellows, and is a member of the Fellows Prize Essay committee; a member of the American Medical Association since 1876; of the New Jersey Microscopical Society, which he has served as trustee, vice president and president; member of the New Jersey State Sanitary Association, of which he has been secretary, chairman of executive council, vice president and president, and he is now an honorary member of its council and chairman of the publication committee. Dr. English has frequently been elected by the County and State Medical societies as a delegate to the American Medical Association, and three times by the State Society as a delegate to the Pan American Medical Congress. He is a member of and secretary to the staff of Wells Memorial Hospital, New Brunswick.

Dr. English has been prominent in the councils of the Presbyterian church, a member of the old historic First church in New Brunswick, and an elder since 1873. The presbytery of New Brunswick has elected him three times a commissioner to the general assembly, where he served upon important committees. In the assembly of 1900 he was a member of the committee on bills and overtures which had charge of the question of revision of the Westminster Confession of Faith, and served upon the sub-committee of five which formulated the report. He has also served his church as deacon and Sunday-school superintendent, and since 1889 has been treasurer of the church benevolent funds. Dr. English was one of the originators of the Young Men's Christian Association in New Brunswick (1861), was a director and nine years its president. On his motion and advocacy, the State Young Men's Christian Association executive committee was formed, and he acted as a member of it for twenty-five years. He was one of the vice-presidents of the international Young Men's Christian Association convention at Richmond, Virginia, in 1875. Dr. English has been a director in the Young Men's Bible Society of his native town since 1861, and its corresponding secretary since 1873. He has also been connected with several other benevolent and religious organizations. He is also a member of the New Brunswick Historical Club, and for one term (1867 and 1868) rendered efficient public service as a member of the board of aldermen of New Brunswick. He declined the offer of a re-nomination. He was at one time interested in the promotion of building and loan associations, and was a director in three of these institutions. Dr. English is the author of a number of valuable papers and addresses upon medical, historical and religious subjects, some of which have been printed and have commanded attention and commendation.

Dr. English married Miss Susan Cary Blake, formerly of Harrison, Maine, and daughter of Hon. Harrison Blake and Susan Brett (Cary) Blake, both lineal descendants of John and Priscilla Alden. They have one son, Grenfill Harrison Blake English, engaged in the engineering department of the Pennsylvania Railroad as a supervisor.

JOHN POWELL HENRY, M. D.—1881.

Dr. John Powell Henry, general practitioner of medicine in Jersey City, New Jersey, and for many years past the city physician, was born in New York city January 23, 1858. His parents were James and Martha (Reed) Henry, and his father was for many years engaged in the wallpaper business in the metropolis, but resided in Jersey City from 1869 till his death, which occurred in 1899.

John Powell Henry gained his literary education in the schools of New York and Jersey City, and under the instruction of a private tutor. He pursued his professional studies in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, and was graduated from that institution in 1881. He then located in Jersey City and entered upon a practice which has been extended to large proportions. For some time after beginning practice he was connected with Christ Hospital. In 1884 he received, without solicitation on his part, the appointment as city physician, a position which he has filled to the present time. He is also consulting physician to the North Hudson Hospital and attending physician to the Emergency Hospital of Jersey City.

Dr. Henry is a member of the American Medical Society, the North Hudson Medical Society, of which he was president for two consecutive terms ending in 1901, and of the Hudson County District Medical Society and of the Society for the Relief of the Widows and Orphans of Medical Men of the state of New Jersey. He is a member of the Business Men's Association and the Organized Aid of Jersey City, and is a charter member of the Union League Club of Jersey City. Dr. Henry is a member of the United Presbyterian church. He was married on December 10, 1885, to Miss Martha J. Whiteside, daughter of John Whiteside of Staten Island.

EDWIN MORRISON WARD, A. B., M. D.—1862.

Dr. Edwin Morrison Ward, a well known physician and surgeon of Bloomfield, New Jersey, is the second in lineal descent to embrace the calling which he has chosen for his life work. He was born in his present residence, February 1, 1840. His father was the eminent Dr. Eleazer D. Ward, and his mother was Urania (Wheeler) Ward, natives, respectively, of Orange, New Jersey, and of Connecticut. Eleazer D. Ward enjoyed exceptional educational advantages for his day, having attended medical lectures in Philadelphia and New York. He was graduated in 1808 and immediately thereafter began practice in Montclair; a year later he succeeded to his brother's practice in Bloomfield, the latter having removed to Newark. His sterling qualities and fine educational advantages made Dr. Eleazer D. Ward a man to be much sought after, and he remained in active practice until a few years before his death, which occurred in 1868. He was a charter member of the Essex District Medical Society and continued a member all his life.

Dr. Edwin Morrison Ward acquired his education in the schools of Bloomfield, in Ashland Hall school of Montclair, and in Princeton College, from which last named institution he was graduated in 1859 with the degree of A. B. After graduating from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York in 1862, Dr. Ward was associated in practice with his father for awhile, but in the same year he entered the army as a member of the sanitary commission; soon afterward he was made acting assistant surgeon and served in that position, with conspicuous usefulness, until the close of the war. After the war Dr. Ward returned to Bloomfield and resumed his practice, again in association with his father, and to whose practice he succeeded after the decease of the latter.

Dr. Ward was one of the organizers and most efficient members of the Mountain Side Hospital, is also a member of the Essex County Medical Society, and an ex-president of the Orange Mountain Medical Society. Dr. Ward is of a quiet, unassuming manner and deeply interested in all matters pertaining to the welfare of his native place, which he has seen grow from a small village to a good sized, well appointed town; he is president of the Bloomfield board of health and a director of the Bloomfield Savings Bank. Although Dr. Ward is unmarried, he maintains his own home, which is one of the finest residences in Bloomfield. He has long been a member of the First Presbyterian church. His brother, Dr. William S. Ward, of Newark, New Jersey, whose death occurred September 1, 1900, was a prominent physician and surgeon, a graduate of Princeton College, class of 1841, and of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York in 1849.

TALBOT ROLAND CHAMBERS, M. D.—1878.

Dr. Talbot Roland Chambers, of Jersey City, New Jersey, is a native of the state, born in Raritan, June 27, 1855, and is a son of the Rev. Talbot Wilson Chambers, one of the leading clergymen of New York. His mother, who was Louise Mercer Frelinghuysen, came from a family which has been intimately associated with the best history of New Jersey, as reflected in political and civil affairs.

Talbot Roland Chambers prepared for college in the public schools of New York city and was graduated from the University of the City of New York in 1875. He studied for his profession in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which he was graduated in 1878, as honor man of his class. During 1879 and 1880 he served as interne in the New York Hospital and as provisional interne in the Woman's Hospital of New York city. He was then for a time in the employ of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company as ship surgeon. He subsequently located in East Orange, New Jersey, and engaged in the general practice of medicine and surgery.

After caring for a very extensive practice for fifteen years, in 1895 he removed to Jersey City, where he has ever since restricted himself to practice in those special lines for which he made the most complete preparation, in which he has acquired a large and lucrative patronage, and at the same time achieved recognition for peculiar success in the treatment of diseases of the eye, ear, nose and throat. Besides treating his very numerous private patrons, he performs the duties of chief surgeon in his specialty in the City Hospital, Christ Hospital and the North Hudson Hospital of Jersey City, and has also performed operations in St. Francis Hospital and the Bayonne Hospital.

Dr. Chambers has invented several surgical instruments and appliances and has made valuable improvements upon a number of others. He is the author of numerous scientific essays and monographs which were presented before the various professional bodies in which he holds membership, and were subsequently published in pamphlet form and in leading medical journals. One of his first efforts in the line of authorship was his "Galvanism for the Cure of Aneurism," which was read before the Pathological Society of New York in 1879, and was afterwards published in pamphlet form.

Dr. Chambers is a member of the New Jersey State Medical Society, the Hudson County District Medical Society, the Jersey City Practitioners' Club, the New York Academy of Medicine, the International Otological Society and the Society for the Relief of Widows and Orphans of Medical Men of the State of New Jersey, and is an honorary member of the Orange Mountain Medical Society and the Newark Practitioners' Club. He is also a member of the Reform Club of New York city and of the Union League and Palma clubs of Jersey City. He was health officer of East Orange from 1885 to 1895, and a member of the board of education for the same period. On May 19, 1886, Dr. Chambers was married to Miss Edith M. Jennings, daughter of H. M. Jennings, Esq., of East Orange, New Jersey, and to this union were born two children, Margaret, deceased, and Talbot Wilson Chambers.

CHARLES HENRY SCHLICHTER, M. D.—1896.

Dr. Charles Henry Schlichter, of Elizabeth, New Jersey, physician and surgeon, was born in Elizabeth, June 15, 1874, a son of Frederick and Augusta Schlichter. Frederick Schlichter, a native of Prussia, emigrated to this country when he had attained the age of twenty; he settled in New York city, where he engaged in the sign advertising business. He removed to Elizabeth, New Jersey, in 1866 and continued in the same line of work until he retired in 1902 from the active duties of a business career with a goodly competence. His wife, whose maiden name was Augusta Wachter, was also born in Prussia, and when only two years of age was brought to this country by her parents.

Dr. Schlichter acquired his early education in the public schools of Elizabeth, and later was placed under the care of a private tutor. Subsequently he was engaged as a clerk in a drug store for five years; in the meantime he attended the New York College of Pharmacy, from which he was graduated in 1893. Three years later he was graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons. After his graduation he was engaged for one year as house physician in the German Hospital in Newark, New Jersey. He then located in Elizabeth, and for the following ten months practiced his profession there. He was for some time hospital steward to the Third Regiment, New Jersey National Guards, and upon the breaking out of the Spanish-American war he volunteered his services, and was made assistant surgeon, with the rank of first lieutenant in the same regiment. He was detached from his regiment and assigned to duty at Fort Wadsworth as executive officer, where he remained until October 15, 1898. Upon the cessation of hostilities he returned to Elizabeth, and again resumed his practice, which has steadily increased until now he has an extensive patronage. He is now assistant surgeon and first lieutenant of the Second Regiment. He was actively identified for several years with the dispensary staff of the Elizabeth General Hospital and Dispensary, and is now the visiting physician of the same institution. In July, 1900, Dr. Schlichter was appointed to the position of city physician for a term of two and a half years. His uniform courtesy and genial disposition have gained for him the friendly regard of all with whom he comes in contact, and he is classed among the representative members of the medical fraternity.

Dr. Schlichter is a member of the Union County District Medical Society, and the Clinical Society of the Elizabeth General Hospital and Dispensary. He is also connected with Orient Lodge No. 126, F. & A. M., of Elizabeth, Court Custer, Independent Order of Foresters, and the Democratic Club of Elizabeth, New Jersey. Dr. Schlichter was united in marriage April 14, 1898, to Miss Henrietta Sawyer, daughter of John Sawyer, of Elizabeth. Their two children are Charles Frederick and Grace Sawyer Schlichter.

WELLINGTON CAMPBELL, A. B., M. D.—1877.

Among those who devote their time and energies to the practice of medicine and have gained a leading place in the ranks of the profession, is Dr. Wellington Campbell. He was born in Milburn, New Jersey, September 27, 1852. He is the son of Wellington and Mary T. (Wade) Campbell, the former a native of New York and the latter of New Jersey. Wellington Campbell, Sr. was of Scotch descent and for many years engaged in the paper manufacturing business in Milburn, New Jersey.

Dr. Campbell acquired his literary education in Summit, New Jersey, and a term in Orange and by private tutors. Later he entered Yale College, from which he was graduated in 1874 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. He was graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York in 1877, and the following year located in North Branford, Connecticut, remaining there until February, 1881, when he removed to Short Hills, New Jersey, where he now enjoys a large and lucrative practice. He is a progressive physician, who keeps abreast of the times, and his skill and ability are attested by the liberal patronage he receives. He is a member of various medical bodies, the New Jersey State Medical Society, the Essex County District Medical Society and the Orange Mountain Medical Society. He is also a member of the Royal Arcanum.

Politically he affiliates with the Republican party, and is an earnest advocate of its principles, without caring for political preferment. He is a committeeman of Milburn township and has been physician to the board of health several years. He is extensively interested in real estate, and has contributed his share toward building up the very beautiful town of Short Hills. On February 8, 1888, Dr. Campbell was united in marriage with Miss Carolyn S. Foote, of Northford, Connecticut; their union has been blessed by three children, Agnes F., Katharine W. and Wellington F. Their home is one of the pleasantest in the town of Short Hills.

CHARLES ALEXANDER GILCHRIST, A. M., M. D.—1892.

Charles Alexander Gilchrist, M. D., of Hoboken, New Jersey, is a descendant of an old Scotch family. His great-grandfather was one of the early settlers of Saratoga county, New York; his grandfather, Alexander Gilchrist, was a native of Saratoga county, and his father, James Gilchrist, was also a native of the same county, but at the present time he is engaged in the raising and cultivation of peaches in Milford, Delaware. He married Miss Anna M. Donnan, who is now deceased.

Dr. Gilchrist was born in West Charlton, Saratoga county, New York, August 11, 1867. He acquired his early education in Newark, Delaware; he then entered Lafayette College, from which he was graduated in 1889 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts, and three years later he received the degree of Master of Arts from the same institution. He entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he was graduated in 1892. He then served as an interne in Christ Hospital, Jersey City. In 1893 Dr. Gilchrist located in Hoboken, New Jersey, where he established a general practice in medicine and surgery. Success crowned his efforts from the beginning, and now he enjoys a large and lucrative patronage. He served from February, 1894, to May, 1901, as assistant surgeon in St. Mary's Hospital, Hoboken, and is now acting in the capacity of orthopedic surgeon to the out-patient department of Christ Hospital, Hoboken, New Jersey.

Dr. Gilchrist is affiliated with the Hudson County District Medical Society and the Practitioners' Club of Jersey City, in which he takes an active interest. He enters into their discussions, and quite frequently prepares a paper to be read at their meetings. Dr. Gilchrist is a member and attendant of St. Paul's Episcopal church of Hoboken, of which he has been a vestryman since 1898. Dr. Gilchrist was united in marriage August 22, 1894, to Miss Margaret Louise Bannister, of Toronto, Canada, and two children have been born to them, Charles Douglas and Dorothy Margaret Gilchrist.

FERDINAND CHARLES WOLFF, M. D.—1895.

Ferdinand Charles Wolff, M. D., a general practitioner of Hoboken, New Jersey, is a son of Ferdinand and Mary (Huesmann) Wolff, the former being a native of Germany, and the latter a native of New Jersey. Dr. Wolff was born in Hoboken, New Jersey, February 12, 1874. He received his elementary education in the Hoboken Academy, and this was later supplemented by a three years' course in the New York University. He then entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he received the degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1895. Subsequently he was connected with the out-patient department of Roosevelt Hospital for one year. He resigned from this position in 1896 in order to pursue a special course of study in Bellevue Hospital. He then went to Europe, and was a student for two years in the Berlin University, after which he visited the cities of Dresden and London to further prosecute his medical studies.

Upon his return to his native land, Dr. Wolff engaged in a general practice of medicine and surgery in Hoboken. In addition to these duties he was appointed house physician in St. Mary's Hospital in Hoboken, where he is now assistant visiting physician, and he also serves in the capacity of secretary of the board of trustees of the same institution. He is also engaged by the Hamburg-American Steamship Line to act as their port surgeon. Dr. Wolff has ever been an earnest and discriminating student, and now holds a position in the first ranks of the medical fraternity of New Jersey. He is a member of the Hudson County District Medical Society. He is also affiliated with the Independent Order of Foresters, and with the German Club of Hoboken, one of the most prominent German clubs in this country. Dr. Wolff is a member of the Catholic church of Hoboken.

LOUIS PHILIP KNAPP, M. D.—1891.

Dr. Louis Philip Knapp, physician and surgeon of Hackensack, New Jersey, was born in that town, February 2, 1869, a son of Ludwig and Caroline (Pleger) Knapp, the former being a native of Germany and the latter of New Jersey. Dr. Knapp acquired his preliminary education in the Hackensack high school, then entered the New York College of Pharmacy, from which he was graduated in 1887. Later he became a student in the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York city, from which he was graduated in 1891 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. He then prosecuted his studies further in the University of Giessen under the able preceptorship of Professor Riegel, and remained a pupil in that institution for three years; he also pursued a course of study in Berlin. After his return to his native land he engaged in a general practice of medicine and surgery in Hackensack, New Jersey, and being peculiarly gifted for his profession, his career was a success from the beginning. He is constantly adding to his knowledge through the discoveries and innovations which are being made from time to time.

Dr. Knapp is affiliated with the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, Uhland Lodge No. 177, I. O. O. F., of which organization he acts in the capacity of past grand; he is also an enthusiastic member of the Hackensack Wheelmen and Hackensack Tent No. 36, Knights of the Macabees. Dr. Knapp was united in marriage, October 29, 1894, to Miss Agnes M. Spengeman, of New York, and one child was born of this union, Gladys M. Knapp. Mrs. Knapp died, October 1, 1899, and Dr. Knapp then contracted an alliance with the sister of his deceased wife, Miss Amelia Spengeman.

JOSEPH EGBERT POLLARD, M. D.—1894.

Dr. Joseph Egbert Pollard has attained a place of prominence by his ability, earnestness and skill in the practice of his chosen profession. He was born in Newark, New Jersey, August 3, 1870. His parents were Charles B. and S. Elizabeth (Sabin) Pollard, natives of New Jersey and Massachusetts, respectively.

Dr. Pollard acquired his literary education in the public schools of his native town and completed his medical course in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, with the class of 1894. After graduation, he spent one year as interne at the Jersey City Hospital, thus putting to a practical test the theoretical knowledge he had acquired in his collegiate course. With a broad and comprehensive understanding of the principles of the science of medicine and with a varied experience which came to him in his hospital work, Dr. Pollard located in Newark as a general practitioner, and in addition to his private practice gave much time and attention to work in St. Michael's Hospital. In 1897 he was appointed surgeon to the Soldiers' Home in Kearney, New Jersey, where he remained until 1900, and after practicing a year in Newark he removed to Chatham, New Jersey, and succeeded to the practice and drug business of Dr. George Swaim.

While connected with the Soldiers' Home, he introduced many new and original features, all of which tended to promote the comfort of the inmates; they are indebted to him for the present system of trained nursing. Formerly the more vigorous inmates were required to minister to the ills of their weaker companions, a practice which has been abolished in the institution; he also did much toward improving the sanitary conditions. Although Dr. Pollard is one of the younger representatives of the profession, he has a reputation for skill that many an older medical practitioner might envy. He keeps in touch with the progress that is being made toward perfection in the line of medical science. On April 18, 1899, Dr. Pollard married Miss Mabel Davison, of Newark, New Jersey. Religiously he and his wife are members of the Episcopal church of the same place.

HENRY GANSEVOORT COOKE, A. M., M. D.—1857.

Dr. Henry Gansevoort Cooke, physician and surgeon of New Brunswick, New Jersey, is a descendant of a family that have been noted for the patriotic spirit they displayed, and for the prominent positions they occupied in the medical profession. Ellis Cooke, great-grandfather of Dr. Cooke, participated in the Revolutionary war and was promoted to the rank of colonel for the heroism and bravery he displayed on the field of battle. Dr. Ambrose Cooke, grandfather of Dr. Cooke, was a prominent member of the medical fraternity and practiced his profession for many years in Boundbrook, New Jersey; he made a specialty of surgery, being particularly well skilled in that department, and his services were in great demand in surgical cases in the northern section of the state of New Jersey. Dr. Robert W. Cooke, father of Dr. Cooke, was born in Sussex county, New Jersey. After acquiring a literary education in the common schools of his native town, young Robert pursued a course of reading in medicine under the able preceptorship of the celebrated Professor Valentine Mott, and in 1820 commenced the practice of his profession in Holmdel, New Jersey, where he continued until 1867. He had a large and lucrative practice and for many years performed most all the surgical cases in Monmouth county. He was united in marriage to Miss Susan Gansevoort.

Dr. Henry E. Ganesvoort Cooke was born in Holmdel, New Jersey, February 3, 1833, and obtained his preliminary education in the public and private schools of his native town; later he was a pupil in the Freehold high school, after which he entered Rutgers College, from which he was graduated in 1853 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts, and three years later the same institution conferred upon him the degree of Master of Arts. Subsequently he became a student in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he was graduated in 1857 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. Shortly after his graduation he located in Holmdel, New Jersey, and devoted his time and energy to the practice of medicine and surgery, and his skill and ability were attested by the liberal patronage he received. In 1897 he removed to New Brunswick, New Jersey, after having resided in Holmdel for forty years, for the purpose of allowing his children better educational advantages, and also with a view to partial retirement. In June, 1862, Dr. Cooke entered the United States service as surgeon to the Twenty-ninth Regiment, New Jersey Volunteers, which position he occupied for nine months. After the expiration of that time he acted as volunteer surgeon until the close of the war, and during this period, for two or three weeks at a time, he went to the front when occasion demanded.

Dr. Cooke is a prominent member of the Monmouth County District Medical Society, of which he is ex-president, the New Jersey State Medical Society and the American Medical Association. He is also a member of the New Brunswick Historical Club and the Phi Beta Kappa fraternity. On June 6, 1876, Dr. Cooke was united in marriage to Miss Maria B. Cowdrey, of New Rochelle, New York. Six children have been born to them, namely: Sara E., Maria C., Robert A. Cooke, A. B., who was graduated from Rutgers College in 1900, and is now a student in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York; Susan G., Henry Gansevoort, Jr., who died in infancy, and Edward A. Cooke, who is a student in the Mohegan Military Academy. Dr. Cooke and his family are prominent and active members of the Second Dutch Reformed church of New Brunswick, New Jersey, of which he has been an elder for several years.

JOSEPH BROCK HARRISON, M. D.—1876.

Dr. Joseph Brock Harrison of Westfield, New Jersey, general practitioner, acquired his early education in the public and private schools of Mobile, Alabama. He then attended the University of Virginia, and later the Medical College of Alabama, from which he was graduated in 1875 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. During the summer months of 1875 he practiced his profession in Ocean Grove, New Jersey, having his office in a tent. The following summer he again went to the same resort and engaged an office in a hotel; he was the only allopathic physician at that time in the town. In the meantime he was not neglecting his medical studies, as he took a special course in physical diagnosis and diseases of the chest with Drs. George W. Wheelock and William M. Polk of Bellevue Medical College, a course on diseases of the eye with Dr. Pomeroy, a course on gynecology with Dr. Paul F. Munde and a course on diseases of the throat with Dr. George M. Lefferts, besides taking the regular course in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, from which he was graduated in 1876.

After his graduation he visited his old home in Alabama, and upon his return in January, 1877, located in Westfield, New Jersey, where he is now conducting a large and lucrative practice, both general and surgical. In addition to this work he is acting in the capacity of examiner for the Equitable Life Insurance Company of New York, the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, the Washington Life Insurance Company of New York, the Aetna Life Insurance Company, the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company of Milwaukee, the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company of Philadelphia, and for others. He has been medical director of the Westfield board of health since its establishment, and was for several years a member of the board of education.

Dr. Harrison is a member of the American Medical Association, the New Jersey State Medical Society, the Union County District Medical Society, of which he has twice been president. He also belongs to the Westfield Club, the Westfield Golf Club, the Royal Arcanum, and the Loyal Additional Benefit Association, of which he is the medical examiner. Dr. Harrison was united in marriage, January 23, 1878, to Miss Adeline A. Stitt of Westfield, but formerly a resident of Meadville, Pennsylvania. In the following year he erected an elegant and commodious residence in Westfield, and here is his pleasant home, where he delights to entertain his friends.

JAMES JOLINE REED, M. D.—1888.

Dr. James Joline Reed, physician and surgeon of Seabright, New Jersey, is a descendant of Scotch-English ancestry. His grandfather, Robert Reed, was prominently identified with the commercial and social activities of Baltimore, Maryland, and his father, William Reed, was born October 15, 1832, near Baltimore, Maryland; at the age of ten years he removed with his parents to Long Branch, New Jersey, where he completed his literary education. Upon attaining young manhood William Reed first engaged in the livery business, afterward in house-painting and contracting until his retirement from the active duties of a business career. He enlisted in the Third Regiment, New Jersey Militia, for three months during the progress of the Civil war, and at the expiration of his term in July, 1861, re-enlisted in Company A, Twenty-ninth Regiment, New Jersey Volunteers, in which he served nine months. In 1862 he again enlisted, this time in Company G, New Jersey Cavalry Volunteers, in which he served until the close of the war. In his political affiliations Mr. Reed was a Democrat, and in his religious beliefs adhered to the doctrines of the Methodist Episcopal church. Mr. Reed was married in 1858 to Miss Sarah A. Joline, daughter of James Joline, and they were the parents of eleven children, seven of whom lived to maturity: William L., Dr. James J., Jarannah, Dr. Walter S., Daniel, Dr. Charles A., and Edward Reed. The father of these children died in 1893, survived by his widow.

Dr. James J. Reed was born in Long Branch, New Jersey, August 31, 1860, and acquired a thorough education in the public schools of his native town. After completing his studies in 1878, he was engaged as a drug clerk in a store at Long Branch, and five years later passed his examination before the state board of pharmacy; he was then associated with Stephen D. Wooley in the management of a drug store at Asbury Park, which they conducted successfully for ten years. Dr. Reed then pursued a course of reading in medicine under the competent preceptorship of Drs. H. W. Garrison and H. S. Kimmouth at Asbury Park, New Jersey, after which he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which in 1888 he was graduated with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. Shortly afterward Dr. Reed commenced the practice of his profession in Seabright, where he has since been actively engaged in a large and select patronage, and during the winter months has quite an extensive practice in New York city. For a number of years he was connected with the Long Branch Hospital, and for ten years served in the capacity of president of the Seabright board of health. He is now a member of the board of education, and is actively associated with the Monmouth County District Medical Society.

Dr. Reed is a broad-minded and liberal Democrat, who votes for principle rather than for party; he was elected a member of the board of commissioners in 1890, and served three years; in 1894 he was elected mayor of Seabright, and served the term of one year; in 1890 he was elected president of the board of health, and he has been urged to stand for the assembly of New Jersey, but this honor he has invariably declined. It was largely through his instrumentality that the present effective system of sewerage was secured, and that the bill was passed incorporating the town as a borough in 1889. Dr. Reed is a member of Long Branch Lodge No. 78, F. & A. M.; Standard Chapter No. 35, R. A. M.; Princess Jerusalem Council, Royal and Select Masons; Carson Commandery No. 15, K. T.; Mecca Temple, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, New York, and has attained his thirty-second degree in the New York Consistory, Long Branch Council No. 429, Royal Arcanum; Seaside Lodge No. 47, K. of P.; Sea View Lodge No. 228, I. O. O. F., of North Long Branch; Ashland Council No. 28, J. O. U. A. M., of Seabright. In the Knights of Pythias order he ranks as past chancellor and as past district deputy, and in the Junior Order of United American Mechanics he is notably prominent.

On May 7, 1882, Dr. Reed married Miss Carrie E. Ferry, daughter of Captain S. W. Ferry, of Oceanport, New Jersey. Their children are: Howard B., born March 18, 1883, now a student in Princeton College; Walter C., born March 24, 1889; and Helen E., born November 24, 1892. Both Dr. Reed and his family are members of the Methodist Episcopal church of Seabright, for which he acts in the capacity of treasurer.

ALEXANDER WILSON ROGERS, M. D.—1836.

Dr. Alexander Wilson Rogers, general practitioner of Paterson, New Jersey, was born in the city of Armagh, Ireland, December 23, 1814, the only son of the Rev. John and Jane (Wilson) Rogers; the name was originally spelled Rodgers and is of English origin, while Wilson, the mother's maiden name, is of Scotch origin. The Rev. John Rogers emigrated to this country from Ireland in 1816, and for fourteen years was pastor of the Baptist Church in Pemberton, New Jersey, and for an equal period of time officiated in Scotch Plains, New Jersey. He then removed to Paterson, where his death occurred in 1849, at the age of sixty-six years; his widow survived him for several years and died in her seventy-ninth year.

Dr. Rogers prepared for college in the private schools of John Bull of Pemberton and the Rev. Dr. Bond, of Plainfield, New Jersey, having for a schoolmate Dr. Abraham Coles, who in later years was one of the most learned physicians of his day, and who during his whole life was a most intimate friend of Dr. Rogers. At the age of sixteen years young Rogers began the study of medicine, and he proved a very apt student. He completed the usual course of lectures in 1835, but not having yet attained his majority was not graduated until the following year, which allowed him to take an extra course. In 1836 the degree of Doctor of Medicine was conferred upon him by the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York. His medical studies were pursued under the direction of Dr. Robert H. Mac-lay, whom he often accompanied on professional calls, thus gaining much valuable knowledge by actual experience. While a student and for one year after, Dr. Rogers lived in New York, one year of the time in practice with his preceptor, and frequently visited the various hospitals and clinics; in this way he met and was associated with many men who were the great leaders of medical science in this country. He attended the last course of lectures given by the celebrated Dr. Valentine Mott, and frequently met and came under the instruction of Drs. Delafield, Post, Stevens and Rogers.

Shortly after receiving his degree Dr. Rogers located in Paterson and engaged in a general practice of medicine and surgery. In 1840 he went to Pontiac, Michigan, where he remained for about six months, but finding the climate too unhealthful even for him, he returned to Paterson. With this exception he has been in practice in Paterson for sixty-six years, attending to his patients nearly every day, going out at all hours and in all kinds of weather, but he says somewhat regretfully that there were two days during the blizzard of 1888 when he did not make his round of calls. Sometimes continued hard work and exposure threatened his health, but what sickness he has had he soon recovered from, so that his patients were never for any length of time without his attention. Although never very robust physically, he is still in possession of all his faculties, hears perfectly, reads without the aid of glasses, and walks with a sprightliness surprising in a man of his advanced years; he has been a life-long total abstainer from the use of alcohol and tobacco. He is frequently present at the meetings of the medical societies of his county and state and gives personal attention to nearly all of his business affairs.

When he first located in Paterson, the city had a population of between nine and ten thousand, and there were only eight practicing physicians. In his early practice he often made his professional calls on horseback, and when he commenced using a carriage he always made it a practice to drive himself. Even to this day, although accompanied by a driver, he handles the reins. Dr. Rogers is thought to be the oldest living graduate of the College of Physicians and Surgeons who is still in practice. He has the distinction of being the first physician to use chloroform in a case of mid-wifery in Paterson; he has always been, and is still, an earnest and discriminating student in the line of his profession. His reading has covered a broad field of medical research and investigation, and he is well informed concerning the various departments of medical science, as well as matters of social and political importance.

Dr. Rogers is a prominent member and has several times been president of the Passaic County District Medical Society, and wrote its history when it was fifty years old; he is also ex-president and fellow of, and has read monographs before the New Jersey State Medical Society. He is a member of the Medical Book Club of Paterson, and when on a visit to London about twenty years ago he was elected a member of the British Medical Association. He has traveled extensively and has been to Europe nine times, his last visit being in 1902, when he passed part of the summer there. Upon the occasion of his early visits to Great Britain he passed much time in visiting the medical schools and hospitals and seeing the work of some of the greatest physicians and surgeons of that time. He was one of the founders of the Paterson General Hospital and a member of the staff up to the year 1900. Dr. Rogers is a director of the First National Bank of Paterson. He has taken much interest in church extension work and has materially aided in the formation of several churches, among them the Fourth Baptist church of Paterson, of which he is now a member. He was one of those who took a leading part in the establishment in Paterson of a branch of the Young Men's Christian Association and was chosen its first president. He has also taken much interest in foreign mission work and for several years donated to this worthy cause the salary of a missionary located in Kurnool in the famous Telugoo mission, India. He has the highest respect for the rights of others and believes everyone entitled to personal opinions, but is an earnest advocate of carrying the light of civilization to those who live in the darkness of superstition and ignorance.

On October 20, 1842, Dr. Rogers was united in marriage to Miss Anna Hague, only daughter of Captain James Hague, who lived near Hackensack, and sister of the Rev. William Hague. Three children were born to them: John, who died at the age of six years; James H., an attorney and counsellor at law of Paterson, who was united in marriage to Miss Carrie Cundell, and they have one child, Julia Rogers; and John Alexander, who chose his father's profession.

JOHN ALEXANDER ROGERS, M. D.—1875.

Among the graduates of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York who have gone to their final reward is Dr. John Alexander Rogers, who died in Paterson, New Jersey, December 30, 1883. He was born in that city, July 7, 1852, and was a son of Dr. Alexander Wilson Rogers. He prepared for college in the public and private schools of his native city and was a graduate of the University of the City of New York. He then matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he was graduated in 1875 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. Subsequently, in 1881, he passed several months studying in Europe. Soon after securing his degree he located in Paterson and engaged in the practice of his profession. He was well equipped for the work of his chosen calling, and being of a very amiable disposition and genial manner he soon acquired a large patronage. In attending an obstetric case he contracted a severe cold which developed into pneumonia, and from which he died, a martyr to professional duty. He was a member of the Passaic County District Medical Society and the New Jersey State Medical Society, and was a physician and surgeon of ability, and had he lived would undoubtedly have reflected much credit upon his profession.

CHARLES FREDERICK LEHLBACH, M. D.—1888.

Dr. Charles Frederick Lehlbach, of Newark, New Jersey, was born in that city, May 12, 1863, a son of Dr. Charles F. J. Lehlbach, who was born in Baden, Germany, March 16, 1835. Dr. Lehlbach, Sr., son of the Rev. Frederick Augustus Lehlbach, a distinguished scholar, is a descendant of a family distinguished in Germany for their social and professional attainments; he emigrated to this country in 1849, and having obtained his early education under the personal supervision of his father, was enabled to enter the College of Physicians and Surgeons when only sixteen years of age, better equipped for his professional studies than the average student. He was graduated with honors in 1856, and at once established an office in Newark, New Jersey, where for three years he enjoyed a constantly increasing patronage. At the expiration of this period of time he was called to Philadelphia to become one of the editors of the Medical and Surgical Reporter; he retained this position until the war broke out, when he enlisted as a private in the District of Columbia Volunteers, and afterward joined Battery B, First Pennsylvania Light Infantry. In 1863 he was appointed assistant surgeon of the Seventh Regiment, New Jersey Volunteers, in which position he served until the close of the war. He then returned to Newark, resumed the practice of his profession and in 1867 was appointed county physician; during the year 1871 and 1872, besides attending to his private practice, he filled the position of editor of the Freie Zeitung during the editor's absence in Europe. He served as one of the regular staff of the German Hospital. Dr. Lehlbach was a charter member of the Practitioners' Club, a member of the Essex County Medical Society, in which he served for several terms as president, and a permanent delegate to the State Medical Society. He was a man of varied attainments, and as a physician was regarded by his professional brethren as being without a peer in the city and county. His death occurred in Newark, New Jersey, August 14, 1895.

Dr. Charles Frederick Lehlbach prepared for college in the Newark high school, and after his graduation matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which he was graduated in 1888 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. The following year was spent in post-graduate work in the same institution, after which he commenced the practice of his profession in Newark, New Jersey. He soon acquired a large patronage, and commands the highest esteem of the profession and laity of the community in which he has labored so long and faithfully. He acted as physician to the late Dr. Thomas Dunn English, who was a close personal friend of his. In his practice he has had many cases of surgery, being well qualified in that branch of the profession. For two years he served as house surgeon to St. Michael's Hospital, and is now visiting surgeon to the Newark German Hospital. From December, 1891, to February, 1896, he served in the capacity of health officer of Newark and filled the position with distinction. Dr. Lehlbach is prominently identified with the Essex County District Medical Society, the Practitioners' Club of Newark, of which he has been the secretary for several years, and the Alumni Association of the College of Physicians and Surgeons

ALBERT FREY, M. D.—1888.

Dr. Albert Frey, general practitioner of Newark, New Jersey, is a descendant of a family of royal birth, his great-grandfather being one of the founders of Carlsruhe, Baden, Germany. Albert Frey, father of Dr. Albert Frey, was born in Carlsruhe, Baden, Germany, in 1818; he received his education in his native town, and subsequently became prominently identified with the commercial interests of Baden, being one of its most loyal citizens during the revolution of 1848. The following year Mr. Frey came to the United States, locating in New York city, where he became associated with the well known firm of Lord & Taylor, with which he remained until 1851. He then removed to Newark, New Jersey, where he accepted a position with the firm of Edward Balbach & Son in their gold and silver smelting and refining works, now known as the Balbach Smelting and Refining Company, where he continued for the remainder of his life. Mr. Frey was a member of Newark Lodge No. 7, F. & A. M., and a devout adherent of the Lutheran church. He married Miss Josephine Kipp, and the following named children were born to them: Josephine, wife of Francis B. Chedsey, of New York city; Louise, wife of Martin Rilke, of Germany; Ida, widow of C. W. Sundmacher, of Germany; Katie, widow of W. H. Erb, of Newark; and Dr. Albert Frey, of Newark. The father of these children died in 1873, and his wife survived him until September 4, 1890.

Dr. Albert Frey, only son of Albert and Josephine Frey, was born in Newark, New Jersey, June 24, 1863. He acquired his early education in a private German school on Green street, Newark, from which he was graduated in 1873; he then went to Germany and attended the real-gymnasium of Carlsruhe, a scientific college, where he pursued a course of study for the following three years, at the expiration of which time he went to Muenchen-Gladbach and entered the gymnasium there, from which he was graduated in 1879. After his return to his native land he entered Phillips Academy at Andover, Massachusetts, from which he was graduated in 1881; in the same year he became a student at Yale College, but finished only the course of the freshman year. In 1882 he attended both the College of Pharmacy and the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, pursuing his studies at the latter institution until 1884, when he once more visited Germany and entered the University of Bonn, remaining there about a year. In 1885 he returned to this country and became associated with Professor William H. Porter, of the Post-Graduate Medical School in New York city, taking charge of the pathological laboratory and assisting the professor in conducting post-mortem examinations in the city department of Bellevue Hospital; at the same time he attended the College of Physicians and Surgeons, from which he was graduated in 1888. He remained a year longer with Professor Porter, adding to his technical knowledge by assuming charge of one of the first bacteriological laboratories in New York.

In 1889 Dr. Frey opened an office in Newark, New Jersey, and entered upon the active practice of his profession, and has enjoyed the distinction of being the first physician in New Jersey to use anti-toxin for the cure of diphtheria. He has given much of his attention to the diseases of children, and he also devotes a large portion of his time to developing his knowledge in surgery. Dr. Frey was invited by Dr. Janeway, a celebrated physician of New York, to read a paper before the New York Academy of Medicine on "The Successful Treatment of Haemophilia by the Injection of Normal Serum," and it was published in the Medical Record of July, 1898. Dr. Frey is a student of comparative linguistics, and can speak German and French fluently; for the years 1897 and 1898 he was a member of the board of education. He is a member of the Essex County District Medical Society, the New Jersey State Medical Society, the American Medical Association, and was secretary of the defunct Newark Medical Association. He is also prominently identified with Newark Lodge No. 7, F. & A. M., Union Chapter No. 7, R. A. M., Kane Council No. 3, Royal and Select Masons; Damascus Commandery No. 5, K. T., and Mecca Temple, Ancient Arabic Order of the Mystic Shrine of New York. He is also a member of the German Liederkrantz of New York, the Arion and German singing societies of Newark, and in his religious faith he is a Lutheran and a member of the Society of Chosen Friends. On December 10, 1884, Dr. Frey married Miss Louise Jung, a native of Germany, and the following named children were born to them: Irmengard Elfriede Josephine, deceased; Ottmar Wedekind Rudolph, and Millie.

WILLIAM ERNEST RAMSAY, M. D.—1888.

Among the prominent physicians and surgeons of New Jersey who reflect credit upon the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York as their alma mater, is Dr. William Ernest Ramsay, of Perth Amboy. He is a native of Prince Edward Island, where he was born November 11, 1866. His parents, Hugh and Sarah Jane Longworth (Lawson) Ramsay, were also natives of that island, where his grandparents were among the early settlers, coming from Scotland. His father was engaged in ship-building in Prince Edward Island and later in Perth Amboy, where his death occurred in 1900. The business is still continued by a reorganized company, of which Dr. William E. Ramsay is vice-president.

After preparing for college in the Boston high school, Dr. Ramsay matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York and was graduated in 1888 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. For nearly three years after graduating he was in charge of the Baltimore City Insane Asylum, and then engaged in private practice in Perth Amboy, where he enjoys a large and select patronage; his work embraces general medicine and surgery. He is visiting surgeon to the Perth Amboy City Hospital and does considerable consulting surgery. He is the author of a number of scientific papers which have been read before the medical societies and later published.

He is a member of the Middlesex County District Medical Society, of which he is vice-president; the New Jersey State Medical Society, and the American Medical Association. He was health officer of the port of Perth Amboy in 1894-8, special inspector under the United States Marine Hospital service during the cholera epidemic and has been health officer of the city of Perth Amboy since 1898. He is also a member of Raritan Lodge No. 61, F. & A. M., and Perth Amboy Lodge No. 784, B. P. O. E. In 1899 Dr. Ramsay married Miss Marie Scott Hall, daughter of William Scott Hall of Perth Amboy; he has two children, William Scott Ramsay and Dorothea Lawson Ramsay.

PHANETT COE BARKER, M. D.—1860.

This retired physician of Morristown, New Jersey, during his long and active professional career was known not only as a skillful practitioner but on account of the many prominent positions he occupied in the medical fraternity. He was also noted for the valuable medical and surgical contributions which he wrote for publication and for presentation before the various medical societies.

He is a son of George Wadsworth and Lodema (Coe) Barker and was born near Utica, New York, May 9, 1835. He is a descendant of an old and well known English family whose history can be traced back to the year 1200. The line is of Norman extraction. During the reign of Edward II there were many petty revolutions in England, and in the course of one of these, because of the execution of his overlord one De Badelsmere, William De Calverhall, living in the north of Shropshire, fled to the southern portion of that county and changed his name to Le Barker, and later to Barker. After many generations the family returned to the north and tried to resume their former name, but in this they were unsuccessful. There is no doubt that one of the family was with Edward I on his crusade, as one branch of the family bore a coat of arms consisting of five scallop shells in a cross. One of Dr. Barker's ancestors was Edward Barker, a merchant, who emigrated from England in the early colonial days and about 1640 settled in Boston, Massachusetts; about 1665 he moved to New Haven, Connecticut, and died in Branford.

Phanett Coe Barker received his preliminary education in a private school and the academy of his native town. He then entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons, from which he was graduated in 1860. He was chosen valedictorian of his class, which he declined, however, and was then given the rare honor of choosing the valedictorian. He was the first interne chosen out of forty applicants and served his interneship in the Bellevue Hospital. In partnership with Dr. Frederick D. Lente he began the practice of his profession in Cold Spring on the Hudson, where he remained until 1868. He then removed to Morristown, New Jersey, where he established a large general practice, which he continued up to 1897, and then retired from the active duties of his profession. In the early part of his career he performed many surgical operations both in Cold Spring and in Morristown, but of late years devoted himself almost entirely to a general practice. Dr. Barker was the surgeon in chief of the Morristown Memorial Hospital from its organization up to 1900, was consulting surgeon of All Souls Hospital from its organization till 1900, and he also served as pension surgeon from 1869 to 1900. He acted in the capacity of president of the board of health in Cold Spring, and held the same position in Morristown. Aside from his professional duties Dr. Barker found time to devote to the study of astronomy, and he wrote and delivered a lecture on this interesting science.

Dr. Barker is the ex-president of the Morris County District Medical Society, ex-president of the New Jersey State Medical Society, and for that reason a fellow of the society, and he was for several years corresponding member of the Boston Gynecological Society. He is a member of the Morristown Club, and fellow of the New York Geographical Society. On February 11, 1886, the trustees of Princeton University conferred upon him the degree of Master of Arts, an honor which was entirely unexpected, and stands as an eloquent testimonial to his scientific abilities. He takes an active interest in the public affairs of the city, and has served two terms as a member of the common council. On September 30, 1863, Dr. Barker was united in marriage to Miss Anna E. Barton, a daughter of David Lathrop Barton of Waterville, New York, who was a descendant of an old and respected Massachusetts family. The two children born of this union are now deceased.

WILLIAM EDGAR DERRY, M. D.—1880.

Dr. William Edgar Derry, physician and surgeon of Dover, New Jersey, was born in that city, July 2, 1856, a son of Daniel A. and Sarah A. (Francisco) Derry, natives of New Jersey. The Derry family are of Scotch-Irish extraction, the great-grandfather of Dr. Derry being one of the pioneers of the Empire state; his grandfather, John Derry, was for many years one of the prominent residents of New York, and followed the occupation of tailoring. Daniel A. Derry, father of Dr. Derry, was one of the enterprising merchants of Dover, New Jersey, and is still a resident of that city. His wife was the daughter of Robert Francisco, and the latter's father, Robert Francisco, Sr., was the son of a Holland emigrant.

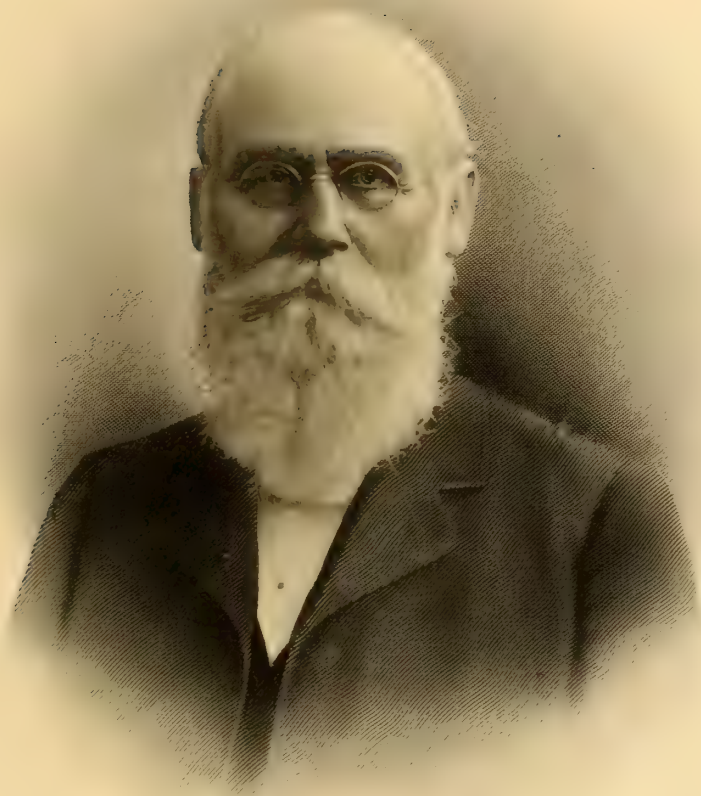

In the public schools of his native town Dr. Derry acquired his elementary education, and he prepared for college in the Stoutenburgh Seminary at Schooleys Mountain, Morris county, and later matriculated at Wilbraham Academy (Wesleyan), in Massachusetts, where he prosecuted his studies for two years. He then studied for four years under the direction of Drs. Quinby and Pierson of Morristown. With the celebrated Professor Francis Delafield as his preceptor, he entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York from which he was graduated with the degree of Doctor of Medicine in the class of 1880. He began the practice of his profession in Dover, and in 1892 took up special work in the treatment of diseases of the eye, ear, nose and throat, but still continues a general practice of medicine and surgery.

Dr. Derry has carried his investigations beyond those of the average practitioner, and he has marked out for himself a successful career. For four years he was the clinical assistant to Dr. Knapp in the New York Ophthalmic and Aural Institute, and in addition to these duties he has acted in the capacity of local surgeon to the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad. He is the medical examiner of the Royal Arcanum, of which he is a prominent member, and he also holds the same position in nearly all the important insurance companies.

Dr. Derry was united in marriage, September 1, 1887, to Miss Olivia Smith, a daughter of Ford D. Smith, a prominent attorney of Dover, New Jersey. Four children have been born to them: Edna; Maud, who died aged five years; Sara and Mildred Derry. Dr. Derry is a man of fine physical powers, has a pleasing personality, and is very fond of outdoor sports; he spends his vacations in hunting and fishing.

NELSON L. NORTH, M. D.—1854.

Few men can trace their ancestry back in more direct line to so early a date as Dr. Nelson Luther North, of Brooklyn. He is a descendant of John North, who was born in 1615, and came from England in the good ship Susan and Ellen, in the year 1691, becoming one of the original eighty-four settlers who founded the town of Farmington, Connecticut. The line of descent is traced down through Samuel, who married Hannah Norton; Thomas, who married Hannah Woodford, Timothy, who married Hannah North; Seth, who married Abigail Bidwell; Guy, who married Catherine Provost, and Czar Peter North, Dr. North's father. The last named was born in Farmington, Connecticut, and married Miss Epeline Holcomb, a native of western New York. They had six children: Nancy Abigail, now deceased, became the wife of Mortimer Le Valley and resided in Flint county, Michigan; Norman Guy is engaged in farming in Nebraska; Louise died at the age of twelve years; Nelson L. is the next of the family; Edwin Delos is a Grand Army man, who was in nearly every battle about Washington and in the Shenandoah valley, including Antietam, was shot in the arm in the battle of Lookout Mountain, and who now resides in Canton, New York; and Malcolm Norton, for five years in the regular army, now resides in Oregon.

Welson L North

Nelson L. North was born in Elba, Genesee county, New York, on the 20th of April, 1830, and in the common schools acquired his preliminary education, which was supplemented by study in the Wilson Collegiate Institute, in Wilson, Niagara county, New York. His professional training was begun under the direction of Dr. William B. Gould, of Lockport, New York, and later he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, being graduated in that institution in 1854. After securing his degree he engaged in the practice of his profession in the eastern district of Brooklyn, where he has since remained, with the exception of two years in Aiken, South Carolina, to recuperate his shattered health. In 1855 he wrote an article on "The Uses of Sulphuric Acid for Cholera and Like Diseases," which was published in the Buffalo Medical Journal of that year, and which was largely copied and quoted throughout the country. Ten years later he wrote and published in pamphlet form a complete resumé of what was known concerning cholera, its causes, preventives and treatment. He was among the first to agitate the subject of the necessity of quarantining for scarlet fever and allied diseases, and read a paper setting forth his views before the National Medical Association at its meeting in New Orleans in 1869. He was the first to recognize and describe the complete dislocation of the clavicle at both ends, for which his suggested treatment was published in the Medical Record of New York in 1862 and copied extensively throughout England, France and the United States, being given a place in the authoritative work on "Fractures, Dislocations, etc.," by Frank H. Hamilton, M. D., LL. D., of New York. He is also the author of a large number of other papers upon medical and surgical subjects, which have been presented before the various medical societies and largely published. Both as to age and date of graduation, he is at present some years the senior physician of the eastern district of Brooklyn.

On the 20th of June, 1856, Dr. North was united in marriage to Mrs. Susannah Brown, daughter of Philo Kennedy, of Brooklyn. They have had four children: Jeremiah Anthony, the eldest, is a well known butter expert and an extensive exporter of butter in New York; he married Emma Hazelton, and to them have been born three children, Harry Irving, Howard Alden and Jennie Slayback. Mrs. Abrota Susannah Cardwell, the second child, is a graduate of the Packer Collegiate Institute, on her commencement day reading the Latin essay, and at the present time she is a prominent educator; she has two children, Abrota Susannah and Nelson Henry. Nelson Luther is an eminent eye specialist of Brooklyn, who married Emma Brown, by whom he has three children, Nelson Luther, Sidney and Miriam. The fourth member of the family was Willard Parker, a son of promise, who died at the age of eleven years.

From 1860 until 1869 Dr. North was police surgeon of Brooklyn, and during the Civil war was surgeon to the board of enrollment—draft surgeon—of the third congressional district. He was for fifteen years attending physician at the Brooklyn Methodist Home for the Aged, and has been consulting surgeon to the Methodist Episcopal Hospital of Brooklyn since the establishment of that institution. He is a prominent and valued member of the Medical Society of the County of Kings, the Kings County Medical Association, the New York Academy of Medicine, the New York State Medical Association and the American Medical Association.

Dr. North holds membership in the St. John's Methodist Episcopal church, and socially is connected with the Masonic fraternity. He has been a supporter of the Republican party since its organization, is a member of the Nineteenth Ward Republican Association, and in 1858, during the days of the inception of the Republican party, he was its candidate for coroner of Brooklyn, a Democratic city, and though defeated he ran far ahead of the ticket. Dr. North has had considerable influence over public opinion, as his numerous letters upon various topics of interest frequently appearing in the daily papers would indicate. Occasionally a literary effort in the way of a moral or temperance story has been found in print over his signature. He has also several books in manuscript which may yet be offered for publication. "Ask and Receive," is the title of a volume about to be presented to the publisher.

NELSON L. NORTH, JR., M. D.—1886.

Dr. Nelson L. North, Jr., was born in Brooklyn, April 26, 1865, and is a son of Dr. Nelson L. and Susannah (Brown) North. Dr. North was educated in the public schools of Brooklyn and in the Polytechnic Institute, and prepared for the medical profession in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University, where he was graduated with the class of 1886. He at once established an office in Brooklyn, and for about four years thereafter was engaged in general practice, but gradually his energies concentrated upon the department concerning the treatment of the eye and ear, and since 1890 he has devoted his energies exclusively to that line; he is recognized as an expert, and his pronounced ability has gained him a very enviable and extended reputation. Since 1889 he has resided in a pleasant home at 118 Hooper street.

Dr. North has written a number of professional papers which were read before the various medical societies and subsequently published. He has been surgeon of the Brooklyn Eye and Ear Hospital since 1893, and consulting ophthalmological surgeon to the Williamsburg Hospital since its establishment. He holds membership relations with the New York State Medical Association; the Medical Society of the County of Kings; the Kings County Medical Association; the Long Island Medical Society; the Associated Physicians of Long Island; the New York State Medical Association; and the Physicians' Mutual Aid Association of New York.

He was united in marriage, April 25, 1889, to Miss Margaret Emma Brown, daughter of the late Dr. D. H. Brown of Brooklyn, and they have three children: Sidney Edwin, Miriam Emma and Nelson L. Dr. North and his wife are members of St. John's Methodist Episcopal church. He also belongs to the Nineteenth Ward Republican Association and the Young Republican Club. He is a director in the Young Men's Christian Association and takes an active interest in all that pertains to the public welfare, whether it be along political, social, intellectual or moral lines.

MILTON ALLISON SHANGLE, M. D.—1900.

Dr. Milton Allison Shangle, of Elizabeth, New Jersey, general practitioner, was born in Roselle, New Jersey, July 24, 1878, a son of Amos and Angie (Crane) Shangle, both natives of New Jersey. He received his preparatory education in the public school, and the Leal School of Plainfield, New Jersey. After his graduation from the latter institution Dr. Shangle entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York, from which he was graduated in 1900. For one year and a half he served an internship in the Elizabeth General Hospital. He then opened an office in Elizabeth, and he is concentrating all his energies on his work.

Dr. Shangle is one of the young and promising members of the medical fraternity, and is well equipped to make his career a brilliant one. He is competent and energetic, fond of study and research, and his devotion to his chosen calling is deep and abiding. He is a member of the Union County District Medical Society, and the Clinical Society of the Elizabeth General Hospital and Dispensary. He is also a faithful and consistent member of the First Presbyterian church of Roselle, New Jersey.

GEORGE HENRY BALLERAY, M. D.—1869.

Dr. George H. Balleray, for over thirty years actively engaged in the practice of medicine and surgery in Paterson, New Jersey, is the son of William and Exerene (Charlton) Balleray. His literary education was acquired in Montreal, Canada, where he studied French, English, Latin, Greek, and subsequently mastered the German and Italian. Until the age of fifteen years he spoke and wrote French much better than English, was also able to speak and read German fluently, but having acquired the Italian later in life his knowledge of that language was necessarily more limited. Determining to devote his life to the medical profession, he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, and after pursuing the regular course was graduated with the degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1869.

Shortly after his graduation Dr. Balleray registered in New York, also in Pennsylvania, as he had serious thoughts at one time of locating in that state, but he commenced the active practice of his profession in Paterson, New Jersey, the same year of his graduation. His marked ability soon gained for him a large and lucrative practice, and in 1871 he was appointed physician, surgeon and gynecologist of St. Joseph's Hospital in Paterson; in 1876 he became connected with the Paterson General Hospital, first as general surgeon and later as gynecologist, and for a period of ten years acted in the capacity of surgeon to the Woman's Hospital, Newark, New Jersey. In 1879 Dr. Balleray went to Europe in order to prosecute his studies and the most of his time was devoted to abdominal surgery; he had letters of introduction from the late Dr. J. Marion Sims to Spencer Wells, Bantock and Thornton in London, Keith in Edinburg, Tait in Birmingham and Péan in Paris, and he remained abroad two years. He visited Europe for the second time in 1890, remaining until 1892, and during that time he followed the practice of Drs. Martin of Berlin, Saenger of Leipsic, Leopold of Dresden, Durante of Rome and Porus of Milan. After his return to his native country Dr. Balleray resumed his practice in Paterson, New Jersey, and being enthusiastic in his desire for personal improvement, and to contribute to the advancement of the profession and the relief of suffering humanity, he has always been a watchful observer and intent student and has devised various methods and appliances which have been of great usefulness.

Dr. Balleray has also written a number of valuable articles, among them being: "Strangulated Ovarian Hernia," "Oöphorectomy for Fibroid Tumors of the Uterus," "Erysipelas as a Complication in Pregnancy and Labor," "Silk-worm Gut Sutures in Gynecological Surgery," "Treatment of Recent Lacerations of the Cervix," "Femoral Hernia Strangulated on its First Descent," "In the Treatment of Appendicitis is the Present Free Use of the Knife Necessary?" "Fibroid Tumors Complicating Labor," "Diagnosis and Treatment of Ectopic Pregnancy in the Early Months," "Erysipelas as a Complication in Abdominal Surgery," "A Plea for Early Operation in Cancer of the Uterus," and "New Growth in the Bladder of a Child." Dr. Balleray is a fellow of the New York Academy of Medicine, a member of the Medical Society of the County of New York, the American Medical Association, the Alumni Association of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, a fellow of the British Gynecological Society, and a permanent delegate to the New Jersey State Medical Society. Socially he is a member of the New York Athletic Club and the Hamilton Club of Paterson, New Jersey. In his leisure hours Dr. Balleray enjoys fishing and shooting, and also delights in the works of nature, coming back from each trip with renewed energy for his daily vocation.

HARRY MARTYN BRACE, A. B., M. D.—1881.

Among the alumni of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York whose field of practice is in the state of New Jersey, and who have achieved a marked degree of success, is Dr. Harry Martyn Brace of Perth Amboy. He was born in the old house famous in history as the "Stone Jug," in Catskill, Greene county, New York, June 19, 1859, and is a son of Henry and Emeline (Demorest) Brace, natives of New York and Pennsylvania.

His early education was obtained in the public schools of New York city, and in 1877 he was graduated from the College of the City of New York with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. He then matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he was graduated in 1881 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. After an internship of eighteen months in Charity Hospital, he engaged in practice in New York city, but not enjoying good health in the metropolis he removed to Port Jervis, New York, in 1884, and in 1892 to his present location. Dr. Brace's professional work has been of a general nature, but in later years much of his attention has been claimed by gynecology and obstetrics.

Dr. Brace is a member of the Middlesex County District Medical Society, the New Jersey State Medical Society, the American Medical Association, and is a prominent member of the American Medical Society. He takes active interest in these organizations, taking part in their deliberations and often presenting scientific papers at their meetings. He is also a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, Junior Order of United American Mechanics, Knights of Pythias, Royal Arcanum and Red Men. He has been active in the affairs of the Republican party, and besides serving a term as coroner of Middlesex county, was the party's choice for mayor of Perth Amboy, but was defeated with the rest of the ticket. On May 1, 1884, Dr. Brace married Miss Frances Larano Harrington, daughter of Ellbridge Gerry Harrington, of New York. They are both members of Dr. Crosby's Presbyterian church of New York.

WALTER BUCKLEY JOHNSON, M. D.—1878.

Dr. Walter Buckley Johnson, a prominent specialist on diseases of eye, ear, nose and throat, of Paterson, New Jersey, was born in that city, January 3, 1856. He was the only child of James and Elizabeth (Wilson) Johnson, the former being a native of Birmingham, England, whence he emigrated to this country, and became a prominent merchant in Paterson, New Jersey, where he conducted business for many years. His wife was born in Scotland, and came to this country at an early age.

Dr. Johnson acquired his early education in private schools of Paterson; he then entered the University of the City of New York, where he studied for two years, and later became a student in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, from which he was graduated in 1878. He spent an internship of one year and a half in the Charity Hospital, Blackwell's Island, and was afterwards actively associated for six months in Chambers Street Hospital, New York city. In 1877 he became clinical assistant to Dr. Agnew in the eye clinic of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York, where he remained until he was appointed as assistant in the Manhattan Eye and Ear Infirmary; he acted in the capacity of clinic assistant and afterward assistant surgeon for seventeen years. He began the practice of his profession in May, 1880, in Paterson, New Jersey, where he conducted a general line of work for four years, and since that time he has practiced exclusively as a specialist on the eye, ear, nose and throat. His devotion to the duties of his profession, combined with a comprehensive understanding of the principles of the science of medicine, have made him a most successful and able practitioner, whose prominence is well deserved.

In addition to his extensive private practice, Dr. Johnson is the visiting surgeon of the eye, ear and throat department of the Paterson General Hospital. He is the president of the association connected with that institution, and during the erection of the new building he was made chairman of the executive committee; his connection with this hospital in different capacities covers a period of twenty years. He is the visiting physician to St. Joseph's Hospital, having held this position for the past eighteen years. He is executive surgeon to the Paterson Eye and Ear Infirmary, which he organized in 1883. This is an important part in his professional work, and he devotes three afternoons a week to it. The general welfare of the infirmary has received his best efforts, and he leaves nothing undone to perfect it in all its facilities and appointments. It is directly through his instrumentality that manufacturers and dealers of instruments and supplies have donated their products to the institution until scarcely anything is lacking. Dr. Johnson is also the author of many valuable monographs and papers in his department of medicine and surgery, which have been presented before medical societies and subsequently published in the scientific journals and in pamphlet form.

Dr. Johnson is a prominent member of the American Ophthalmological Society, the American Otological Society, the American Ophthalmological, Otological and Laryngological Society, the American Medical Association, of which he is a permanent member; a non-resident fellow of the New York Academy of Medicine, the New Jersey State Medical Society, of which he is now the third vice president; the Passaic County District Medical Society, and the Alumni Association of Charity Hospital, New York. He is also prominently identified with the Royal Arcanum and the Loyal Additional Benefit Association. He is a member of the Hamilton Club of Paterson and the North Jersey Country Club. He is an enthusiastic golf player and he is very fond of all outdoor sports. In his politics he is a Republican, and formerly took quite an active part in the affairs of his party. He is a consistent member of the Presbyterian denomination, attending the Church of the Redeemer in Paterson, New Jersey. On May 11, 1881, Dr. Johnson was united in marriage to Miss Martha Hurd, daughter of Abraham and Agnes Hurd, of Paterson. Three children have been born to them: Elsie Wilson, wife of Dr. John C. McCoy, of Paterson; Eleanor Hurd, and Margaret Waugh Johnson.

GEORGE WASHINGTON VREELAND, M. D.—1892.

Dr. George Washington Vreeland, general practitioner of Paterson, New Jersey, can trace his ancestry back to 1636, when Michael Yansen Vreeland emigrated from Vreeland, Holland, to this country and settled opposite the city of Albany, New York; it is thought probable that he resided there until his death. His son, Enoch Vreeland, was also a resident of the same locality and was united in marriage to Miss Dirchsje Meyers, of Amsterdam, and after her death he married Grietjen Wessels, widow of Jan Janse Langedyck. Joris Vreeland, son of Enoch Vreeland, married for his first wife Miss Annetje Van Winekle, and subsequently he was married to Miss Annetje Van Wagener, of Aquachanouck. Garrett Vreeland, son of Joris Vreeland, was united in marriage to Jannetje Cadinus, and their son Richard Vreeland was a wealthy, influential resident of Jersey City, New Jersey; he married Miss Mary De Mott, and their son, Richard C., married Miss Margaret Ann Demorest, who was the mother of Dr. George Washington Vreeland.

Dr. Vreeland was born in Lodi, New York, and received his elementary education in the public schools of that town; subsequently he entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York, from which he was graduated in 1892 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. Immediately after his graduation he commenced the practice of his profession in Rutherford, New Jersey, where he had the patronage of many of the most select families of the town; he remained there until 1897 when he removed to Paterson, New Jersey, where he is engaged in a general line of work in medicine and surgery. Dr. Vreeland has won a position of prominence in connection with the practice of medicine. He is a member of the Passaic County District Medical Society.

On March 27, 1895, Dr. Vreeland was united in marriage to Miss Mary Elizabeth Young, daughter of John Wesley Young, a well known clergyman of the Methodist Episcopal church; she is also the granddaughter of William Young, who was also a local Methodist Episcopal preacher. Both he and his wife are members of the Market Street Methodist Episcopal church of Paterson, New Jersey. Three children have been born of this union: Dorothy Young, Caroline Musk and Wesley Young Vreeland.

JAMES ALEXANDER BROWNE, M. D.—1889.

Dr. James Alexander Browne, general practitioner and proprietor of a drug store in Paterson, New Jersey, was born in that city July 7, 1866, a son of John and Annie E. (Taylor) Browne, and a grandson of John P. Browne, who was a member of the firm of Warren & Browne, who in 1823 established a tannery in Paterson, and for many years conducted an extensive and lucrative business; subsequently the name of the firm changed to that of John P. Browne & Son, the junior member being Dr. Browne's father. The present style of the firm is Browne Brothers and it deals extensively in leather and findings; it is composed of Dr. Browne's father and uncle, and they have the reputation of being the oldest and most reliable concern in the city, as their business is conducted in a thoroughly honorable and conscientious manner.

Dr. Browne acquired his early education in the public schools of Paterson, and this was supplemented by a course of study in the private school conducted by Professor McManus; he then entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons, from which he was graduated in 1889 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. He immediately began the practice of his profession in Paterson and his patronage has steadily and constantly increased, so that he is now in command of an excellent business. In addition to his private practice, he was for several years actively associated with St. Joseph's Hospital of Paterson. In 1893 he established a drug store, which he has since continued. In 1890 he was elected to fill the responsible position of coroner of Passaic county, New Jersey, and is now medical inspector of schools in the city of Paterson.

Dr. Browne is a prominent member of the Passaic County District Medical Society and the New Jersey State Medical Society. He is also actively connected with the Heptasophs, for which he is medical examiner: he is past exalted ruler of Paterson Elk Lodge No. 60, B. P. O. E., and was elected delegate to the grand lodge of the latter organization held at Salt Lake City in 1902. He is an active member of the Tribe of Ben Hur. On October 24, 1894, Dr. Browne was united in marriage to Miss Frances M. Dowell, daughter of John C. Dowell, who acts in the capacity of superintendent of the largest silk mill in Paterson, New Jersey. Three children have been born to them: Margaret M., Anita F. and James Alexander Browne, Jr. The family are devout members of the Roman Catholic church.

EVERETT JAMES McKNIGHT, A. B., M. D.—1879.

Dr. Everett J. McKnight, of Hartford, Connecticut, can trace his ancestry back, on the paternal side, to John McKnight, who came to this country in 1732 and settled in Hartford, Connecticut, and later in New Haven, Connecticut, where he was prominently identified with the mercantile service, being the owner of two vessels. In 1745 he returned to Hartford, where he engaged in an extensive mercantile and banking business. At the outbreak of the Revolutionary war he was one of a company who loaned large sums of money to the government for the carrying on of the war, and for various reasons only a small portion of the amount was ever returned. He was the owner of a large estate, but all that was left to him after the war ended was a small farm in that portion of Windsor, now known as the town of Ellington, Connecticut. Dr. McKnight is also a lineal descendant of the Kimballs, Kents, Alworths and Trumbulls. On the maternal side he is descended from Samuel Allen, a native of Sussex, England, who settled in Braintree, Massachusetts, in 1632; also from Margaret Thompson, who came to this country in 1720 accompanied by her seven sons and one daughter, and they took up their residence in East Windsor, Connecticut, where a large number of her descendants now reside. One member of this family, Samuel, is the lineal ancestor of Dr. McKnight, who can also claim relationship to the Stiles, Elsworths, Rockwells and other prominent New England families.

Dr. McKnight was born in Ellington, Connecticut, June 12, 1855, a son of James Dixon and Mary F. (Thompson) McKnight, the former being a prominent agriculturist of that town. He acquired his preliminary education in Hall's Family School at Ellington and the Hopkins grammar school at New Haven, after which he became a student of Yale University, receiving from that institution the degree of Bachelor of Arts in 1876. Subsequently he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, which institution conferred upon him the degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1879, he being marshall of that class. On March 17, 1879, Dr. McKnight established an office at East Hartford, Connecticut, where he conducted a general practice, making a specialty of surgery, up to August, 1893, when he removed to Hartford, where he has since remained. In addition to his extensive private practice Dr. McKnight acts in the capacity of visiting surgeon to the Hartford Hospital, consulting surgeon to the Hartford

EVERETT J. McKNIGHT.

Orphan Asylum, and since November 13, 1899, has served as medical director for the Hartford Life Insurance Company.

He is the author of several valuable articles upon obstetrical and surgical subjects which have been presented before the various county and state medical societies. He is prominently identified with the American Medical Association, the International Association of Railroad Surgeons, the Connecticut Medical Society, the Hartford County Medical Society and the Hartford Medical Society. Socially he is a member of the Hartford Club, the Twentieth Century Club of Hartford and the Hartford Scientific Society. On February 8, 1881, Dr. McKnight married Miss Aletha Y. Linsley, of New Haven, Connecticut, a descendant of an old and honored New England family. They have one child, Rachel McKnight. Dr. McKnight and his family are consistent members of the Park Congregational church of Hartford, Connecticut.

LOUIS COOK OSMUN, M. D.—1891.

Dr. Louis Cook Osmun, general practitioner of Hackettstown, New Jersey, is a worthy descendant of a family whose progenitors were natives of England; for the past four generations the ancestors have resided in New Jersey. Dr. Osmun is a grandson of William and Rachel (Hazen) Osmun, and the son of Edward and Ruth (Menagh) Osmun, who removed from Hackettstown to Mendham in the year 1866.

Dr. Osmun acquired his early education in the public school of Mendham, New Jersey, and subsequently was a student in the private school in Chester, New Jersey, where he was prepared to enter the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he was graduated in 1891 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. After his graduation he took a special course of study on the eye, ear, nose and throat with the celebrated Dr. Herman Knapp of New York, and he also pursued his studies in that line for six months in St. Michael's Hospital in Newark, New Jersey. He was actively associated for some time in Roosevelt Hospital, after which he located in Hackettstown, where he commenced a general practice of medicine and surgery. He has been a close and discriminating student of the science of medicine, and his private practice has been large; for several years he has been local surgeon to the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad. He had charge of the smallpox epidemic of 1901, and his services to the general community in safeguarding the public health were of the greatest value. He first used the town hall for the reception of patients, but later built a well-appointed isolation hospital outside the town, where he had one hundred and twenty-one cases and out of all this number lost but three. He is examiner for the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Company of Newark, the New York Life Insurance Company, the Manhattan Life Insurance Company, the Bankers' Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, the Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Company, the Washington Life Insurance Company of New York, the Pennsylvania Mutual Life Insurance Company of Philadelphia, the Union Mutual Life Insurance Company of Maine, and others.

Dr. Osmun is a prominent member of the Warren County District Medical Society, the Tri-County Medical Society, the Lehigh Valley Medical Society, the New Jersey State Medical Society and the American Medical Association. He is also actively identified with the Junior Order of United American Mechanics. On August 14, 1901, Dr. Osmun was united in marriage to Miss Margaret Hann, of Wilkesbarre, Pennsylvania. He and his wife are both consistent members of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Hackettstown, New Jersey.

WILLIAM TELL KUDLICH, M. D.—1878.

Dr. William Tell Kudlich, physician and surgeon of Hoboken, New Jersey, is a descendant of a family who gained considerable fame during the Revolutionary period, and some of its members have been prominently identified with the medical fraternity. Dr. Kudlich was born in Hoboken, New Jersey, July 24, 1856, the eldest child of Dr. John and Louise Kudlich, natives of Austria, the former being the youngest member of the first chamber of deputies in the Austrian revolution of 1848. He, with many other leading men, was exiled from his country, and sought refuge in America. He located in Hoboken, New Jersey, this being the home of most of the distinguished Germans in the country at that time. He secured his degree of Doctor of Laws in Austria, but his medical education was obtained in Switzerland. He was one of the founders of the Hoboken Academy, and was considered the most eminent physician and surgeon in the city. He has been retired from the active duties of life since 1879, but is still in the enjoyment of good health; he is a close personal friend of Carl Schurz and other prominent Germans.

Dr. John Kudlich was united in marriage to Miss Louise Vogt, daughter of William Vogt, who was the author of one of the leading works on Pharmacodynamics; he was also a professor in Bern, Switzerland. His eldest son, Professor Charles Vogt, M. D., was a fellow worker with Agassiz, the great Swiss scientist and teacher. Professor Vogt was a noted physiologist, geologist, zoologist and professor of medicine in Geneva University. William Vogt married Miss Louise Follen, a sister of Charles Follen, who was exiled from his own country in 1830, and became the first professor of German literature in Harvard College. The following named children were born to Dr. John and Louise Kudlich: Miss Helen S. Kudlich, William Tell, M. D., Paul T., a well-known artist of New York; Herman C., a judge in New York city; Eleanor, who married George Berna and resides in York, Pennsylvania; Tillie, who died aged sixteen years; Miss Cora Kudlich, a student of medicine; Hans Kudlich; Edith, who married Jacques Huber, one of the largest silk manufacturers in America.

Dr. Kudlich, son of Dr. John and Louise Kudlich, received his early educational advantages in the Hoboken Academy, and prepared for his chosen life work in Zurich College, Switzerland, from which he was graduated in 1874. He then entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York, from which he was graduated in 1878 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. He spent an interneship in the Chambers Street Hospital, and later visited the cities of Vienna and Paris for the purpose of further prosecuting his studies in medicine and surgery; he has since become a specialist in surgery. After his return to his native land, Dr. Kudlich took his father's practice in Hoboken, which was a very large and lucrative one, and being well versed in all departments of medicine and surgery, he has won an enviable reputation among his patrons and the medical fraternity. He has been the attending surgeon for St. Mary's Hospital, Hoboken, for the past twenty years, and in addition to all these duties is serving his third term as health warden of Hoboken.

Dr. Kudlich is a prominent member of the Hudson County District Medical Society, the German Medical Society of New Jersey, and during its existence was a member of the New Jersey Academy of Medicine. He is also affiliated with the Masonic Order, being a member of Euclid Lodge, and with the Knights of Pythias and the Royal Arcanum. Socially he is a member of the German Club, one of the leading German clubs in the United States. He has been medical examiner for the Equitable Life Insurance Company of New York, with which company he has been connected for the past twenty years; he also acts in the same capacity for the Germania Life Insurance Company.

On March 28, 1883, Dr. Kudlich was united in marriage to Miss Marie Moehle, daughter of Adolph Moehle, then a resident of Hoboken, but now living in retirement in Berlin. Two children have been born of this union: Grace Josephine, who was graduated in 1902 from the Bradford Academy of Massachusetts, the oldest scientific school for girls in the United States; and Marjorie, a student in the Hoboken Academy.

FRANK WICKHAM MALLALIEU, A. B., M. D.—1896.

Frank Wickham Mallalieu of Jersey City, New Jersey, is a descendant of an old and respected Huguenot family, who left their home in France and settled in England in the thirteenth century. Dr. Mallalieu was born in New York city, January 11, 1869, a son of Frank A. and Sarah Frances (Wickham) Mallalieu, the former being a resident of Massachusetts, and the latter a native of New York. He received his preliminary education in the common schools of New York, and later attended Wesleyan Academy in Wilbraham, Massachusetts, where he pursued a course of study to prepare him to enter the New York University, from which institution he was graduated in 1893 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. Subsequently he entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York, from which he was graduated in 1896. After serving an interneship in St. Barnabas Hospital, Newark, New Jersey, Dr. Mallalieu removed to 62 Monticello avenue, Jersey City, where he engaged in the practice of his profession. This proved very successful from the beginning, and now he has a large and steadily increasing patronage, which he owes, not only to his professional ability, but also to the deep interest he manifests in his patients. He has also accomplished much work along the line of gynecology, and for several years has served as assistant surgeon in the gynecological department of St. Francis Hospital, Jersey City, New Jersey.

Dr. Mallalieu is a member of the Hudson County District Medical Society and the American Medical Association. He also holds membership in the Royal Arcanum, for which he acts in the capacity of medical examiner, and he fills a similar position for the John Hancock Insurance Company. His religious affiliations are with the Methodist Episcopal church. On November 21, 1900, he was united in marriage to Miss Edith Collard, of Jersey City, New Jersey.

WILLIAM SEAMAN BAINBRIDGE, M. D.—1893.

Dr. William Seaman Bainbridge, of 34 Gramercy Park, New York city, adjunct professor in the New York Post-Graduate Medical School and Hospital, was born in Providence, Rhode Island, February 17, 1870, the son of William Folwell and Lucy (Seaman) Bainbridge. Both his grandfather and father were prominent clergymen, the latter being also the author of a number of works on missions. His mother is a well known writer and author, and was the daughter of one of the first women in this country who received the degree of Doctor of Medicine.

Dr. Bainbridge received his preliminary education in the University grammar school of Providence, Rhode Island, preceded by two years abroad, devoted to travel and special work in private schools. He then entered the Mohegan Lake Military Academy, and after his graduation matriculated at Columbia. Owing to a severe attack of typhoid fever, his studies were interrupted for some length of time, and consequently his course of study extended over a period of four years. The extra year represented the practical courses, and during this time he performed a large amount of substituting in the Presbyterian, Chambers Street, Broome Street and New York Hospitals. A competitive examination secured him first place among his classmates for the position of interne at the Presbyterian Hospital, which was awarded to him, and in which he served two years, graduating in July, 1895. In December of the same year he graduated from the Sloane Maternity Hospital, after which he pursued a post-graduate course of five months' duration in bacteriology at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, which was completed in April, 1896.

The following two years were spent abroad, part of the time in study, and the remainder in traveling with patients. In 1899 Dr. Bainbridge received the degree of Master of Arts from Shurtleff College, and in 1902 the Washington and Jefferson College conferred upon him the degree of Master of Science. In the spring of 1899 Dr. Bainbridge was called professionally to Rome, Italy, where he devoted his attention to personal cases, and assumed charge for a short space of time of the practice and duties of the physician to the British embassy. Since his return to his native country he has been engaged in a general practice of medicine and surgery, spending the months of July and August at Chautauqua, New York, where he attends to a private practice and delivers public lectures. For three years he was a quiz master at the College of Physicians and Surgeons. For three terms he has served as president of the medical board of the New York Children's Hospital and Schools, which position he still holds, as well as that of attending surgeon to the same institution. He was made adjunct professor of the New York Post-Graduate Medical School and Hospital in 1902, after serving as instructor for three years.

Dr. Bainbridge is the author of numerous valuable articles, the more prominent ones being: "Silver and Silver Salts in Surgery with Special Relation to Wound Treatment" New York Medical Record, December, 1898; "Our Unseen Foes" (abstracts of lectures delivered at Chautauqua, New York, in 1898); A—The Development of Bacteriology; B—The Practical Application of Bacteriology: H. H. Otis & Sons, Buffalo, New York; "A Case of Multiple Fracture of the Inferior Maxilla Complicated by Dislocation," Buffalo Medical Journal, October, 1900. "Analgesia in Children by Special Injection, with a Report of a New Method of Sterilization of the Injection Fluid," New York Medical Record, December, 1900; "A Report of Twenty-four Operations Performed During Special Analgesia," New York Medical News, May, 1901; "A Report of Two Cases of Cancrum Oris," Archives of Pediatrics, June, 1901; "Report of Twelve Operations on Infants and Young Children During Spinal Analgesia," Archives of Pediatrics, July, 1901; "Periduodenal Abscess Secondary to Ulcer of the Duodenum," Medical News, March, 1903.

Dr. Bainbridge is a member of the New York Academy of Medicine, New York County Medical Society, New York County Medical Association, Greater New York Medical Association, Harlem Medical Association, New York State Medical Association, Chautauqua County Medical Society, Society of the Alumni of the Presbyterian Hospital, Society of Alumni of Sloane Maternity Hospital, delegate to the New York State Medical Society; also a member of the Quill Club, Students' Club and Delta Upsilon fraternity. In 1888 he was senior captain of the Mohegan Lake Military Academy, and from 1891 to 1893 served as president of the Intercollegiate of New York city (the Young Men's Christian Association of the Colleges of New York). In his political affiliations Dr. Bainbridge is an independent Republican.

ANDREW FRANCIS McBRIDE, M. D.—1889.

Dr. Andrew Francis McBride, general practitioner of Paterson, New Jersey, was born in that city, January 4, 1869, a son of Hugh and Margaret (McGee) McBride. Hugh McBride was a native of Ireland, and came to this country with his parents when four years of age. He received his education in the public schools here, and when he reached young manhood learned the trade of blacksmith, at which occupation he worked for the balance of his life. His wife was a native of Paterson, New Jersey. They had two sons, Andrew Francis and Lawrence, the latter being now the Rev. Lawrence McBride, formerly of the diocese of Erie, Pennsylvania, but now in Rome taking a special course in theology.

Dr. Andrew Francis McBride acquired his education in the parochial and public schools, and this was supplemented later by a course of study in the private school of Professor McManus of Paterson. He then attended the College of Physicians and Surgeons, from which he was graduated in 1889 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. He acted as interne for one year in St. Joseph's Hospital of Paterson. Immediately after his internship, Dr. McBride commenced the practice of his profession in Paterson, and through great zeal, marked ability, close application and thorough knowledge, he attained a prominent position in the medical fraternity. Dr. McBride has written a few very excellent scientific papers, which he has read before the various professional societies. He has been the visiting physician to St. Joseph's Hospital since 1899, is the physician to the county jail, and county physician of Passaic county, New Jersey. He has been president of the Paterson board of health since 1899, and has been a member since 1893. In addition to these various duties, Dr. McBride is an earnest student of gynecology, showing marked ability in that branch of his profession.

He is a permanent delegate to the New Jersey State Medical Society and is a popular member of the Passaic County District Medical Society. He is a member of the Knights of Columbus, the Elks and the Hamilton Club. In his religion he is a member of St. John's Roman Catholic church of Paterson, New Jersey. Dr. McBride takes an active interest in all matters that pertain to the general welfare of the city, and is always ready and willing to render any assistance in his power to the advancement of the social, political and religious life of his community.

CHARLES JOSEPH KANE, A. M., M. D.—1899.

Dr. Charles Joseph Kane, general practitioner of Paterson, New Jersey, was born in that city, December 13, 1873, a son of Dr. Thomas J. and Martha (O'Neill) Kane, the former being a native of Pennsylvania, and a graduate of the University of Dublin and of the Long Island College Hospital; he has been practicing his profession in Paterson since 1870, where he is well and favorably known as a skillful physician. His wife is a native of New Jersey.

Dr. Kane acquired his preparatory education in Professor McManus' private school in Paterson; later he was an attendant at St. John's College, Fordham, New York, from which he was graduated in 1895 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. While a student in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Dr. Kane performed special work in Columbia College, and received from the latter institution the degree of Master of Arts in 1899. During his medical course he spent his vacations in special work in Roosevelt Hospital, and he still devotes much of his time to attending the special work in gynecology and obstetrics that is being done in the leading hospitals in New York. He passed an internship of one year and a half in the General Memorial Hospital of New York, three months he was actively connected with the Sloane Maternity Hospital and is now attending surgeon to the out-patient department of St. Joseph's Hospital of Paterson. He began practice in Paterson, where he has a general practice, but most of his time and attention is given to gynecology and obstetrical work. He has gained a creditable position and won gratifying success, for he is well equipped for the practice of his chosen life work. He has written a few scientific papers which have been read before the medical societies. Dr. Kane is a member of the American Medical Association the New Jersey State Medical Society, the Passaic County District Medical Society and the Sloane Maternity Hospital Alumni Association.

HENRY BRUCE McCARROLL, A. B., M. D.—1881.

Dr. Henry Bruce McCarroll of Morristown, New Jersey, general practitioner, was born in Morristown, October 7, 1856, a descendant of an old and respected Scotch family. The Rev. Thomas McCarroll, the paternal grandfather of Dr. Henry Bruce McCarroll, was the son of a Scotchman who came to this country and settled in Pennsylvania; he was a clergyman of the Methodist Episcopal church. Henry James, the maternal grandfather of Dr. McCarroll, was the son of a southern planter, who located in Morristown in the early part of this century. Thomas McCarroll, father of Dr. McCarroll, was a native of Pennsylvania, and was united in marriage to Miss Laura James, a native of New Jersey.

Dr. McCarroll acquired his preparatory education in the public schools of Morristown and the Morristown Select Classical School and was graduated from Yale College in 1878 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. He subsequently entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, being under the competent preceptorship of the late Dr. H. B. Sands, whom he frequently aided in the preparation of his lectures, and was graduated from that institution in 1881 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. He served an internship of two years in the Presbyterian Hospital of New York, winning the position by a competitive examination. He was then actively connected with the New York Post-Graduate School, two years as clinical assistant and two years as instructor in general medicine. He then opened an office in New York city, where he engaged in the general practice of medicine and surgery; he remained there until 1898, when he removed to Morristown, New Jersey, where he has gained a large and successful patronage. Dr. McCarroll is the visiting physician to All Souls' Hospital, also to the Morristown Memorial Hospital. When the office of police surgeon of Morristown was created, Dr. McCarroll was chosen to fill the position, and he has continued to do so up to the present time.

Aside from all these duties Dr. McCarroll is the author of many articles on medical subjects which were presented before medical societies and also published. Dr. McCarroll is affiliated with the Morris County District Medical Society, the New Jersey State Medical Society, the Morristown Medical Club, the Tri-County Medical Society, the Alumni Association of the Presbyterian Hospital of New York, the Alumni Association of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, the Morristown Club and the Morristown Field Club. On April 25, 1900, he was united in marriage to Edwina S. Creighton, daughter of Rear Admiral Creighton of the United States navy.

CHARLES NOAH DIXON JONES, B. S., M. D.—1883.

Dr. Charles N. D. Jones, 249 East Eighty-sixth street, New York city, was born in Elkton, Maryland, April 26, 1857, the son of John Quincy Adams, a prominent attorney at law, and Mary Annanda (Dixon) Jones, an eminent scientific writer and a member of the Royal Microscopical Society of London, England, having the title of Fellow of the Royal Microscopical Society conferred upon her. On the paternal side he is a descendant of the family of De Shields, French Huguenots, who settled in England. His great-great-grandfather was the Rev. John Jones, an Episcopal clergyman, and one of the early settlers of the state of Maryland; he erected a church at his own expense and presented it to his parish. Hon. I. D. Jones, a cousin of his father, was attorney general of the state of Maryland, and for two terms served as a member of the United States congress. On the maternal side he is descended from an English ancestry. His great-great-grandfather, the Rev. James Dixon, was a descendant from a high ancestry in England. He was a Methodist minister, a natural mathematician, a great genius, judge, counselor and friend to all his neighbors. He built a church and presented it to his parishioners. His wife was Polly Harrison, a cousin of General William Henry Harrison. His great-grandfather, Noah Dixon, was a great and good man, a public benefactor and a liberal supporter of his church. Three times he refused the nomination for governor of the state of Maryland. His grandmother, Sallie Turner, was a descendant of some of the first settlers and governors of the state of Delaware; three of her cousins were governors of their respective states.

Dr. Jones acquired his education in the public schools of New York city and Philadelphia, the Centenary Collegiate Institution of Hackettstown, New Jersey, and the Wesleyan University of Middletown, Connecticut, from which institution he was graduated in 1880, with the degree of Bachelor of Science. He then matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which he received his medical degree in 1883. In addition to his studies in that institution he also pursued a medical course and obtained a diploma from the Long Island College Hospital, Brooklyn, New York. Shortly after his graduation he received the appointment of interne at the Brooklyn City Hospital, in which position he remained one year. In 1884 he established an office in Brooklyn, where he engaged in general practice until 1890, when he removed to New York city, where he has since continued to practice. While a resident of Brooklyn he acted in the capacity of surgeon to the Woman's Hospital from 1884 to 1889, and filled a similar position in the Southern Hospital and Dispensary from 1886 to 1888. From 1887 to 1889 he served as lecturer at the New York Polyclinic, as surgeon of the outdoor department of the Presbyterian Hospital from 1891 to 1898, as assistant gynecologist at the New York Post-Graduate Hospital during the year 1891, and since March 16, 1897, has been the incumbent of the office of medical school inspector, and medical inspector of the board of health of New York city.

Dr. Jones is a member of the Kings County Medical Society, New York

Charles Noah Dixon Jones

County Medical Society, New York Academy of Medicine, American Medical Association, British Gynecological Society, and during his practice in Brooklyn was a member of the Pathological Society of Brooklyn. He is also connected with the Alpha Delta Phi fraternity, Theta Nu Epsilon fraternity, Skull and Serpent fraternity, and the Masonic fraternity since 1885. He was formerly affiliated with Acanthus Lodge, but at the present time (1903) is a member of the Atlantic Lodge.

CHAUNCEY BOYD GRIFFITHS, A. B., M. D.—1896.

Dr. Chauncey Boyd Griffiths is a descendant on the paternal side of an early Welsh ancestry, and on the maternal side from an old and honored English family. He was born in Newark, New Jersey, October 16, 1869, a son of Edwin Madeira and Emma C. (DeWolf) Griffiths, the former being a native of Ohio, and the latter of the state of Connecticut.

Dr. Griffiths acquired his preliminary education in the public and high schools of Newark, and this was supplemented by a course in Columbia College, from which he graduated in 1893 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts; he continued his studies in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, and graduated from that institution in 1896 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. In October, 1896, he opened an office in Newark, New Jersey, and has since built up an extensive practice. Although he is one of the younger representatives of the profession in the city, he has a reputation for skill that many an older practitioner might well envy. Since 1897 he has acted as assistant surgeon to the Women's and Children's Hospital, and also to the throat and nose department of St. Michael's Hospital; he has also served as district physician of Newark since 1901.

Dr. Griffiths is a prominent member of the Essex County District Medical Society, the Practitioners' Club of Newark, the New Jersey State Medical Society, the American Medical Association, is president of the Newark Medical Society, and he is a member and medical examiner for the Junior Order of United American Mechanics and the Ancient Order of United American Mechanics. Dr. Griffiths was united in marriage, January 22, 1902, to Miss Grace N. Howarth, daughter of Robert Howarth of Newark. Both Dr. Griffiths and his wife are earnest members of the Central Methodist Episcopal church of Newark, New Jersey.

WILLIAM HENRY HARLIN, A. B., M. D.—1862.

Dr. William Henry Harlin was for many years an active practitioner in Brooklyn, but is now living in retirement in Oceanport, New Jersey. He was born in Edenderry, Kings county, Ireland, November 25, 1840, son of James and Anna (Smythe) Harlin, who came to America in 1840 and located in Brooklyn, where James Harlin conducted a watch-making business for a number of years.

William Henry Harlin attended public school No. 13 in Brooklyn and St. Francis Xavier College, New York, leaving there in 1859. He then matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, and pursued his medical studies under the direction of Professor Willard Parker and Dr. George Cochran; in 1862 he received the degree of Doctor of Medicine. Even before graduation he was connected with the Brooklyn City Hospital, where he continued for a year after receiving his diploma. He then took the examination of the naval board at the Navy Hospital, and on April 11, 1863, was commissioned in United States service and ordered aboard the receiving ship Vermont of the South Atlantic squadron. Three months later he was transferred by Admiral Dupont to the ironclad Montauk, where he remained eighteen months, and then owing to ill health resigned with the rank of assistant surgeon and returned to the north. Soon afterward he joined a regiment in Brooklyn as assistant surgeon, and in July, 1864, went into camp with it on Staten Island. It was expected that this regiment would go to City Point, but was instead ordered to Elmira, New York, to guard the rebel prison, General Benjamin F. Tracy being in command. When the latter heard that Dr. Harlin was in the service he detailed him to duty in the rebel prison, his duty being to accompany exchanged sick rebel prisoners en route to the south. He continued in this service until November, 1864, when, being ordered home to vote, he resumed private practice in Brooklyn. He soon acquired a large patronage and for many years was located at the corner of Sumner avenue and Quincy street. His work partook of a general medical and surgical nature, but his extensive navy and army experience naturally gave him an unusual aptitude for the latter. Having contracted blood-poisoning in an operation and being advised to live in the country, he retired to his country home in Yaphank, Long Island, where he resided from 1890 to 1895. Having partially recovered he opened an office in Sterling Place, Brooklyn, in 1902, but later was obliged to entirely abandon professional work. He then took up his residence in Oceanport, but he still does some consultation work in Brooklyn, where he lives part of the year and where he maintains his citizenship.

For the past twelve years Dr. Harlin has been examining surgeon to the Jamaica pension board, of which he is president. He was also for a time a member and president of the Brooklyn board of pension examiners. He entered the Grand Army of the Republic in James H. Perry Post No. 39, and now holds membership in George C. Strong Post No. 534, and was for several years surgeon to each. In 1888 he was medical director of the Grand Army of the Republic department of New York. In 1868-72 Dr. Harlin was sanitary inspector to the Brooklyn board of health, passing through a severe smallpox epidemic during his term of service. During his residence in Brooklyn he was an active member of the Medical Society of the County of Kings.

CHARLES LUTELLUS LINDLEY, M. D.—1879.

Dr. Charles Lutellus Lindley was born in Durban, Natal, South Africa, and is the son of the Rev. Daniel and Lucy (Allen) Lindley. The former, a clergyman of the Presbyterian church, was a native of the United States, and the son of the president of a college in Ohio. Dr. Lindley received his early education in a German school in Hermannsburg, South Africa, and later pursued his studies in Vienna. He then came to the United States and entered the Columbia School of Mines, and had almost completed his course when, on account of some boyish prank, he was expelled. In 1879 he graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. The Zulu war being then in progress, he entered the English army as surgeon, in which capacity he served until the close of the war, when he settled in Kimberly, South Africa, and remained there in private practice for three years. He then came to New York for the purpose of associating himself in practice with Professor Willard Parker, but on account of frequent attacks of grip and pneumonia removed to Lakewood in 1892. In 1895, an opportunity presenting itself of being of service to Dr. Jameson, his old friend and associate in the hospital in Kimberly, he went to Johannesburg, where he remained until the opening of the Boer war, when he entered the service as surgeon, but after a few months was attacked by appendicitis, and came to New York for the purpose of undergoing an operation. When convalescent, he returned to Lakewood, where he has since been engaged in practice.

Dr. Lindley is a member of the University and Century clubs of New York. He is fond of horseback riding and all kinds of outdoor sports, and is popularly known in Lakewood as the "hunting doctor." He owned the first pack of hounds in the place, and when the Lakewood Country Club was organized he was made the first master of the hounds. Dr. Lindley married, in 1886, Miss Marian DuBois Floyd, of Mastic, Long Island, a descendant of William Floyd, a signer of the declaration of independence. Mrs. Lindley died in 1888, leaving one child, Ella Marian. In 1897 Dr. Lindley married Miss Laura Marshall of Boston.

AUGUSTUS MILTON CLARK, M. D.—1858.

Dr. Augustus Milton Clark, of 812 Highland avenue, Newark, New Jersey, was born May 14, 1836, in New York city, and is the son of Thomas Milton and Cornelia Augusta (Bayles) Clark, both natives of New York city, and both now deceased. His maternal great-grandfather, Bernardus Swartwout, and his maternal great-uncle, Steuben Swartwout, were both officers of the New York troops, the former in the Revolutionary war, and the latter in the war of 1812.

Dr. Clark received his education in the private schools of his native city, and entering the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, was graduated in 1858 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. In March of that year he opened practice in Brooklyn, New York, but spent the greater part of that and the following year in walking the hospitals of London, England, with which, however, he was never professionally connected. In 1860 he established himself at White Plains, New York, and in 1873 at Belleville, Essex county, New Jersey, whence he removed, in 1895, to Newark, New Jersey, where he has since remained, devoting himself to the work of a general practitioner of the regular school.

In July, 1862, Dr. Clark was appointed assistant surgeon of United States Volunteers, and on December 4, 1863, was promoted to the rank of surgeon. He was present, as assistant surgeon of the Fourth United States Infantry, at the battles of Antietam, Fredericksburg and Chancellorsville. As surgeon in chief, First Division, Fifth Army Corps, he participated in the battle of Gettysburg, where he was slightly wounded. As acting surgeon in chief, Third Division, Eighteenth Army Corps, he took part in the battle of Cold Harbor, and in the second and third assaults upon Petersburg. As acting medical director of the Tenth Army Corps, he served at Strawberry Plains, Fussell's Mill, and the siege of Petersburg. As chief medical officer of the cavalry division of the army of the James, he was in the battles of New Market, Chapin's Farm, Kell House, Darbytown Road, White Oak, Five Forks, Deep Creek, Amelia Court House and Appomattox Court House, the scene of the surrender of General Lee. In this battle he was again slightly wounded. On June 1, 1865, he was brevetted lieutenant colonel for meritorious service during the war, and after being employed on some further duties, resigned July 6, 1865.

Dr. Clark is a member of the Military Service Institution of the United States, the Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States, in which he is a member of the flag committee; the Society of the Army of the Potomac, the Society of the Fifth Army Corps, in which he holds the offices of secretary and treasurer; the Cavalry Association of the Armies of the United States and the Grand Army of the Republic, George Washington Post No. 103, Department of New York. Dr. Clark finds the chief recreation of his leisure hours in the reading of works on subjects relating to his profession, and on historical topics. He is a member of the Presbyterian church. In January, 1860, he married Margaretta Sands Bonnel, of Brooklyn, New York. Their children are: Herbert Stanwood, Grace, Harry, Caroline Esther and William Tompkins, deceased.

WILLIAM AUSTIN TOMES, M. D.—1891.

Dr. William Austin Tomes, of Brooklyn, New York, is a native of that city, born February 14, 1865, a son of Dr. Robert and Catharine (Fasnet) Tomes. His father received his medical degree from Edinburg University, Edinburg, Scotland, and entered upon the practice of his profession, but soon engaged in literary work. He was an associate of William Cullen Bryant, in the editorship of the Evening Post, and with Miss Booth, for some time edited Harper's Bazaar. In 1870 he went to Europe in order to give his children the educational advantages of the gymnasia of Heidelberg and Wiesbaden. He returned to New York in 1881 and died in 1883, leaving a widow and three children: Miss Catharine Maud Tomes is the eldest child of Robert and Catharine (Fasnet) Tomes; Arthur Lloyd Tomes was graduated in Yale College in 1885 and is practicing law in Brooklyn; William Austin Tomes is the immediate subject of this sketch. Francis Tomes, Dr. Tomes' grandfather in the paternal line, was an extensive importer in Maiden Lane, New York. He had eight children: Charles, Francis, Robert, George, Benjamin, Mary Elizabeth, who married Edward Burkhardt, and has lived in Paris, France, for about twenty years; Maria, who died unmarried; and Margaret, who married John H. Iselin, brother of Adrian Iselin, of New York.

Gen Austin Gomo.

Dr. Tomes spent three years at Yale College, and was graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York in 1891. After two years' internship in the German Hospital of New York, and three months in the Sloane Maternity Hospital of New York, he took up the work of his profession in Brooklyn and established a general practice. He was for three years surgeon at the Tillary Street Dispensary, Brooklyn, and since 1895 has been assistant surgeon to the Lutheran Hospital at East New York. He is a member of the Medical Society of the County of Kings, the Long Island Medical Society, the Brooklyn Medical Society, the Associate Physicians of Long Island, and the New York State Medical Society, of the Alumni of the New York German Hospital and the Society of the Alumni of the Sloane Maternity Hospital. He is also a member of the Lincoln and Marine Field clubs.

Dr. Tomes married Miss Julia Leavitt Hall, a daughter of John Leavitt Hall, of Brooklyn, June 9, 1887, and has three children: Valerie Gouvenour, William Austin, Jr., and Yvonne. Dr. and Mrs. Tomes are communicants of St. Luke's Episcopal church. While not a politician and having no desire to take any official part in public affairs, he takes a patriotic interest in all public questions, is a friend of public education and a lover of good literature. He gives special attention to the literature of his profession and has written a number of able papers, which have been well received by various bodies and some of which have appeared in leading medical and surgical journals.

JOHN WALTERS, M. D.—1890.

Dr. John Walters, son of William and Diana (Powell) Walters, natives of Wales, was born in Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, December 27, 1864. When he was quite young his parents removed to Wharton, New Jersey, where his father was engaged as superintendent of an iron mine, which position he held until his death, which occurred when John was only eight years of age. This left the responsibility of the family upon the mother, who opened a general store and was greatly aided in this enterprise by the efforts of John, who remained with her until he attained the age of twenty years. The family consisted of the following named children: William E., proprietor of the Riverside Livery Stable of New York; John; James, a merchant in Wharton, New Jersey; Daniel, a medical practitioner of Wharton, New Jersey; and Joseph, who died at the age of two years.

Dr. Walters was a student in the public schools of Wharton, after which he prepared for college in a select school in Dover, New Jersey. Subsequently he pursued the study of medicine under the efficient preceptorship of Dr. J. G. Ryerson, of Boonton, and Dr. D. S. Ayers, of Rockaway, and in October, 1886, matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which institution he was graduated in June, 1890. For a short time he pursued a special course of study under Dr. Condit W. Cutter in the Center Street Hospital, New York, after which he entered upon the active practice of his profession at Wharton, New Jersey, where he quickly built up a large and lucrative practice, and has enjoyed the same up to the present time (1903). He is a member of the Morris County District Medical Society, of which he is ex-president; the New Jersey State Medical Society, and the Tri-County Medical Society. He has also written a number of scientific papers which have been presented before these bodies and duly appreciated.

On April 15, 1897, Dr. Walters married Miss Clara Belle Richards, an adopted daughter of Captain Joseph Richards, deceased, who was a native of England, where his birth took place in 1834. Captain Richards came to this country when twenty years old and settled in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, remaining there for a short time. He then removed to Georgia, later to Tennessee and finally settled in Port Oram, New Jersey, where he was superintendent of the Mount Pleasant Mining Company; this position he retained until nine months prior to his death, which occurred April 24, 1896. One child has been born to Dr. and Mrs. Walters, Joseph R. Walters.

RUSSELL ABER SHIRREFS, M. D.—1899.

Dr. Russell Aber Shirrefs, of Elizabeth, New Jersey, physician and surgeon, was born in Bridgeton, Cumberland county, New Jersey, January 9, 1874, the only son of Robert A. and M. Evaline (Aber) Shirrefs. Robert A. Shirrefs was born in Fleetwood, Lancashire, England, his parents emigrating to Canada when he was but seven years old, and thence removing to the United States in 1867. After some years of residence in south Jersey, the family removed to Elizabeth, where they now reside. Mr. Shirrefs has been in the service of the Pennsylvania Railroad since 1874, from 1886 in the responsible position of superintendent of the grain elevators of that company in Jersey City, New Jersey.

Dr. Shirrefs received his preliminary education in the grammar and high schools of Elizabeth, afterwards graduating in the commercial course of Packard's College in New York city. He then entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons (Columbia University) in New York, from which he was graduated in 1899. While a senior he won the second Harsen prize, which was a medal, a special diploma and an honorarium of seventy-five dollars, for his reports of clinical instruction. On graduation he opened his office in Elizabeth, and began the general practice of medicine and surgery. In the comparatively short time which has elapsed, Dr. Shirrefs has had gratifying success, not only by reason of creditable adaptation and equipment for his chosen profession, but as well because of diligence and zeal in its practice.

On November 4, 1902, he was elected a coroner of Union county, New Jersey, running on the Republican ticket, and defeating his four opponents by an overwhelming majority. In addition to his office practice, he has been actively identified with the dispensary staff of the Elizabeth General Hospital.

He is also medical examiner for the Prudential Life Insurance Company, the Hartford Life Insurance Company, the Colonial Life Insurance Company, the Knights Templar and Masonic Mutual Aid Association, the Sun Life Insurance Company, the Independent Order of Foresters, the American Temperance Life Insurance Association, the Ancient Order of United Workmen and other beneficial or fraternal societies.

Dr. Shirrefs is a member of the Union County District Medical Society, the New Jersey State Medical Society, and the Clinical Society of the Elizabeth General Hospital and Dispensary, of which he is the secretary. He is a member of Washington Lodge No. 33, F. & A. M., the Independent Order of Foresters, and the Ancient Order of United Workmen. He is a charter member of the McKinley Club of Elizabeth, and is a member of the Madison Avenue Presbyterian church.

HENRY MELVILLE SMITH, M. D.—1871.

Dr. Henry Melville Smith, who died in South Orange, New Jersey, November 28, 1902, was known as a successful practitioner of general medicine and surgery, and for his industrious and useful service in connection with Christ Hospital, Jersey City. He was born February 3, 1847, in Meredith, New York. His parents were Elijah C. and Abigail (Haddock) Smith. The family has contributed various of its members to the professions: a brother of Dr. Smith, George C. Smith, is a practicing physician in Delhi, New York, and an elder half-brother has been for many years a practitioner in Hartwick, New York; while a deceased brother, Clark Smith, was an attorney at Middlebury, New York.

Henry Melville Smith received his literary education in the common schools of his native village. He studied for his profession in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, and was graduated in 1871. He at once entered the Colored Home Hospital of New York city, in which he served the usual internship, on completion of which he practiced for two years in Norwich, New York, and for four years in Bloomville, New York. In 1878 he located in Jersey City, and in the following year became assistant visiting physician and surgeon to Christ Hospital. Later he became visiting physician and surgeon in the same institution, and served in that capacity until the completion of the new hospital building, when he was appointed attending surgeon. From 1889 to 1902 he served as consulting surgeon. His personal practice extended to all departments of medicine, but his hospital connection naturally devolved much surgical work upon him, and this came to claim a large share of his attention.

After a residence of twenty years in Jersey City he removed in 1898 to South Orange, with the intention of retiring from practice, but so many were the appeals made to him for his professional services that he determined to open an office and care for such patrons as he might without too great a tax upon his physical powers. His life was, however, so busy, that his nature would not consent to withdrawal from the concerns of the day. To the time of his death he maintained a zealous interest in the Hudson County District Medical Society and the Essex County District Medical Society. With his family, he was a member of the Fifth Baptist church of Newark, and for many years was exceedingly active in the work of that body and in that of the society of Christian Endeavor. After taking up his residence in South Orange he took a deep interest in the Young Men's Christian Association, which was organized in that city through the instrumentality of his eldest son. He was an active Odd Fellow, and became a member of the order while residing in Norwich, New York, and was past noble grand of South Orange Lodge. He was also a member of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics.

Dr. Smith was married July 30, 1873, to Miss Mary Rich, of Stamford, New York, and of this marriage were born five children: Stephen R., who is engaged with the Third National Bank of Jersey City and resides in South Orange; Irving W., who is engaged in the photograph business in New York city; Marion, who died at the age of seventeen months; Bertha Frances, who died aged eight years, and J. Melville, who is attending school.

JAMES HENRY SANDERSON, M. D.—1890.

Dr. James Henry Sanderson, Worcester, Massachusetts, was born in 1867, in that city, and is the son of William Warren and Jane (Macdougall) Sanderson, both natives of Scotland, who came to the United States about 1864 and settled in Worcester. The father of Dr. Sanderson died in 1868, and his mother is still living.

Dr. Sanderson was educated in the public schools of his native city, and in the Worcester high school. In 1890 he received from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University the degree of Doctor of Medicine. Since the year of his graduation he has been engaged in general practice in Worcester. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, affiliating with Morning Star Lodge, F. & A. M. Politically he is in sympathy with the principles and theories advocated and upheld by the Democratic party.

RICHARD KUEHNE, M. D.—1888.

Dr. Richard Kuehne, of Jersey City, New Jersey, a general practitioner of acknowledged ability and standing, is a native of Germany, but came to the United States in such early childhood that his rearing and education were essentially American. He was born July 18, 1851, son of William and Johanna (Mathes) Kuehne, who came to New York city when he was an infant but one year old. He acquired a thorough English education, beginning in the public schools of New York city and Hoboken, New Jersey, and further prosecuting his studies in the Hudson City high school and the Hoboken Academy; he was graduated from Hoboken Academy shortly after attaining the years of manhood. He then found employment in a drug store and meantime entered upon a course of study in the New York College of Pharmacy, from which he was graduated in 1874 at the head of a large class. For eight years he served as a prescription and general clerk in Hoboken, New Jersey, and for three years in San Francisco. In 1879 he opened a drug store of his own in Jersey City, which he conducted until 1888. During this period he had taken up the study of medicine and became a student in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York city, from which he received his diploma in 1888. He also took a course in the Sloane Maternity Hospital in New York. He then disposed of his drug business and entered upon general practice in Jersey City. His success has been entirely commensurate with his diligence in preparation and his conscientious devotion to his chosen profession, and he enjoys a large patronage among the best and most appreciative classes in the community.

He is a member of the Hudson County District Medical Society, the North Hudson Medical Society, the Society for the Relief of Widows and Orphans of Medical Men of New Jersey, and medical examiner for the Royal Arcanum, in which he holds membership. Dr. Kuehne was married June 11, 1879, to Miss Lena Ulrich, of New York city, and to them have been born three children, Richard, Walter and Herbert Kuehne.

WALTER DODGE, PH. B., M. D.—1893.

Dr. Walter Dodge, of Orange, New Jersey, a general practitioner and prominently connected with the Orange Memorial Hospital, comes from an old English family. His earliest American ancestor came in the early part of the seventeenth century and settled on Block Island, New York. Through all its generations from that time the family has been worthily represented in the learned professions. Dr. Dodge's grandfather, Dr. Joseph Smith Dodge, was one of the first dentists in New York, and his maternal great-grandfather and grandfather were Baptist ministers located near New London, Connecticut.

Joseph Smith Dodge, the father of Dr. Walter Dodge, is a native of New York, and a man of eminent learning, and has lived a most useful life. He is a graduate of Columbia College, from which he received the degree of Master of Arts; and of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York, and the New York College of Dentistry, from both of which he received full degrees. Tufts College conferred upon him the degree of Doctor of Divinity, this being awarded him in recognition of his position as one of the most prominent of Universalist clergymen, and of his services in the building of the church of his sect in Stamford, Connecticut. He is now engaged in the practice of dentistry in New York city. His brother, Henry Neamiah Dodge, a practicing dentist in Morristown, New Jersey, is also a graduate of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, and of the New York College of Dentistry. The Rev. Joseph Smith Dodge married Miss Mary Richards Hall.

Walter Dodge, son of the parents last named, was born March 11, 1868, at Stamford, Connecticut, where he prepared for college in Kings School. He was graduated from the Sheffield School of Science, Yale College, with the degree of Bachelor of Philosophy, in 1890. He studied medicine in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York city, from which he was graduated in 1893. He served for one year as an interne in the Orange Memorial Hospital, at Orange, New Jersey, and then engaged in general practice in the same city. He has achieved a large degree of success and has won generous commendation for his ability and usefulness as a member of the dispensary staff of the Orange Memorial Hospital and as assistant pathologist to the hospital proper. He is also bacteriologist and smallpox diagnostician to the board of health.

He is a member of various medical bodies, the Essex County District Medical Society, the Orange Practitioners' Society, the William Pierson Medical Library Association and the New Jersey State Medical Society. Dr. Dodge retains his membership in the Universalist church of Stamford, Connecticut, in which he was reared and with whose history that of his family is so closely interwoven. He is also member of Court Frank No. 17, Independent Order of Foresters, of Orange. He was married, October 19, 1897, to Miss Sarah Anna Clark, daughter of John A. Clark, of Newburgh, New York, and to them has been born a son, Joseph Clark Dodge.

MEFFORD RUNYON, M. D.—1887.

Dr. Mefford Runyon, of South Orange, New Jersey, one of the best known members of the medical fraternity in the state, was born November 23, 1861, in Uniontown, New Jersey. His parents were Jephtha and Martha (Vail) Runyon, also natives of New Jersey. The Runyon family is of French origin; the first American immigrant of the name was Victor Rognion, a Huguenot sea captain, who came about 1669, and settled in New Jersey, and from him are descended nearly all the Runyons in the United States. Conspicuous among these was General Theodore Runyon, a native of New Jersey, who bore a conspicuous part during the Civil war, and was afterward chancellor of the state.

Dr. Runyon acquired his literary education in the Plainfield, New Jersey, public schools, in Rutgers Preparatory School and in Rutgers College. For four years he was engaged in business pursuits in the employ of Brokaw Brothers, of New York city. He then entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which he was graduated in 1887, with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. Soon afterwards he located in South Orange, New Jersey, and engaged in a general practice of medicine and surgery. He was associate house physician in the Orange Memorial Hospital for eighteen months: house physician for two years, a member of the dispensary staff for several years, and in 1901 was appointed visiting physician to that institution. This extended hospital experience directed his attention particularly to surgery, and while doing medical work, he has one of the largest surgical practices in the state of New Jersey.

In 1898 he admitted to partnership in his practice, Dr. G. H. Cobb, and about the same time established a private hospital to enable him to afford greater advantages to his numerous surgical patients. In equipping this institution he spared neither effort nor expense, and succeeded in bringing it up to the full measure of his desires. The hospital has proved a success and a great benefit to the people of South Orange. In addition to the hospital he maintains, adjacent to his residence, a cottage containing a well appointed suite of reception and office rooms.

Dr. Runyon has served for several years as president of the South Orange board of health. He is a member of the Orange Mountain Medical Society, the Essex County District Medical Society, the William Pierson Medical Library Association, the New Jersey State Medical Society, and the New York Academy of Medicine. Dr. Runyon was married October 11, 1888, to Miss Mary H. Bush, of Rahway, New Jersey, and a son, Paul Melford, has been born of this union. Dr. Runyon is a member of the North Orange Baptist church. He is also a member of Century Lodge No. 100, F. & A. M., and of the Delta Kappa Epsilon College Fraternity. His favorite recreation is sailing, and he passes the greater portion of his much needed vacations in cruising in his yacht in the vicinity of his summer home in Edgerton, Massachusetts.

GEORGE HENRY COBB, A. M., M. D.—1888.

George Henry Cobb, A. M., M. D., physician and surgeon, of South Orange, New Jersey, was born in North Andover, Massachusetts, January 20, 1863, a son of the Rev. Levi Henry and Harriet (Herrick) Cobb. He is a descendant on the paternal side of an old English family. The founder of the American branch, after emigrating to this country, joined the Plymouth colony in 1677. The ancestors on the maternal side were among the early settlers of Litchfield, Connecticut. Through his maternal grandmother, Dr. Cobb is connected with the Tyler family. The Rev. Levi Henry Cobb, father of Dr. George H. Cobb, is a native of New Hampshire, where he was a prominent clergyman of the Congregational denomination. For the past twenty years he has been actively connected with the missionary work of that church, having an office in New York city. His wife is a native of Connecticut.

Dr. Cobb prepared for college in the public schools of Minneapolis, Minnesota. He then attended Amherst College, from which he was graduated in 1885 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts, and three years later the same institution conferred upon him the degree of Master of Arts. Subsequently he entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York, under the able preceptorship of Dr. William T. Bull, and was graduated from that institution in 1888. Dr. Cobb then served as an interne in the New York Hospital from June, 1888, to January, 1890. With several of his medical associates he pursued a special course of study of internal medicine in Vienna for one year and a half, and upon his return to this country established himself in New York, where he engaged in a general practice of medicine and surgery. At the same time he assumed charge of the medical department of the New York Hospital Dispensary, which he continued to manage until 1898, when he removed to South Orange.

In addition to his professional duties, Dr. Cobb is the author of several works, among them, "A Study of Exophthalmic Goiter," which attracted much attention from the medical fraternity. He has also written a number of scientific papers, which have been presented before medical societies. He is prominently identified with the following medical societies: The New York County Medical Society, the New York Academy of Medicine, the Therapeutic Club of New York, the University Club of New York, the Orange Mountain Medical Society and the William Pierson Medical Library Association. He is also fraternally affiliated with Century Lodge No. 100, F. & A. M., of South Orange, New Jersey. On January 28, 1890, Dr. Cobb was united in marriage to Miss Laura Dayton Sprague, of New York, and their children are Samuel Henry and Edward Sprague Cobb. Dr. Cobb and his wife are members of the Brick Presbyterian church of New York city.

CHARLES HENRY THOMPSON, A. B., M. D.—1868.

Dr. Charles H. Thompson, of Belmar, New Jersey, was born near Freehold, New Jersey, August 23, 1843, a son of Denise and Cornelia (Bergen) Thompson, both natives of New Jersey; the latter being a descendant of one of the first settlers of Long Island. The Thompson family is of English and Scotch extraction, the name being first spelled Tomson, and the lineal descendants to Dr. Thompson are as follows: John, who came to New England in 1650, and seventeen years later was one of a party of eighty-six who purchased that part of New Jersey then known as Navesink, Narumsunk and Pootapeek; Cornelius, Thomas, Joseph, William I., and Denise. For several generations the family resided near Freehold, and the majority of its members followed agricultural pursuits; one of the exceptions was Dr. Joseph C. Thompson, an uncle of Dr. Charles H. Thompson, who was a successful medical practitioner for many years in southern New Jersey.

Dr. Charles H. Thompson prepared for college in a school at Freehold, New Jersey, conducted by William W. Woodhull, and was graduated from Rutgers College in 1864, with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. He then entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which he received the degree of Doctor of Medicine, in 1868. Dr. Thompson engaged in the active practice of his profession at Fishkill, New York, where he remained for six months; he then removed to Rosemont, New Jersey, where for nearly five years he was successful in the conduct of a large consulting practice; he then located in New York city, where for two years and a half he conducted a drug store, but was forced to abandon this enterprise on account of ill health; for several years he lived at South Amboy, New Jersey, where he again resumed his medical practice, and in 1878 finally settled in Belmar, New Jersey, where he rapidly developed a successful practice. Dr. Thompson is a member of the Monmouth County District Medical Society, of which he is ex-president; the New Jersey State Medical Society, and the New York Medico-Legal Society.

Dr. Thompson is an active advocate of the principles of the Republican party. He was a member of the Ocean Beach council for two terms, for six years served in the capacity of president of the Belmar borough council, and for two years held the responsible position of mayor. In 1890 he was the choice of his party for the assembly, but met defeat with the rest of the ticket. He takes an active part in the work of the Protestant Episcopal church, being one of the organizers of the Holy Apostles church, of Belmar, and its first senior warden; as such he had the honor of presenting it to the bishop of the New Jersey diocese. Fraternally, Dr. Thompson is a member of Ocean Lodge No. 89, F. & A. M., of Belmar, New Jersey, of which he was master for eight years; Goodwin Chapter No. 36, R. A. M. of Manasquan, New Jersey, of which he is past high priest; Corson Commandery No. 15, K. T., of Asbury Park, New Jersey, and Mecca Temple, Ancient Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine of New York city. He is also affiliated with the Improved Order of Red Men.

On May 24, 1865, Dr. Thompson married Miss Rhoda A. Holmes, and they have one son, Fred Vail Thompson, who attended the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York for three years, and received his degree of Doctor of Medicine from the Long Island College Hospital in 1890; he is now engaged in the active practice of his profession at Holmdel, New Jersey.

THOMAS TERRILL, M. D.—1867.

Dr. Thomas Terrill, of Elizabeth, New Jersey, general practitioner, can be classed among those who have achieved unusual success in the practice of medicine and surgery, and especially in the diseases of children and obstetrics, as he has been devoting much time and attention for several years to this particular branch of his profession.

Dr. Terrill prepared for college in the public schools of his native town, and after thus attaining his preliminary education he entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York, from which he was graduated in 1867. After having passed an internship in Bellevue Hospital, he located in Elizabeth, New Jersey, where he has since continued to practice his profession. For ten years he held the position of county physician of Union county; he also acted in the capacity of coroner for four years; was United States pension surgeon from 1873 to 1888, and for several years the Pennsylvania Railroad Company engaged his services as surgeon.

Dr. Terrill takes an active interest in the political and educational welfare of Elizabeth. He has served on the board of aldermen for four years, and for two years he was a member of the board of education. He has also been a member of the Union county grand jury several times, and was a member of the United States grand jury which sat in Trenton in January, 1900. The Union County District Medical Society was organized in his office, and he acted as its secretary for several years after its incorporation. He is affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Knights of Honor. Dr. Terrill is also a consistent member and attendant of Christ Episcopal church of Elizabeth, New Jersey. On August 11, 1869, Dr. Terrill married Miss Louise Frederika Thompson, daughter of Thomas Thompson, of New York city. One child was born to them, May Louise, now the wife of Warren Gordon, of Elizabeth, and her two children are Everetta May and Thomasine Louise Gordon.

HENRY BERRIEN SHAW, M. D.—1877.

Dr. Henry Berrien Shaw, of New York city, was born December 15, 1849, in Newburgh, New York, and is the son of Charles Barnett and Henrietta (Rodermond) Shaw. He is descended on the paternal side from one of two brothers, Thomas and John, who in 1790 came from Belfast, Ireland, to America, and settled in New Windsor, New York, where they became agriculturist.

Dr. Shaw received his early education at a private school in his native village, and at a boarding school in Redding Ridge, Connecticut, subsequently attending the Henry Chapman School in Newburgh. He entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he graduated in 1877 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. Immediately after graduating he opened practice in Newburgh, where he remained for one year, after which he spent two years at Cornwall-on-Hudson, and in 1880 removed to New York city, where he has since remained, actively engaged in general practice. For fourteen years he held the position of surgeon in chief to the Harlem Dispensary.

Dr. Shaw is a member of the New York County Medical Association, the New York State Medical Society, and the Harlem Medical Society, of which last-named body he was at one time president. In politics he is an independent Democrat. Dr. Shaw married, May 19, 1875, Helen Isabel Smith, of Newburgh. They had one child, Florence Bell, who died in her fifth year.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, M. D.—1867.

Dr. Samuel Johnson, of Asbury Park, New Jersey, was born on a farm near Freehold, New Jersey, September 8, 1845, a son of Lewis E. and Sarah (Goodenough) Johnson, natives of New Jersey, where his ancestors resided during the period of the Revolutionary war. His father was a descendant of an old English family, and his mother's ancestors were of Scotch origin.

Dr. Johnson obtained his early education in the common schools of Freehold, later at the Freehold Institute, from which he entered Columbia College, where he studied the higher branches for two years. Being desirous of becoming a member of the medical profession he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he was graduated with the degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1867. He commenced the practice of his profession in Farmingdale, but two years later removed to Long Branch, where he resided for seven years. In 1876 he located in Asbury Park, New Jersey, where his abilities were soon recognized; his practice is of a general character, and the measure of success attained is indicated by the large and select patronage which he enjoys. For many years he has been United States pension examiner for eastern New Jersey, and at the present time (1902) he is consulting physician to the Long Branch Hospital. He is the author of a number of valuable monographs, which were read at medical meetings, and later published in the various medical journals.

Dr. Johnson displayed his business ability by purchasing coast real estate some years ago, knowing that it would increase from year to year. He became the owner of a large tract of land adjoining Asbury Park and located along the north shore of Deal Lake; he then laid out the town of Lock Harbor, and still owns a large portion of the town site. He is actively interested in the First National Bank of Asbury Park, and serves as its vice president. Dr. Johnson is a member of the Monmouth County District Medical Society, the New Jersey State Medical Society, and the American Medical Association. Socially he is a member of the Monmouth Club of Asbury Park, and fraternally is affiliated with Asbury Lodge No. 42, F. & A. M., Standard Chapter, R. A. M., Carson Commandery No. 14, and Mecca Temple, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. On October 20, 1870, Dr. Johnson married Miss Mary A. Throckmorton, of Long Branch; their children are: William T., who is conducting business in New York; Emma L., and Louis E. Johnson, Dr. Johnson and his family are members of the Presbyterian church of Asbury Park, New Jersey.

CORNELIUS VAN RIPER, A. M., M. D.—1866.

Dr. Cornelius Van Riper, general practitioner, of Passaic, New Jersey, is a direct descendant of Juriaen Tomassen, the progenitor of the Van Riper family in America. In April, 1663, Juriaen Tomassen embarked in the vessel "T. Bonta Koe" (The Spotted Cow) from his native city of Ripen, Denmark, for New Netherland. Upon his arrival in America he settled on a parcel of land which he received by will from Goert Coerten, lying in the town of Bergen, where four years after his arrival he married Miss Pryntje Hermans, and where his death occurred September 12, 1695. The name of Van Riper has been at various times spelled Van Reiper, Van Reyper, Van Ryper, Van Ripen, Van Reipen and Van Reyphen; it originated by reason of the descendants of Juriaen Tomassen calling themselves after the city of Ripen, which is on the north bank of the river Nibbs, in Jutland, Denmark, and which, next to Wibourg, is the oldest city in Jutland.

Abraham Van Riper, a grandson of Juriaen Tomassen, married Miss Elizabeth Bardbury, and their son, John A. Van Riper, did valiant service as a soldier in the war of the Revolution. John A. Van Riper married Miss Leah Winne, and one of their eight children was Abraham Van Riper, the grandfather of Dr. Cornelius Van Riper, who married Miss Maria Speer. He was a member of the New Jersey legislature in 1848 and 1849, filled the office of freeholder of Essex county, New Jersey, and served for many years as justice of the peace. His death occurred in 1866 at the age of eighty-four years. Abram Winne Van Riper, father of Dr. Cornelius Van Riper, and son of the Abraham Van Riper last mentioned, was a resident of Belleville, New Jersey. He married Miss Clarissa Kip on November 27, 1836, and Dr. Cornelius Van Riper was born of this union at North Belleville, New Jersey, September 6, 1840.

He prepared for college in a private school in Bloomfield, New Jersey, was graduated from the New York University in 1863 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts, received the degree of Master of Arts three years later from the same institution, and subsequently entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he was graduated with the degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1866. Shortly after his graduation he located in Passaic, New Jersey, where he has been engaged in a general practice of medicine and surgery ever since. After a short period of time he found it necessary to employ the services of an assistant, and instituted a prescription department in addition to his office. The young man who had charge of this department remained in his employ for thirty-one years, until his decease in 1898. In 1868 the space allotted to the preparation of medicine having become inadequate, a drug store was erected and has since been enlarged three times, and it is now one of the finest establishments in the city. The business was incorporated in 1901 under the style of Van Riper & Company, of which Cornelius Van Riper is president, Arthur Ward Van Riper, vice president and general manager, and John T. Van Riper, secretary, treasurer and counsel. Dr. Van Riper has filled the office of vice president of the People's Bank and Trust Company since its organization in 1888, and he acts in the capacity of trustee of the Dundee Savings Bank.

Dr. Van Riper is a member of the board of governors and also of the staff of the Passaic General Hospital, a member of the Passaic County District Medical Society, the Passaic City Medical Society, the Holland Society of New York city, the Aquackanonk Club, the Phi Beta Kappa and the Zeta Psi college fraternities. Dr. Van Riper has served as member of the Passaic city council, as school commissioner and in many other city offices. On September 19, 1866, he was united in marriage to Miss Adrianna Terhune, daughter of the Hon. John N. and Sophia Terhune. Five children were born of this union. Carrie and Aimee are deceased, and Arthur Ward, John T. and Cornelia Z. Van Riper are still living.

Arthur Ward Van Riper prepared for college in the public schools of Passaic and in a private school in Paterson, was graduated from the New York University in 1892 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts, and from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York in 1895 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. He is located in practice in Passaic, and is assistant gynecologist to the Passaic General Hospital. He is a member of the Passaic County District Medical Society, the Passaic City Medical Society and the New York Academy of Medicine. During his course in the university he was a member of the football and baseball teams, was secretary, vice president and later president of his class, president of the college athletic association and president of the Euclidean Literary Society. He is a member of the Zeta Psi and Theta Nu Epsilon college fraternities. He has also acted as city physician of Passaic, having been first appointed to fill an unexpired term of one year and then re-appointed for a term of three years. On April 8, 1897, he was married to Miss Eva E. Popple, daughter of Benjamin F. and Emily (Filkins) Popple. Mr. Popple is a prominent railroad man in Passaic, New Jersey. Mrs. Van Riper died March 30, 1899.

John Terhune Van Riper, second son of Dr. Cornelius Van Riper, was graduated from the New York University in 1894 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. and the following year received the degree of Bachelor of Laws from the New York University Law School. In June, 1895, he entered the office of Thomas M. Moore, Esq., of Passaic, and was admitted to the bar of New Jersey in 1897. In the same year he was elected a school commissioner of Passaic, and served in that capacity for three years. During his college course he was president of the university athletic association, treasurer of his class and vice president of it for two years; he was also secretary of the University Quarterly and editor of the College Violet. He is a member of the Zeta Psi and the Theta Nu Epsilon college fraternities. On June 6, 1899, he was united in marriage to Miss Edith Hope Hart, daughter of Colonel Benjamin F. and Emeline A. (McDowell) Hart, of Hoboken, New Jersey; they have one child, John Cornelius Van Riper.

The other surviving child of Dr. Cornelius Van Riper is Miss Cornelia Zabriske Van Riper, a graduate with high honors of the Passaic Collegiate School, and at the present time (1902) a student in Vassar College of the class of 1904. The mother of these children died December 9, 1893. Dr. Van Riper and his family are earnest and consistent members of the North Reformed church of Passaic, New Jersey.

PERCY HAMILTON TERHUNE, M. D.—1889.

Dr. Percy Hamilton Terhune, physician and surgeon of Passaic, New Jersey, was born in that town February 26, 1867, a son of Dr. Richard A. Terhune, a prominent representative member of the medical fraternity. Dr. Terhune obtained his early literary education in the public schools of Passaic; later he attended the high school, from which he graduated, and he then became a student in Packard's Business College of New York; after his graduation from the latter institution he entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons, from which he graduated in 1889 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. He then pursued a post-graduate course in the New York Polyclinic. During the winters of 1897 and 1898 he further prosecuted his studies in Vienna, and knowing that the tendency of the age is toward specialization in all lines of labor, both industrial and professional, he devoted his thought and energy along the lines of surgery and gynecology. In 1890 he began the practice of his profession in his native town, where he has built up an extensive and select patronage, and he well deserves mention among the eminent professional men of New Jersey. He acted in the capacity of city physician of Passaic from 1891 to 1897, and was president of the board of health about the same time; he was a prominent member of the staff of the Passaic General Hospital, and he was among those who resigned when the management appointed a staff which was partly homeopathic.

Dr. Terhune is connected with the Passaic City Medical Society, of which he was president in the year 1901; a member of the Passaic County District Medical Society; the New Jersey State Medical Society. He is a member of the Royal Arcanum and in a social way is identified with the Acquackanonk Club of Passaic, New Jersey. On July 10, 1894, Dr. Terhune was united in marriage to Miss Alice Ethelyn Tucker, of Monson, Mass., and their two children, Doris and Alice Tucker Terhune, died in 1898, aged respectively three and two years. Mrs. Terhune passed away in the year 1896.

CHARLES EDWARD STAMMLER, PH. G., M. D.—1885.

Dr. Charles E. Stammler, general practitioner, 1023 Madison street, Brooklyn, New York, was born in Beudingen, Germany, July 27, 1855, and was reared in his native country until fifteen years of age, where he received the excellent educational advantages of the schools and gymnasium of his birthplace. After completing his literary studies he came to this country and entered the New York College of Pharmacy, from which he was graduated in 1875, with the degree of Graduate of Pharmacy. Subsequently he engaged in the drug business on his own account, which he continued for a number of years, and finally determining to become a member of the medical profession, he placed himself under the efficient preceptorship of Dr. Hartly. After pursuing the regular course of reading in the latter's office, he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which he was graduated in the class of 1885.

Immediately after securing his diploma, Dr. Stammler engaged in the active practice of his profession in Brooklyn, and by close application, hard labor, and allowing nothing to stand in the way of his professional work, has succeeded in building up a large and remunerative patronage. Nature and training seem to have fitted Dr. Stammler for his chosen calling, and he has won prestige and distinction in recognition of his skill, learning and devotion to the duties that devolve upon him. He is a member of the various medical societies of Brooklyn, among them being the German Physicians' Society, the Society for the Relief of Widows and Orphans, and the Physicians' Mutual Aid Association.

FREDERICK E. BASSETT, M. D.—1877.

Dr. Frederick E. Bassett, physician and surgeon of Rye, Westchester county, New York, was born in Windham county, Connecticut, June 23, 1853. His literary education was obtained in Williston Seminary, where he was graduated and prepared for Yale College, but he finally abandoned the idea of a collegiate course in order to engage in mercantile pursuits, which he successfully followed for a number of years. He then decided to enter the medical profession, and commenced his preparatory studies under the careful guidance of Dr. Joseph E. Winters, of New York. He matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which institution he was graduated in 1877 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine.

Immediately after his graduation Dr. Bassett went abroad in order to further prosecute his studies in the cities of Paris and London. After his return to his native land he opened an office in New York and entered upon the work for which he was so well adapted by disposition as well as by training, and in which he achieved such well deserved distinction. He remained there until 1884, when he located in Rye, New York, and from the beginning he enjoyed a good patronage, which has constantly increased with the passing years. His practice has been along general lines, and he is recognized as one of the most skilled and able practitioners in the town and commands the respect and confidence of all with whom he comes in contact.

DUDLEY DE VORE ROBERTS, M. D.—1898.

Dr. Dudley De Vore Roberts, a well established physician of Brooklyn, New York, was born March 1, 1874, in Newark, New Jersey, where he was educated in the Centenary Collegiate Institute, afterward taking a special biological course at Columbia University. Before beginning his medical studies he enjoyed the benefit of some experience as pharmacist, and it is possible that his training in this capacity may have been one of the factors which helped to form the decision to devote himself to the medical profession. He matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he graduated in the class of 1898. He then received an appointment in the medical department of Bellevue Hospital, where he remained two years, after which he engaged in private practice in Brooklyn. He possesses the esteem and confidence of a large and steadily increasing circle of patrons, and is regarded with respect by his fellow physicians. While devoting his attention to general practice, Dr. Roberts' inclination would lead him to make a specialty of diseases of the stomach and intestines. He holds the position of examiner for several leading life insurance companies.

Dr. Roberts is a member of the Brooklyn Pathological Society, the Kings County Medical Society, the Kings County Medical Association, the New York State Medical Association, the American Medical Association, the Society of the Alumni of Bellevue Hospital, and is active both in the professional and social circles of Brooklyn.

RAYMOND BERIAH PRATT, M. D.—1888.

Dr. Raymond Beriah Pratt, a well known physician of Elmira, New York, was born April 21, 1866, in East Troy, Bradford county, Pennsylvania, and is the son of James P. and Sarah P. (Van Dyke) Pratt. The latter was, for forty years, a successful practitioner in the treatment of diseases of women. When Dr. Pratt was four years of age his parents removed to St. Louis, where they remained four years, and then settled in Elmira. In the schools of that city Dr. Pratt received his elementary education, which was supplemented by the instruction of private tutors.

Deciding to adopt as his life work the practice of medicine, he pursued his preliminary studies under the guidance of Dr. H. H. Purdy, of Elmira, after which he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he graduated in the class of 1888. After serving a course in the Chambers Street Hospital, and attending a post-graduate course in the Twenty-third Street Hospital, he returned to Elmira, where he entered upon the active duties of his profession. He succeeded to the practice of his preceptor, Dr. H. H. Purdy, which he greatly extended, building up for himself the reputation of a skillful and successful medical practitioner, and proving himself in every respect a worthy successor of his honored preceptor.

In 1899 Dr. Pratt erected the imposing block at the corner of State and Market streets, where he opened, in April, 1901, the institution which is now known as Pratt's Private Hospital and Dispensary, to which he has added a gymnasium. This establishment he has conducted very successfully, showing himself, by the manner in which he has filled the office of proprietor, to be possessed no less of executive ability than of the professional skill which he had hitherto displayed in so marked a degree. He is a member of the Chemung County Medical Society, and a fellow of the Elmira Academy of Medicine. He married, February 21, 1901, Miss Jennie Norton Short, a native of Ottawa, Canada.

CYRUS EDSON, M. D.—1881.

Dr. Cyrus Edson, 56 West Fiftieth street, New York city, for many years president of the board of health of New York city, is a lineal descendant of Roger Williams, founder of the state of Rhode Island, and who was born at Conwyl Cayo, Wales, in 1606, and in 1624 entered Oxford, where he studied Latin, Greek, Hebrew, French and Dutch, was ordained a clergyman of the Church of England, but soon became an extreme Puritan and emigrated to New England. For his opposition to the New England theocracy he was driven from Salem, and took refuge at Plymouth, where he studied Indian dialects. Banished from the colony in 1635, he escaped in midwinter to the shores of Narragansett Bay, accompanied by a few adherents, where he purchased lands of the Indian chiefs, founded the city of Providence, and established a government of pure democracy. In 1654 he was elected president of the colony, and his death occurred in 1683. Dr. Edson is also a descendant of Deacon Samuel Edson, founder of Bridgewater, Connecticut, of whom William Cullen Bryant was also a lineal descendant. His maternal grandmother was a member of the Townsend family, who were prominent iron-founders of Albany, New York, and other branches of the family are established at Oyster Bay, New York.

Franklin Edson, father of Dr. Edson, was born in Chester, Vermont, April 5, 1832, the son of Opher and Soviah (Williams) Edson. He received an academic education and in his early years was engaged in the occupation of teaching school. In 1852 he entered the distilling business in Albany, New York, and was elected a member of the Albany board of trade, a director of the New York State Bank, a vestryman of St. Paul's Episcopal church, and president of the Young Men's Association of Albany. In 1866 he became head of the Albany produce commission firm of Edson, Orr & Chamberlain, which soon removed its place of business to New York city, and three years later the firm of Franklin Edson & Company was formed. In 1871 Mr. Edson became a member of the New York Produce Exchange, was chairman of its committee on grain and of its building committee, while in 1873 and 1874 he acted in the capacity of president of the Exchange. In 1882 he was elected mayor of the city of New York, and during his administration the new Croton aqueduct was laid out and the contracts for its construction awarded, the Brooklyn bridge was completed, and the new parks acquired by the city. In 1856 Mr. Edson married Fanny C. Wood, daughter of Benjamin Wood, of Bath, New York, and granddaughter of Jethro Wood, inventor of the cast-iron plow. They had a family of five sons and two daughters.

Dr. Cyrus Edson was born in Albany, New York, September 8, 1857, acquired his early education at the Harrington School on Throgs Neck and the Churchill Military Academy at Sing Sing, New York. Later he entered Columbia Academic School, but resigned at the end of his junior year to take up the study of medicine in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which institution he was graduated in 1881. Dr. Edson, while a student at Columbia, rowed on the crew for three years and participated in the regattas at Saratoga, Springfield and at Henly, England, and in the latter race the Columbia crew defeated both Oxford and Cambridge—the only collegiate race ever won by an American crew in England; it took place in 1878. Directly after acquiring his medical degree he was appointed medical inspector to assist in stamping out smallpox, which was an epidemic in New York city in 1882, and within six months the appointment was made permanent. In 1884 he was appointed chief inspector of contagious diseases and of food adulteration, and in 1890 received the appointment of sanitary superintendent. Two years later he was appointed commissioner of health, but resigned from this office in 1895 to devote himself exclusively to private practice of a general nature.

Dr. Edson was formerly visiting physician to the Charity Hospital, ambulance surgeon of Chambers Street Hospital for two years, surgeon of the Twelfth Regiment, surgeon of the First Division, National Guard of the State of New York with the rank of colonel, president of the board of pharmacy of the city and county of New York for ten years, an honorary position to which he was elected by the trustees of the College of Pharmacy, and vice president of the American Society of Public Analysts. He is the author of a number of valuable brochures, the more prominent ones being: "The Contagion of Leprosy," "Contagion of the Poison of Typhoid Fever," "La Grippe and Its Treatment," the first book of which was published by D. Appleton & Company. Dr. Edson has also contributed about thirty-five articles to the North American Review, the Forum and other periodicals, among which were: "Nagging Women," "Do We Live too Fast," "The Evils of Early Marriages," "Is Drunkenness Curable?" He is also the inventor of "The Combined Artery and Needle Forceps," found in most surgical cases; "An Ozone Generator and Inhaler," "An Antiseptic Pocket Case of Surgical Instruments," "An Antiseptic Hypodermic Syringe," "A Spray Tube for Local Application to Nose and Throat."

Dr. Edson is a member of the County, State and National Medical associations, the Medico-Legal Society and the American Society of Medical Jurisprudence. He is also connected with the St. Anthony Club, Delta Psi fraternity, One Hundred Year Club, Larchmont Yacht Club, Democratic Club of New York, and an associate member of the New York Vegetarian Society. In 1892 he was created Master Mason of Sagamore Lodge No. 371, New York, a member of Royal Arch Masons, Palestine Commandery, and a Noble of the Ancient Arabic Order of the Mystic Shrine.

In August, 1881, Dr. Edson married Virginia Churchill Page, a descendant of the Page family of Virginia, and also of the Churchill family of Marlborough, England. Their children are: Franklin Churchill, a student in the Cheshire Military Academy; Helen Augusta, Ruth Augusta, and William Russell Edson. The mother of these children died and in April, 1893, Dr. Edson was united in marriage to Mrs. Mary Emma Quick, née Van Veelsor, of New York city.

LESLIE ALLIN TURNER, M. D.—1898.

Dr. Leslie Allin Turner, one of the most successful of the younger practitioners of Brooklyn, at 1072 Prospect place, is a native of that city and was born there November 19, 1875. He obtained his preliminary education through the public school system of his birthplace. After a period spent in traveling and cultivating his already well marked powers of observation, he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York in 1894. He graduated in the class of 1898, this being the first class to graduate under the new curriculum of four years' study.

After his graduation he opened an office in his native city of Brooklyn, where he is the possessor of a large practice. He is regarded with confidence and respect by his patrons, and holds a high place in the esteem of his brother physicians. While giving his attention to general practice, Dr. Turner's natural preference is in the treatment of the diseases of children, which branch he makes a specialty. So he is peculiarly fitted for the position which he holds of physician in chief to the Woman's Aid Nursery. Dr. Turner was married in the spring of 1902. He is a member of the Alumni Association of the College of Physicians and Surgeons and a member of the Kings County Medical Society.

HENRY ALLEN HIGLEY, M. D.—1888.

Dr. Henry Allen Higley, a skillful and progressive physician of Brooklyn, New York, was born September 13, 1866, in the city of which he is now a resident. His preparatory education was received in the Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute, where he was fitted for Yale University, from which he was graduated in the class of 1885. Having decided to devote himself for life to the practice of medicine, he pursued his preparatory studies under the direction of Dr. J. B. Bissell, and subsequently matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he graduated in the class of 1888. For the next two years he was connected with the Charity Hospital on Block Island, gaining in that time much experience which proved of value to him in his future career.

At the end of his term of service in this hospital he opened an office in Brooklyn, where he built up for himself a very desirable practice, which is steadily increasing, and which is due entirely to the ability and conscientiousness with which he fulfills the duties of his calling. He is held in high esteem by his brother physicians, and is scarcely less active in the sphere of a citizen than in that of a practitioner of medicine, taking the most lively interest in public affairs, and aiding, to the utmost of his power, every movement having for its object the welfare and advancement of the community in which he resides. Dr Higley is a member of both the New York and Brooklyn Pathological societies, and is active in all matters pertaining to his calling, as well as in political matters, and in the social circles of his native city.

GUSTAV ADOLPH FENSTERER, M. D.—1888.

Dr. Gustav A. Fensterer, for many years a practicing physician and surgeon of Floral Park, Nassau county, New York, was born in New York city, April 13, 1866, where he received a practical education in the public schools. After completing his literary studies he learned the trade of druggist, which vocation he successfully followed for ten years, being a licentiate in New York, Kings county, and New Jersey. After the expiration of this period of time, having the talent and inclination for a medical career, Dr. Fensterer began the study of medicine under the personal supervision of Dr. H. T. Adams, of Jersey City Heights, after which he pursued a course of reading in the office of Dr. William H. Porter. He then matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which he was graduated May 10, 1888.

Shortly after securing his diploma Dr. Fensterer located at Floral Park, Long Island, where he has since enjoyed a large and lucrative patronage and consulting practice of a general nature. He devotes particular attention to surgery, having a natural aptitude for that branch of the profession, and he stands to-day as one of the honored physicians of Long Island, having gained prominence in a profession which is second to none of the higher callings to which man devotes his energies. He is a member of the medical staff of the Nassau Hospital at Mineola, and a prominent member of the Queens County Medical Society, the Nassau County Medical Society, and the Associated Physicians of Long Island.

EDWARD BLAISE, M. D.—1896.

Dr. Edward Blaise is a medical practitioner of acknowledged standing in Brooklyn, New York, where he was born March 6, 1875. His early education was received in the public grammar schools of his native city, supplemented by attendance at the Boys' High School. At a very early age he had formed the intention of devoting himself for life to the practice of medicine, and the entire course of his education was shaped with this end in view.

After leaving the high school he took a special scientific course at the Polytechnic Institute of Brooklyn, and subsequently matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he graduated in the class of 1896. Without delay he opened an office in his native city, which he has found a good field for his labors, being at present in the enjoyment of a very desirable practice. He possesses the esteem and confidence of both patrons and professional brethren, and takes an active interest in all matters pertaining to his calling, and also in whatever relates to the welfare of the community in which he resides, and in which he is deservedly popular both as a physician and a citizen. Dr. Blaise is a member of the Brooklyn Medical Society.

ROBERT ALEXANDER BLACK, M. D.—1883.

Dr. Robert A. Black, of 111 Sixth avenue, Brooklyn, New York, former assistant sanitary superintendent of the board of health of Greater New York, borough of Brooklyn, was born in Brooklyn, New York, January 4, 1860. He is the son of Robert and Jane (McMullen) Black, the former named having been born in Ireland in 1831; he obtained his education at a private college at Enniskillen, and in 1848 came to this country. For two years he made his home in Troy, New York, then located in New York city, and in 1854 removed to Brooklyn, New York, where he established a drug store, and for many years was prominently identified with the business, political and fraternal life of the city. He was a life-long Democrat, staunch in his advocacy of the principles of the party, and from 1875 till 1882 was a member of the city council, and held the position of president of the board for the last two years of his service; when the local Democracy was reorganized he was chairman of the committee of one hundred and fifty which had the matter in charge. He also held the office of city treasurer and was presidential elector when Cleveland was first elected, and was appointed collector of internal revenue by President Cleveland during the first administration. Mr. Black was a member of the Masonic order from principle and not from policy, his standard of the order was high, and he deprecated any course calculated to hinder its progress along this line. He had the honor of an election to the office of grand commander of Knights Templars of the state of New York, and was one of the representative Freemasons of Brooklyn, being identified with both the York and Scottish Rites. He was one of the charter members of Adytum Lodge, of which he was past master; past high priest of Nassau Chapter, past eminent commander of Clinton Commandery, past district deputy grand master of blue lodge Masonry of the state of New York, as well as past grand commander of the state of New York. His death occurred in December, 1896.

After passing through the public schools of Brooklyn and pursuing a course at the Polytechnic Institute, Dr. Black became a clerk in the pharmacy so long presided over by his father. He was destined from an early age for the medical profession, and the experience in the drug store was a preparatory lesson. Subsequently he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which he was graduated in the class of 1883. Before the completion of his medical course he was acting interne in Mount Sinai Hospital, and after his graduation received the appointment of interne at the Kings County Hospital, remaining in that position for one year. He entered upon the private practice of his profession in Brooklyn, New York, and in addition to these duties was actively connected with the Brooklyn Central Dispensary until the rapid growth of his professional duties forced him to resign. He served as a member of the Brooklyn school board from 1890 to 1898, when he resigned in order to accept the position of assistant sanitary superintendent of Greater New York, borough of Brooklyn, which position he filled for four years.

He is a member of Adytum Lodge No. 640, F. & A. M., of Nassau Chapter, R. A. M., the Royal Arcanum, and the Crescent Athletic and Carleton clubs. He is also a member of the various Democratic organizations of his assembly district, and takes a deep and active interest in local political affairs. On December 10, 1891, Dr. Black married Miss Emi Ahlers, a daughter of Herman Ahlers, of Brooklyn. They have one child, Donald Black.

LESLIE MONTAGUE WINN, M. D.—1891.

Dr. Leslie Montague Winn, a well established physician of Brooklyn, New York, was born August 22, 1867, in Kentucky, and was educated at Rutgers College, New Brunswick, New Jersey, and at Columbia University, in the city of New York. His freshman and sophomore years were passed at the former institute, and his junior and senior years at the latter.

His education being completed, and the time having arrived for him to choose a profession, Dr. Winn selected that of medicine, and passed his period of preparation under the direction of Drs. Dorlon and Wyeth, as preceptors. He matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he graduated in the class of 1891. He then went to England and practiced surgery in London for several years, laying up thereby a store of experience of inestimable value to him in his future career. On his return to his native land he settled in Brooklyn, and engaged in general practice, building up, in the course of time, a large and profitable practice, and earning for himself the reputation of a skillful and successful medical practitioner.

JAMES G. CONNELL, M. D.—1877.

For more than a quarter of a century James Gilleland Connell has been engaged in the general practice of medicine in Pittsburg. He was born in Beaver county, Pennsylvania, August 3, 1848, a son of Joseph and Lucinda (Gilleland) Connell. He is descended from Scotch ancestry, and Joseph Connell, the first of the name to cross the Atlantic to the new world, took up his abode in Beaver county, where he followed the vocation of farming. The maternal ancestors of Dr. Connell located in western Pennsylvania in early colonial days, and farming was also the chosen pursuit of the Gillelands.

In the district schools of Beaver county, Dr. Connell began his education, which was further continued in a private school in Clinton, Allegheny county, Pennsylvania, next in the State Normal School in Edinboro, Pennsylvania, and afterward in Wooster University, at Wooster, Ohio, where he was graduated in 1874, with the degree of Bachelor of Arts, while in 1877 the degree of Master of Arts was conferred upon him by his alma mater. With an excellent literary education to serve as the foundation for professional knowledge, he entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, and was graduated with the degree of M. D. in 1877. Practical experience came to him through his service as interne in the Western Pennsylvania Hospital at Pittsburg, in 1875-6, and in April, 1877, he opened an office for the private practice of his profession, which has since made heavy demands upon his time and energies, as he has demonstrated his ability to successfully cope with conditions and complications brought on by disease upon the widely varying natures. He has a large practice, which includes many of the best families of the city. Dr. Connell was chosen to the position of professor of materia medica in the Western Pennsylvania Medical College upon its organization, which chair he resigned in 1894. He has also been surgeon to Passavant Hospital of Pittsburg, and he belongs to the County and State Medical societies and to the American Medical Association. He was married to Miss Katherine Parker Bradley, and their children are Edward Bradley, Lucy Parker, Joseph and Mary Louis. He was formerly a Democrat in his political views, but now exercises his right of franchise in support of the Republican party.

HARRY THEODORE HARDING, M. D.—1893.

Dr. Harry Theodore Harding, of 2750 Fourteenth street N. W., Washington, D. C., was born January 21, 1870, in Binghamton, New York, and is the son of Theodore Alonzo and Carrie (Hutchinson) Harding, his ancestors being of old colonial stock. Dr. Harding received his early education in one of the public schools of Binghamton, and at the high school of Washington, D. C. He spent one year at the Columbian University of Washington and then entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he graduated in 1893 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. The same year he entered upon the practice of his profession in Washington, where he has since remained. Dr. Harding is a member of the Medical Association and Society of the District of Columbia. On June 1, 1899, he married Gertrude McCulloch.

REUEL BAKER KIMBALL, M. D.—1880.

Dr. Reuel Baker Kimball, 15 East Forty-first street, New York city, was born April 16, 1855, in Eatontown, New Jersey, and is the son of Walter T. and Helen (Baker) Kimball. The former, a graduate of one of the medical schools of Louisville, Kentucky, is a well-known physician of Lakewood, New Jersey. The family is of New England Puritan stock.

Dr. Kimball was fitted for college at Williston Seminary, Easthampton, Massachusetts, and in 1877 received from Princeton University the degree of Bachelor of Arts, followed in 1880 by that of Master of Arts, graduating with honors, the same year, from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York. After serving for one year as interne in the Chambers Street Hospital, he began practice at Seabright, New Jersey, in the summer of 1881. In the autumn of that year he opened an office at 363 Lexington avenue, New York, and has since been engaged in general practice in that city, devoting special attention to pediatrics. For more than twenty years he has spent part of every year, from June 1 to October 1, at Seabright, New Jersey. From 1884 to 1887 he filled the position of examiner in materia medica and therapeutics in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, and was attending physician to the Babies' Hospital for twelve years, and to the outpatient department of Roosevelt Hospital for five years. He has also been, for five years, instructor in minor surgery at the New York Polyclinic. His contributions to the literature of his profession have consisted of a number of articles published from time to time in the medical journals.

Dr. Kimball is a member of the New York Academy of Medicine, the Clinical Society, the County Medical Society, and the Physicians' Mutual Aid Association. He belongs to the University and the Princeton clubs. He married, September 26, 1893, Caroline Todd, daughter of John J. Knox, of New York city, for many years comptroller of currency. They have two children, Reuel Baker, Jr., and Esther Caroline.

ARTHUR NICHOLS CURTIS, M. D.—1888.

On both the paternal and maternal sides Dr. Curtis is descended from the earliest and most honored of American permanent settlers. There were two clergymen, by the name of David and Philip Curtis, who came to the Boston colony in 1620, and it is from one of these that this family is descended. One Philip Curtis was among the first graduating class of Harvard College. And on the maternal side the ancestry goes back to the Puritan by the name of White, who was born on the Mayflower on its famous journey to this country. On both sides members of the family took part in the French and Indian wars, in the struggle for independence, and in the war of 1812. The Curtis family resided in Massachusetts until Timothy Austin Curtis and his wife, Sarah Louisa Nichols, moved to Newark, New Jersey. While this last-named couple were residing in Brookfield, Massachusetts, Arthur Nichol Curtis was born to them, on November 28, 1866, and it is his career as one of the leading physicians and surgeons of St. Louis, Missouri, which forms the basis of this biography.

He received his literary education in the public schools of Brookfield and in the Boston Latin School, and then began his professional training in the College of Physicians and Surgeons at New York, being given his diploma in 1888. His practical work began as an interne in the Newark City Hospital, and in 1889 he went abroad to study in the famous schools of Germany. He was an interne in the Female Hospital of Hanover, under Dr. Ludwig, was a student in Friedrich Wilhelm University, in Berlin, in 1890-91, under the noted Dr. O. Chansen, and was an interne at the Dresden Frauen Clinic. With this extensive and thorough equipment he returned to America, and in 1892 began practice in St. Louis, where he has devoted himself to the practice of medicine. He had finished his professional training at an age when most men are only beginning, and this evidence of ability and his skill in practical application are an earnest of a brilliant future.

Dr. Curtis is assistant professor of surgery in the College of Physicians and Surgeons in St. Louis and was a lecturer on hygiene; since 1894 he has lectured on pelvic anatomy and obstetrics in Marion-Sims College in St. Louis, and since 1900 has been adjunct professor of obstetrics there. He has kept up with the advance of his profession and identified himself with every movement which would aid his own work and in which he could contribute his own quota to the world's scientific knowledge. He is a member of the Gynecological and Obstetrical Society of St. Louis. His political views, as far as he finds occasion to express them, are those of the Republican party. On October 4, 1899, he was married to Miss Ida May Mekham; they have no children.

PAUL THOMAS KIMBALL, M. D.—1887.

Dr. Paul Thomas Kimball, of Laurel House, Lakewood, New Jersey, was born February 5, 1862, in Eatontown, New Jersey, and is the son of Walter S. and Helen (Baker) Kimball, natives of New York state. The former was a physician who practiced many years in Eatontown, and later in Lakewood, and has another son, Reuel Baker Kimball, who graduated in 1880 from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York and is now practicing in that city.

Dr. Kimball received his early education in Phillips Academy, Exeter, New Hampshire, and in 1884 graduated from Princeton University with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. He then entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, graduating as Doctor of Medicine in 1887. After serving an internship in the Chambers Street Hospital and the New York Lying-in Asylum, he began private practice in 1891 in Lakewood, where he has since remained. His summers are spent at Seabright, New Jersey. He is assistant physician to the Babies' Hospital of New York, and during the summer devotes much of his time to the summer home of the Babies' Hospital, which is situated at Oceanic, New Jersey. He is a member of the Women's Hospital Alumni Association, the University and Princeton clubs of New York, and the Lakewood Country Club.

FRANCIS OSWALD DORSEY, M. D.—1896.

The history of the Dorsey family goes back to the early colonial period, when it is known that Colonel Edward Dorsey, who probably came from Essex county, England, settled in Annapolis, Maryland, and in 1664 received a grant of land from Lord Baltimore. And this original grant still remains in the family, and is thus one of the oldest estates in the country. Robert Stockton and Katharine (Loyman) Dorsey were residents of Indianapolis, Indiana, and it was in that city that their son Francis Oswald was born, on November 12, 1869.

He was educated in the public schools of Indianapolis and was the valedictorian of the class when, in 1889, he graduated from the Indiana

Classical School. He followed this with four years at Yale, where he was graduated with the degree of A. B. in 1893, and in 1896 became a Doctor of Medicine from the College of Physicians and Surgeons. From 1897 to 1899 he was an interne at the Presbyterian Hospital, in the preceding year had been in the Sloane Maternity Hospital, and did clinical work in the Vanderbilt Clinic. Fortified with all this preliminary training and practice, he opened his office in Indianapolis on the first of January, 1900, where he is now one of the young but progressive and capable surgeons of the city.

Dr. Dorsey has been assistant to the chair of principles and practice of medicine in the Indiana Medical School, demonstrator of pathology and professor of materia medica and therapeutics in the Indiana Dental School, superintendent of clinic and instructor in the Bobbs Free Dispensary, consulting physician for the Indianapolis City Dispensary. He is a member of the Indiana State Medical Society, the Indianapolis Medical Society, and the American Medical Association, and is examiner for the New York Life, the Equitable and the New England Mutual Insurance companies. He has been identified with politics only so far as to vote the Republican ticket. On October 15, 1902, Dr. Dorsey was married to Miss Edith Maria Smith, of Indianapolis. His office is at 212 Claypool building.

FRANCIS DUFFIELD, M. D.—1900.

Dr. Francis Duffield, a practicing physician of Detroit, Michigan, was born October 28, 1873, in the city of which he is now a resident, and is the son of Henry Martyn and Frances (Pitts) Duffield. His early education was received in the public schools of his native city, and at the age of fourteen he was placed under the care of Mr. H. G. Sherrard, a private tutor, under whose instruction he was fitted to enter Harvard University, where he matriculated at the age of eighteen, graduating in the class of 1896 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts.

His literary education being completed, and the time having arrived for him to choose a profession, he selected that of medicine, and accordingly matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which institution he graduated in the class of 1900. Immediately thereafter he enjoyed the advantage of one year's experience as extern in the second surgical division of Bellevue Hospital, after which he returned to Detroit, where, in November, 1901, he opened an office at 198 Van Dyke avenue and entered upon a career of general medical and surgical practice. Dr. Duffield is in the enjoyment of a steadily increasing patronage, and has earned for himself a recognized position in the ranks of the medical profession. He holds the appointment of assistant visiting physician to the Woman's Hospital and Infants' Home.

Dr. Duffield is a member of the Wayne County Medical Society. While not taking an active part in public affairs, he yet gives a due portion of his attention to political matters, being a consistent member of the Republican party and an impartial advocate of its principles and measures. He married, October 8, 1900, Miss Helen Muir, and they have one daughter, Frances.

FRANK CROMBIE STUDLEY, M. D.—1893.

One of the thoroughly trained physicians of Milwaukee is Dr. Studley, and as one of the alumni of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York he has reflected honor both upon himself and his alma mater by his excellent work in the medical art. His ancestry on both the paternal and maternal sides is of colonial stock, the progenitor of the family having come from England and settled in the colony at Hartford, Connecticut, and the great-great-grandfather of the present generation was named Jesse Studley; members of the maternal side of the family were soldiers in the Revolution. William Harrison Studley and Caroline L. Heath were residents of New York city, and there on January 23, 1869, their son Frank Crombie was born.

He was educated in the public schools of New York, in the Claverack College and Hudson River Institute at Claverack, New York; graduated from Lawrence University at Appleton, Wisconsin in 1890, and then began his study of medicine in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, where he was graduated in 1893. For the following year he had the advantages of training abroad, at Heidelberg and Berlin, and then, well equipped and enthusiastic, he returned and took up his practice in Milwaukee, where he is one of the popular physicians and has a good patronage.

Dr. Studley was demonstrator of anatomy at the Wisconsin College of Physicians and Surgeons for the year 1894-95. He is a member of the Milwaukee County and the Milwaukee Medical societies, and also of the University Club. He is a Republican, but his professional duties preclude any participation in public affairs. In January, 1894, Dr. Studley was married to Miss Nellie West, of Appleton, Wisconsin, and they have two little girls by the name of Theda and Elizabeth.

GEORGE O'GORMAN, M. D.—1881.

Dr. George O'Gorman, of Newark, New Jersey, was born in that city August 15, 1859, a son of the late Dr. William O'Gorman, who was born in Dublin, Ireland, July 12, 1824, and obtained his education at Carlow, a town about forty miles from his native place, containing a well-known Catholic college, now affiliated with London University. At the age of nineteen years Dr. O'Gorman, Sr., commenced the study of medicine under the competent instruction of Dr. O'Kelly, at Maynooth, and in 1844 went to Dublin, where he spent five years as student, house surgeon and physician in the Whitworth, Hardwick, Richmond and other well-known hospitals of that city. In 1849 he came to the United States, and settling in Oswego, New York, was appointed surgeon to Fort Ontario in 1851. This position he retained until March, 1857, when, in consequence of the removal of some companies of the Fourth Artillery from the fort, he removed to Newark, New Jersey, and entered upon a general practice of medicine and surgery. At the breaking out of the Civil war Dr. O'Gorman was appointed by Governor Olden chief of the commission sent to Fortress Monroe for the purpose of caring for the wounded New Jersey soldiers in that vicinity, and returning them to their homes. For two successive terms he was elected county physician for Essex county, and in 1871 was elected president of the Essex District Medical Society, and on several occasions represented that body in the State Medical Society, of which, in 1874, he was vice-president, and, in 1875, president. For many years he held the responsible position of medical director of St. Michael's Hospital, incorporated in 1871; its medical department was organized by Dr. O'Gorman, and through his instrumentality the Woman's Hospital was added to this invaluable charity. He was the physician to Seton Hall College, a position which he held up to the time of his death, which occurred in 1888. In November, 1857, Dr. O'Gorman married Miss Susan Dougherty, eldest daughter of the late George Dougherty, a highly respected manufacturer of Newark, New Jersey. Two sons were born to them: George and William, both of whom chose the profession of their father; William died in Council Bluffs, Iowa, in 1892.

The early education of Dr. George O'Gorman was acquired under private instruction in Newark and in Seton Hall College, of South Orange, New Jersey, and he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, from which he was graduated in 1881 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. He then entered upon a general practice of medicine and surgery in Newark, and for six years received the patronage of many of the best families in the section of the city where he made his home. Of late years he has given much time and attention to insurance work, being connected with the home office of the Prudential Insurance Company, examiner for the New York Life Insurance Company, the Manhattan Insurance Company, the Providence Insurance Company, the Security Life and Trust Company of New York, the Colonial Life Insurance Company, the Security Life Insurance Company of Jersey City, and others. For ten years he acted in the capacity of visiting physician to St. Michael's Hospital, but the rapid growth of his insurance work compelled him to resign. On April 9, 1885, Dr. O'Gorman married Miss Rose McElroy, daughter of Patrick McElroy, ex-commissioner of charities and corrections of New York city. Their three children are: George Dudley, Rose, and William O'Gorman.

ROBERT HALL McCONNELL, M. D.—1895.

Dr. Robert Hall McConnell, of 42 West Ninety-seventh street, New York city, was born December 25, 1873, in New York city, and is the son of Edward and Catherine (Hall) McConnell. His paternal grandfather was an officer in the British army, and was stationed at Windsor Castle for a time, being accompanied by his family. It was there that Edward McConnell, the father of Dr. McConnell, was born. After reaching manhood he traveled extensively, making a tour of the world, and finally settled in the United States.

Dr. McConnell received his preparatory education in the public schools of New York, subsequently becoming a student at the College of the City of New York, and ultimately entering the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he graduated in 1895 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. After serving for eighteen months as interne in the Lebanon Hospital, he entered, in 1896, upon a career of general practice, in which he is still actively engaged. He holds the position of clinical assistant to the department of the diseases of children in the Vanderbilt Clinic. He is the author of various articles on this subject which have appeared from time to time in the medical journals.

Dr. McConnell is a member of the Society of the Alumni of Lebanon Hospital, the Medical Society of Greater New York, and the Academy of Medicine. In political sympathies and preferences he is a Republican. Dr. McConnell married Grace, daughter of Edward H. Cunningham, of New York. Mrs. McConnell is active in church work, being conspicuously identified with various benevolent and charitable organizations.

WILLIAM HENRY PORTER, M. D.—1877.

Dr. William Henry Porter, 1674 Broadway, New York city, was born September 4, 1853, in New York city, and is the son of Frederick Edward and Elizabeth Bradley (Aiken) Porter. The former was a manufacturer in Norfolk, Connecticut. Through his father Dr. Porter is descended from William de la Grande, one of William the Conqueror's knights, whose son Ralph (or Roger) became grand porter to King Henry the First, from which he derived the name of Porter. The first representative of the family in this country was John Porter, who came from England and settled in Windsor, Connecticut, about 1628.

Dr. Porter received his early education in the Connecticut public schools and at the Monson Academy, Massachusetts. He was fitted for college at the Williston Seminary, Easthampton, Massachusetts, and after spending one year at the Sheffield Scientific School of Yale, he entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, graduating in 1877. Since his graduation he has practiced his profession in New York city. He served on the staff of the Presbyterian Hospital for two years, and was curator of the institution from 1878 to 1888, holding the same position at Bellevue Hospital from 1885 to 1887. Dr. Porter also held for two years, from 1879 to 1881, the position of professor of surgery and surgical pathology at the Columbia Veterinary College. From the organization of the Post-Graduate Medical School and Hospital in 1882, he has held the position of professor of general medicine and pathology. He is also attending physician to the Post-Graduate Hospital.

Dr. Porter is a member of the New York Pathological Society, the New York Academy of Medicine, the New York County Medical Society, the Mississippi Valley Association, the Litchfield County Society of Connecticut, the New York Neurological Society, the Northwestern Medical and Surgical Society of New York, and the American Medico-Surgical Society of New York. He married, May 21, 1880, Margaret Josephine Carroll. They have two children, Frederick Phelps and William Carroll.

WILLIAM H. PORTER.

William Henry Porter, M. D., is a member of the following organizations: New York Pathological Society, New York Neurological Society, Clinical Society of the New York Post-Graduate Medical School, New York Academy of Medicine, New York County Medical Society, The Medical Association of the Greater City of New York, The Mississippi Valley Medical Association, New York Medico-Surgical Society, North Western Medical and Surgical Society, American Urological Society, American Therapeutic Society, Vermont State Medical Society, Litchfield County Medical Society of Connecticut, Litchfield County University Club of Connecticut, Alumni Association of the Presbyterian Hospital of New York, Men's League of the Broadway Tabernacle Society of New York, Twenty-seventh Assembly District Republican Club of New York, Lehigh Valley Medical Society, Alumni Association of the College of Physicians and Surgeons.

WILLIAM CHARLES HANDS, M. D.—1882.

Dr. William Charles Hands, 205 West One Hundred and Thirtieth street, New York city, was born July 9, 1857, in Brooklyn, New York, and is the son of Charles Alfred and Mary Burnham (Spencer) Hands. On the paternal side he comes of Welsh stock, while his maternal ancestors were English, and he is descended in a direct line from the Burnhams as well as from the Spencers.

Dr. Hands was educated in the public schools of Brooklyn and at the Mount Washington Collegiate School of New York. On May 16, 1882, he received from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University the degree of Doctor of Medicine. After graduation he served for a time as ambulance surgeon and as house surgeon in the Eastern District Hospital of Brooklyn. He is now visiting physician to the Workhouse and Penitentiary Hospitals, and to the hospital on Blackwell's Island. From 1895 to 1898 he held the office of city physician to prisons in New York city. Dr. Hands married, July 19, 1882, Catherine Meserole. Their children are: Charles Alfred, Adrian Meserole, May, William Charles, Jr., and Edna.

MARTIN JOHN ECHEVERRIA, M. D.—1890.

Dr. Martin John Echeverria, a successful general practitioner of New York city, was born in Panama, Colombia, October 25, 1863, a son of John Martin and Micaela (de Ycaza) Echeverria, the former named being a graduate of Begota College and Ecole de Medicine, Paris, after which he practiced his profession in Paris and Panama. They were both of Spanish origin.

Dr. Echeverria pursued an academic course in Cartagena, Colombia, and in 1897 he came to New Haven, Connecticut, entered General Russell's Collegiate and Commercial College in order to learn the English language, which he mastered in an incredibly short period of time. In the spring of 1881 he entered the Sheffield Scientific School at Yale, but at the expiration of his junior year, for family reasons, he was forced to temporarily discontinue his studies. In 1884 he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, but owing to an enforced absence in Paris, where he continued his studies, he was interrupted in his course for three years. He returned to the college in 1887, from which he was graduated in the fall of 1889, in the class of 1890, with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. He passed an internship of eighteen months in the medical division of Bellevue Hospital, and in 1892 he entered upon the active duties of his calling in New York city, where he is recognized as a reliable and successful medical practitioner. He is quick to adopt new and improved methods, and a sound judgment enables him to discern with accuracy what will really prove of benefit among the theories that are continually advanced in relation to the treatment and care of disease. In addition to his private practice he acted in the capacity of visiting physician to the French Hospital, from which he resigned in 1897; he was formerly assistant surgeon to the first surgical division of Bellevue Hospital, and at the present time (1902) is the assistant surgeon to the City Hospital. He is also the efficient instructor of genito-urinary diseases at Cornell Medical School, and he formerly occupied the same position in the Post-Graduate School; he is the attending genito-urinary surgeon to the New York Dispensary, and was the attending physician for a number of years in the children's department of outdoor patients of Bellevue Hospital.

Dr. Echeverria is prominently identified with the Kings County Medical Society, the State Medical Society, the Genito-Urinary and Dermatological Society, and the Physicians' Mutual Aid Association. Socially he is a member of the New York Athletic Club. In his religious belief he is a devout member of the Roman Catholic church.

At Liberty, Sullivan county, New York, July 30, 1884, Dr. Echeverria was united in marriage to Miss Henrietta Christina Grosz, of New York. They have one child, Frederick Echeverria, aged sixteen years.

NEIL JAMIESON HEPBURN, M. D.—1868.

Dr. Neil Jamieson Hepburn, a long established physician of New York city, is descended from a long line of Scotch ancestors, and was born October 8, 1846, in Orkney, Scotland. He is the son of David and Janet (Thearen) Hepburn, who came to America during the childhood of their son. He received his primary education in the public schools of New York city, subsequently becoming a student at the New York Free Academy, now the College of the City of New York, from which he graduated with the degree of Master of Arts. He matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, and was awarded the Harsen Medal ($150 prize), as recorded in the New York Hospital Reports for 1866. While a student Dr. Hepburn studied shorthand, in which art he acquired sufficient skill to take extensive notes of the lectures which he attended, and also served for one year as chemical clerk for Dr. Thomas. He graduated in the class of 1868, and entered upon the private practice of his profession at 547 Broome street, New York city, where he remained until 1873, when he removed to Irvington, New York, and in 1877 to Freehold, New Jersey; he returned in 1882 to New York city, where he has since resided on Eighty-third street, between Fifth and Ninth avenues. In all the different places in which he has resided Dr. Hepburn has been well and favorably known as a skillful and conscientious practitioner. Since 1883 he has devoted himself to the work of a specialist in diseases of the eye and ear.

Dr. Hepburn's hospital appointments have been extremely numerous. He has served at different times as instructor to the Ophthalmic New York Polyclinic, president of the medical board, consulting ophthalmic surgeon to Randall's Island Hospital, and from 1884 to 1887, assistant in the Eye and Ear Clinical College of the University. For the same period he served as attending surgeon in the eye and ear department of the Demilt Dispensary and from 1883 to 1888 filled the position of assistant in the examining clinic of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, under Dr. Agnew. In 1883 he was appointed clinical assistant in the Manhattan Eye and Ear Hospital, in 1885 assistant surgeon in the same institution, and in 1893 surgeon and doctor in the above named hospital, which position he still occupies. Upon the death of Dr. Noyes in 1900, Dr. Hepburn was appointed ophthalmologist to the Lincoln Hospital and Home. The contributions of Dr. Hepburn to medical literature have consisted of various articles on ophthalmology and otology, of which the most important is one published in the Medical Record for October, 1884, on "The Physiological Effects of Cocaine."

Dr. Hepburn has been for many years a member of the New York County Medical Society, the New York State Society, the New York County Medical Association, and the New York State Medical Association. He belongs to the American Medical Association, the New York Ophthalmological Society, the New York Otological Society, the American Ophthalmological Society, the American Otological Society, and the Medico-Surgical Society. He also fills the position of physician to the Mutual Aid Society. Dr. Hepburn is a member of several fraternal orders, including the Knights of Honor, the Caledonian Club, the Order of Scottish Clans, Albion Lodge No. 36, F. and A. M., and Constitution Chapter, R. A. M., York Commandery, K. P., New York Consistory, Scottish Rite, and the Ancient Arabic Order of the Mystic Shrine. Dr. Hepburn is a very active and prominent member of the Masonic Order, having held the position of senior warden in Albion Lodge, and received the Royal Arch degrees in Constitution Chapter, in which he has been elected high priest. In York Commandery he has held the office of captain general, and has proved one of the most active of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. In all these positions Dr. Hepburn has proved a model official, and may truly be called an active working member of the fraternity in the best sense of the term. In the Knights of Honor he holds the rank of past dictator, and in the Order of Scottish Clans he held the office of chief of Clan McKenzie, in addition to being for a term the royal deputy of the order in New York state. He is a member of the West Twelfth Street Reformed Presbyterian church.

Although without a military record in the sense of having seen active service, Dr. Hepburn has not been without military associations, having, as early as 1865, served in the sanitary commission of the United States, and having been, from 1866 to 1873, a member of the Eighty-fourth Regiment, National Guard, State of New York. Dr. Hepburn married in New York city, May 5, 1869, Lucinda Pettit, of New York city, and has two sons: David S., who is engaged in business as a carpenter and builder; and William.

HENRY RUTGERS BALDWIN, M. D.—1853.

Dr. Henry R. Baldwin, deceased, was born in New York city, September 18, 1829, a son of the Rev. Eli Baldwin, M. D., D. D., and Phoebe Van Nest Baldwin. His ancestors on the paternal side were among the original settlers of the state of Connecticut in 1639, and on the maternal side he traces his origin to natives of Holland.

In early life Dr. Baldwin came to New Brunswick, New Jersey, with his parents and enrolled as a pupil in the grammar school connected with Rutgers College, which he subsequently entered, and he graduated with honors in 1849, when he received the degree of Master of Arts; in 1893 the college conferred upon him the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws, a rare honor among medical men. Shortly after his graduation he began the study of medicine with Dr. George J. Janeway, of New Brunswick, and later with Drs. Willard Parker and Robert Watts, of New York city. In 1850 he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, and received his degree of Doctor of Medicine from that institution in 1853. The following six months he acted as clinical assistant to Dr. Robert Watts, professor of anatomy in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, and he also served as a resident physician at Bellevue Hospital for eighteen months, being a member of the medical staff. In October, 1854, he commenced the practice of his profession at Stapleton, Staten Island, in the capacity of assistant to Dr. William C. Anderson. He was compelled to resign from this position on account of failing health, after which he became surgeon of the steamship Baltic, of the Collins line, plying between New York and Liverpool. In December, 1855, Dr. Baldwin began his professional work in New Brunswick, his practice increasing rapidly from year to year, and on October 1, 1883, he associated with himself in practice his son, Dr. A. Van Nest Baldwin, and this partnership continued until the death of his son, on February 14, 1897. Dr. Baldwin always took a deep interest in the work and progress of the medical profession, and in the intercourse with the members of the profession he was considerate and obliging, ever willing to sacrifice time and comfort, especially in helping the younger members.

Dr. Baldwin was also a conservative practitioner, not willing to abandon old methods of practice which had given perfectly satisfactory results, unless new theories and methods commended themselves to his judgment as scientific and rational. Especially was this the case in his practice of surgery; he did not believe in the tendency of these later years to the "too free use of the knife." Dr. Baldwin lived a life of ceaseless activity, being a member of many societies and organizations which claimed his constant attention.

HENRY R. BALDWIN.

Before these he read many papers of interest. Less than three weeks before his death he delivered before the Phi Beta Kappa society, of which he was a member, a paper on "Longevity." He was also a member of the Middlesex County District Medical Society, of which he was secretary in 1857, and president in 1862 and 1864; was frequently appointed one of its delegates to the state society, and three times to the American Medical Association. He was also an active and esteemed member of the Medical Society of New Jersey, was its treasurer from 1866 to 1874; finding its treasury overdrawn he inaugurated the creation of a fund which amounted to more than thirteen hundred dollars; in 1874 he was honored by election to the office of third vice president of the society, advancing to second vice president in 1875, and first vice president in 1876; in June, 1877, he was elected president of the society, serving one year, and thereafter became a fellow of the society, since which time he served fourteen years as chairman of the business committee, and for several years as a member of the Fellows' Prize Essay committee, of which he was chairman for two years. He was also connected with the Society of Internes of Bellevue Hospital, New York city; of the American Academy of Medicine, the American Medical Association, a member and trustee of the New Jersey State Microscopical Society, the New Jersey Sanitary Association, and a member of its executive council. On June 17, 1884, he was nominated by the Alumni Association, and elected a trustee of Rutgers College for five years, and re-elected for a like term in 1889; on March 6, 1894, he was elected by the board of trustees one of its life members. In May, 1897, he was appointed by Governor Griggs a member of the board of managers of the State Hospital for the Insane at Trenton, and acted as chairman of the medical committee of the board. For more than twenty-five years he served as surgeon of the Pennsylvania Railroad for this section; was president of the medical staff of the John Wells Memorial Hospital at New Brunswick, from its organization in 1889 until his death. He was chosen president of the city board of health soon after its organization, and continued such until his death, and the successful prosecution of its work was in large measure due to his watchful oversight and prompt and decisive action in times of threatening or prevailing epidemics.

During Dr. Baldwin's professional life in New Brunswick of more than forty-six years, about fifty students entered the profession from his office, several of whom are practicing medicine in this city, county or state. The numerous demands upon his time and service did not prevent him from taking an active part in all questions that related to society and the public good. He was for two terms a member of the board of aldermen, and also of the county board of freeholders, was active in the establishment and management of the city water works, serving for twelve years as a member of the board of water commissioners. He was also a member of the city board of education for seventeen years, and its treasurer from 1859 to 1861. In politics he was a firm and ardent Democrat of the best type, loving country and right above party, and frequently voting for a Republican where he could not conscientiously vote for his party's candidate. He was instrumental in the organization of the City Club, of which he was the active leader, and in this capacity fought jobbery, corruption and dishonor in political matters. Dr. Baldwin united with the Second Reformed church of New Brunswick in 1853, served his church several times as deacon and elder, and was a liberal contributor to religious institutions and benevolent organizations.

On December 27, 1855, Dr. Baldwin married Elizabeth Van Cortlandt Rutgers, daughter of Anthony Rutgers, of Belleville, New Jersey. Their children were: Cornelia Rutgers, who died at the age of eight years; A. Van Nest, who received the degree of Bachelor of Arts from Rutgers College in 1879, that of Master of Arts from the same institution in 1882, and the same year graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons with the degree of Doctor of Medicine; he served an internship of one year in the Charity Hospital of New York, and subsequently entered into practice with his father; he was a member of the Middlesex County District Medical Society, the New Jersey State Medical Society, and acted in the capacity of secretary and inspector of the New Brunswick board of health; his death occurred in 1897, he being then thirty-eight years old. Margaret Bayard, Henry Rutgers, George Van Nest, Elizabeth Rutgers, Charles Rutgers, who died at the age of six years; and Gerard Van Cortlandt Baldwin, who died at the age of four years. The mother of these children died September 17, 1888, survived by her husband, who passed away February 3, 1902. The funeral services were held in the Second Reformed church of New Brunswick, which was crowded to its utmost capacity, several fellows of the State Medical Society and other prominent physicians from the state and New York city being present. The members of the Middlesex County Society attended in a body, and at a meeting held on February 6, 1902, unanimously adopted resolutions expressing their profound sorrow for the death of Dr. Baldwin, an old and honored member of the society. The exercises were conducted by Dr. Hutton and Dr. Cooper.

NELSON HERRICK HENRY, M. D.—1879.

Nelson Herrick Henry, M. D., physician and surgeon, at 48 West Eleventh street, New York, a member of the state assembly, was born on Staten Island, New York, April 27, 1855, son of Joshua J. and Maria Caroline (Herrick) Henry, and is of Dutch-English ancestry. He received his early education in private and public schools in New York city, afterwards attending the College of the City of New York. He entered upon the study of medicine at the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York in 1876, and graduated with the degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1879. He served as interne to Roosevelt Hospital until 1880, as interne to the Nursery and Child's Hospital during the following year, and then began the practice of his profession in New York city.

He is attending surgeon at Trinity Hospital and physician-in-charge of the gynecological class in the outdoor department of New York Hospital. He was commissioned assistant surgeon in the National Guard of the state of New York in 1893, and in 1898 was made colonel on the staff of Major-General Roe. On the outbreak of the war with Spain, Dr. Henry was made division surgeon in the Second Division, Fourth Army Corps, and served until the suspension of hostilities, when he was honorably discharged. He is a Republican in politics, and in 1898 was elected as the nominee of his party to the state assembly. He is a member of the Republican, Army and Navy and Racquet and Tennis clubs. In January, 1902 he was appointed adjutant general of the state of New York by Governor Odell.

JOHN BENTLEY SQUIER, JR., M. D.—1894.

Dr. John Bentley Squier, Jr., 20 East Forty-sixth street, New York city, was born November 6, 1873, in New York city, and is the son of J. Bentley and Adelaide (Lurn) Squier. The former is a well known real estate operator. Dr. Squier was educated in private schools of New York city, and in Halsey's Collegiate School, and then entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he graduated in 1894 as a Doctor of Medicine. For four years he served in both the medical and surgical divisions of St. Luke's Hospital, and for three months was one of the internes at the Sloane Maternity Hospital. He has since been engaged in private practice in association with Dr. L. Bolton Bangs, making a specialty of genito-urinary surgery. He is attending surgeon at the New York Almshouse Hospital, and has been for two years chief of the surgical clinic at St. Mary's Free Hospital for Children.

Dr. Squier is the inventor of several instruments intended for use in genito-urinary surgery, of which the following may be specially mentioned: A surgical table, known as "Squier's portable operating table;" a pocket catheter sterilizer; the combined Frendelemburgh bladder pump and searcher; a complete portable operating outfit.

Dr. Squier is a member of the New York Academy of Medicine, the County Medical Society, the Medical Society of Greater New York, St. Luke's Alumni Society, and the Society of Sloane Maternity Hospital. He belongs to St. John's Dramatic Society, the Actors' Church Alliance, the Psi Upsilon fraternity, the Knickerbocker Athletic Club, the Nassau Boat Club, and the Indian Harbor Yacht Club, yachting being the form of recreation which he most enjoys.

JOHN MILTON DEXTER, M. D.—1894.

Dr. John Milton Dexter, of New York city, was born in Chemung county, New York, April 20, 1868, and is the son of John Milton and Mary Cynthia (Billings) Dexter. He is descended from old colonial stock, the founder of the American branch of the family having emigrated from England to the Boston colony in the early days of that settlement. Among his paternal ancestors was Samuel Dexter, who was secretary of the treasury and secretary of war during the administrations of John Adams and of Thomas Jefferson, and who was also a member of the United States senate and house of representatives.

In his boyhood Dr. Dexter attended the public schools of Elmira, New York, afterward becoming a student at Phillips Exeter Academy. He matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he graduated in 1894 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. After graduation he served for a year in the different hospitals of New York, and since 1895 has been engaged in general practice in that city.

Dr. Dexter is a member of the New York County Medical Society, the American Medical Association, the New York County Medical Association, and the New York State Medical Association. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and has taken the capitular degrees. His political principles are those advocated and upheld by the Republican party. Dr. Dexter married, September 14, 1893, Adela Catherine MacMillan, of Nova Scotia.

EDWARD QUINTARD, M. D.—1887.

Dr. Edward Quintard, of New York city, traces his ancestry from 1669, when Pierre Quintard, a Huguenot, came to this country and settled in New York city. The original baptismal records of the Quintard family can be seen in the church De St. L'Esprit, in New York. Members of the family were noted for bravery during the Colonial and Revolutionary wars, and several of their number served as officers, among them Isaac Quintard, grandfather of Dr. Edward Quintard, who was captain of a company of militia.

Edward A. Quintard, father of Dr. Edward Quintard, was born in Stamford, Connecticut, where he received an excellent education in the collegiate institution of Rev. Dr. Todd, a noted educator. Later Mr. Quintard removed to New York and became one of the prominent financiers of the city. He was elected president of the Citizens' Savings Bank, which position he filled for many years; he was president of the St. Nicholas Club, a fellow of the National Academy, an early member of the Union League, of the Colonial Order, an officer in the New England Society, and was captain of the Seventy-first Regiment during the war of the rebellion. He married Miss Mary Skiddy, who was a descendant of an old and honored English family, a daughter of William Skiddy, whose family name was William Taylor, he having adopted the name of Skiddy from his stepfather, and who was closely related to President Zachary Taylor. George W. Quintard, brother of Edward A. Quintard, is the president of the Quintard Iron Works, and Right Rev. Charles Todd Quintard, a well known bishop of the Protestant Episcopal church, another brother, studied medicine and took his degree at Bellevue Hospital, from which he was graduated, and for a number of years he served as professor of physiology at Charlestown; later he was appointed bishop of Tennessee and chancellor of the University of the South.

Dr. Edward Quintard was born in Stamford, Connecticut, January 21, 1866. In his early youth he went abroad and resided in Germany, France, and England, and his education was acquired mostly under private tutors.

Edward Hunter
H

In 1881 he returned to New York, and matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, in 1883, from which he was graduated in 1887. While a student in the college he acted as clinical assistant to Dr. Henry B. Sands and Dr. James W. McLane, and was also chief prosector under Dr. Thomas S. Sabine. He served an internship in St. Luke's Hospital, but resigned after being there several months, in order to enter the Nursery and Children's Hospital. He then went to Europe and devoted his time to walking the hospitals in Berlin, Munich, Vienna and Paris; in the meantime he prosecuted his studies in internal medicine and derived much valuable aid from Dr. Brown-Sequard, who was a relative. He was a practical, earnest and conscientious student, and his further advancement was assured by these qualities. He returned to New York, where he entered upon general practice. Dr. Quintard has served as chief of the out-patient department of St. Mary's Hospital for Children for a number of years, clinical assistant in the department of diseases of the digestive system at the Post-Graduate Medical School and Hospital, later as instructor in general medicine, then professor of general medicine, and also attending physician to the same institution.

He is prominently connected with the Columbia College Alumni Association, St. Luke's Alumni Association, the New York State Medical Association, the American Gastro-Enterological Society, a fellow of the New York Academy of Medicine, the New York County Medical Society, and honorary member of the Omega Society of the College of Physicians and Surgeons. He is also actively connected with the St. Nicholas Club, the St. Nicholas Society, in which he is an officer, the Colonial Order, the New York Historical Society, the New York Zoological Society. Literature is, after his profession, his favorite pursuit, and he is particularly interested in the Society for Literary Knowledge, which owes its existence to his effort. Dr. Quintard's medical writings have, for the most part, dealt with the diseases of the digestive system. On June 5, 1894, Dr. Quintard married, in New York city, Miss Estelle F. Hayden, a native of New York. She was the daughter of William B. Hayden, and granddaughter of Peter Hayden.

HENRY MACLEAN CRAWFORD, M. D.—1896.

Dr. Henry M. Crawford, 360 West Thirtieth street, New York city, assistant surgeon of the Manhattan Eye and Ear Hospital, was born in Ireland, in 1861, the son of Robert and Margaret (Caveney) Crawford. He acquired his preliminary education at grammar school No. 35 (Thirteenth Street high school, New York city), and being of a studious disposition he soon became proficient enough in his studies to pass the examination which qualified him for admission to the College of the city of New York. Not being able to take advantage of this opportunity, he attended the night session of grammar school No. 35, also the New York Preparatory School, and in 1893 passed the regent examination for admission to the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, graduating from that institution in 1896 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. The following three years he attended the medical department of the Vanderbilt Clinic, being under the personal supervision of Dr. Sumner. After the expiration of this period of time Dr. Crawford established an office in New York city, and in addition to his private practice he served as instructor of diseases of the ear at the New York Post-Graduate School, receiving the appointment in 1898, and as assistant surgeon at the Manhattan Eye and Ear Hospital, being appointed to that position in 1900.

For several years previous to his taking up the study of medicine, Dr. Crawford acted in the capacity of purser in the service of the United States and Brazil Mail and Steam Ship Company, also the New York and Cuba Mail Steam Ship Company, and while sojourning in Havana contracted yellow fever. In November, 1898, he met with a serious accident, both wheels of a carriage passing over his abdomen, the concussion causing a fracture at the base of the brain; he was removed to the New York Hospital, where he fully recovered from the injury under the skillful treatment of two of the most eminent surgeons in New York city, Professors Weir and Bull. Dr. Crawford is a prominent member of the Masonic fraternity, serving as senior warden of Hiram Lodge No. 449. He is also a member of St. Peter's Protestant Episcopal church, situated on West Twentieth street, New York city. His chief diversions during his hours of leisure are walking, the perusal of good literature, and attendance at the theater.

ERNEST LINWOOD HAYFORD, M. D.—1890.

Ernest Linwood Hayford, M. D., was born in Milford, Massachusetts, February 18, 1865, and is a son of Ira and Calista (Johnson) Hayford, the former of whom was born in the same state and became a prominent boot and shoe manufacturer. The mother was born in Sharon, Massachusetts. The Hayford family can be traced back to the twelfth century in the annals of English history, while later one of its representatives served in the American Revolution.

Dr. Hayford received his literary education in the public schools of Milford and Woburn, and entered the medical department of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Columbia University, from which he was graduated in 1890. Prior to entering upon his medical career he was a pharmacist for several years. After his graduation Dr. Hayford was medical director of the Chicago Young Men's Christian Association, having charge of the athletic department, and was also instructor in the training school of the same association, taking the measurements of the men and training them along physiological lines. He was also instructor of physical diagnosis in the Chicago Post-Graduate School; was life insurance examiner for various companies, and is now chief examiner of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, and still continues in general practice.

Socially Dr. Hayford is a prominent Mason, and politically is a Republican. Professionally he is a member of the Chicago Medical Society, the Illinois State Medical Society, the American Medical Association, the Mississippi Valley Medical Association, Chicago Therapeutical Club, American Roentgen Ray Society, Chicago Academy of Science, and he is a profound student of natural history, being greatly interested in ornithology, and possesses a very fine library upon the creatures of out of door life.

On November 15, 1892, Dr. Hayford was united in marriage with Mary L. Knowlton, a native of Woburn; she is a graduate of Wellesley College, and prior to her marriage was a teacher in a high school. She is a daughter of Amos Knowlton, a tanner of Woburn. Two children have been born to Dr. and Mrs. Hayford, namely: Ruth, born November 27, 1893; and Arthur Wellesley, born May 13, 1895. The offices of Dr. Hayford are beautifully appointed and furnished with every modern appliance known to the medical profession for assisting him in his large and steadily increasing practice.

EDMUND JANES PALMER, A. M., M. D.—1881.

Dr. Edmund J. Palmer, 103 West Eighty-sixth street, New York city, one of the state commissioners of quarantine, son of Abraham M. and Sarah A. (Knowles) Palmer, was prepared for college at the Wyoming Seminary, Kingston, Pennsylvania, and entered Wesleyan University—fall of 1874, graduating in 1878 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts, and subsequently receiving the degree of Master of Arts from the same institution. Immediately after his graduation he matriculated at the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, graduating in 1881 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. In 1895 he was appointed a member of the state commission of quarantine, which position he filled for six years; since then he has been engaged in the private practice of his profession in New York city. On October 20, 1886, Dr. Palmer married Blanche Shove. Their children are: Lena S., born August 30, 1887; and Blanche S. Palmer, born March 14, 1889. Both Dr. Palmer and his wife are members of St Paul's Methodist church of New York city.

FREDERICK DEY MARSHALL, M. D.—1868.

Frederick Dey Marshall, physician and surgeon of Chicago, Illinois, is the son of parents who were pioneers of the state of Michigan. Charles Marshall, his father, was a native of Connecticut, and in early life removed to Allegany county, New York, and thence to Adrian, Lenawee county, Michigan, making the journey with the customary ox team of the settler of that time. Charles Marshall's wife was Mary Pruden, a native of Morristown, New Jersey.

Dr. Marshall was born at Adrian, Michigan, June 14, 1841. The first eighteen years of his life were spent on his father's farm, and he gained the rudiments of his education in the country district schools of Adrian township. He was then a pupil at the grammar and high school of Adrian, and then entered Adrian College. In his sophomore year he left the latter and taught school during 1860-1, in the latter year taking up the study of medicine at Adrian. In 1862 came the call to sterner duty. He enlisted in the Seventeenth Michigan Volunteers and was in the army until the close of the war in the spring of 1865, when he was mustered out. He served first as a private and was then made corporal. At the siege of Knoxville, Tennessee, in November, 1863, he was captured and not released till September, 1864. During this time he was confined in Libby Prison, and for several months dressed the wounds of the Union prisoners, gaining some practical experience in the profession for which he afterward fitted himself. In 1865 he resumed the study of medicine for two years at the University of Michigan, and then at the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, where he received his degree on March 6, 1868, and on March 25 following was admitted to the ad eundem degree at the University of Michigan. During the past seven years Dr. Marshall has been instructor in obstetrics in Harvey Medical College in Chicago, and he enjoys a profitable and high-class practice in that city.

Dr. Marshall has held membership in the Presbyterian church for the greater part of thirty-five years, and his political belief is that of the Republican party. December 8, 1868, he was married to Miss Sarah E. Edwards, of Adrian, Michigan; her father was a farmer of Lenawee county, and was one of the earliest settlers there. Mr. F. B. Marshall, who is the oldest child of Dr. Marshall, was born October 14, 1869, and is a graduate in law from the University of Michigan. Miss Carrie E. Marshall, born December 5, 1871, is engaged in teaching music. Miss Stella, born in November, 1873, is a graduate in the literary department of the University of Michigan. Lincoln E., the youngest of the four children, was born in November, 1875, and is now an electrical engineer, having been educated at the Armour Institute in Chicago.
